Council Changes Names

In a special meeting of the City Council Monday evening at the city administration building, the council voted to change the name of the Board of Public Works office to the Sikeston Light and Water Office.

The name of the governing Board of Directors was changed to the Board of Municipal Utilities, and E. R. Inman, whose former title was manager is now called director.

Only the terminology was changed. The functions of the office, the board and the director remain the same.

Miller said the names were changed, mainly because it was a misnomer as applied to the utility office.

Miller also noted that he probably would create a department of public works to include the functions of the street department, plus the construction of storm sewers, and electrical, plumbing inspection and building inspections.

The city passed a resolution to show support of the proposal of Sun Airline Corp. to provide commuter passenger service at the Sikeston Municipal Airport.

The council also agreed to allow the Downtown Merchants Association to block off Front Street from Kingshighway to Stoddard and New Madrid Street from Malone to Center streets Aug. 10 and 11 for a sidewalk sale during the Bootheel Rodeo.

An ordinance accepting the incorporation of the city's housing ordinance into the municipal code of the city was passed. The housing ordinance had not been included through an oversight previously.

Six final ordinances accepting work done on resurfacing of streets and calling for the issuance of tax bills to property owners were passed. The ordinance were for the following streets:

1. Installation of 6" soil cement with curb and gutter on both sides of Gladys St. from Pine to Ingram.

2. Application of 2" hot mix asphalt surface to a 7" soil cement base to Ingram Road from Ables road north to the existing pavement.

3. Application of 1-1/2" hot mix asphalt to a 6' soil cement base, and installation of curb and guttering on both sides of Kendall Street from Handy street to South West street.

4. Application of 1-1/2" hot asphalt mix to a 6" soil cement base and installation of curb and guttering on both sides of Lee street from Jaycee street to a point 700 feet east.

5. Application of 1-1/2" hot asphalt mix to a 6" soil cement base on Oklahoma street from Missouri to Broadway.

6. Application of 1-1/2" hot asphalt mix to Warner Street from Hardin to Murray Lane.

Bids were received for a project to widen Greer street by six feet on the north side from Main to Pine. Cowan-Holman Construction Co. submitted the low bid of $6,925.50. Other bids received on the project were: Flaire Ferrell, $7,749.60, and Bob Patterson of Central Contractors, $10,080.

Flaire Ferrell submitted the low bid on a project to install curb and guttering on both sides of Smith Avenue from Main to Ingram. His bid was $9,947.70. Other bids on the project were: Bob Patterson, $10,750, and Cowan-Holman, $10,118.40.

The council also approved the application of a transfer of a 5 per cent beer license from Ira Woods to C.D. Russell, operator of "Russell's Bulldog Inn." The establishment formerly was called "Ira & Louise's."

In other action, the council passed a resolution calling for the application of blade mix asphalt surfacing to Watson street from Lillian drive east to the existing pavement at a cost of 50 cents per square foot.

Agreement also was reached on a proposal that the city and the Chamber of Commerce have a joint membership represent Sikeston on the SEMO toll road association.

Teachers Will Study New Charleston High School

CHARLESTON -- Team teaching training programs will be held at the new 1,000 - student high school commencing Monday Supt. Thomas U. Wells of the Charleston R-1 school district announced.

The Monday through Friday sessions will continue through Aug. 11.

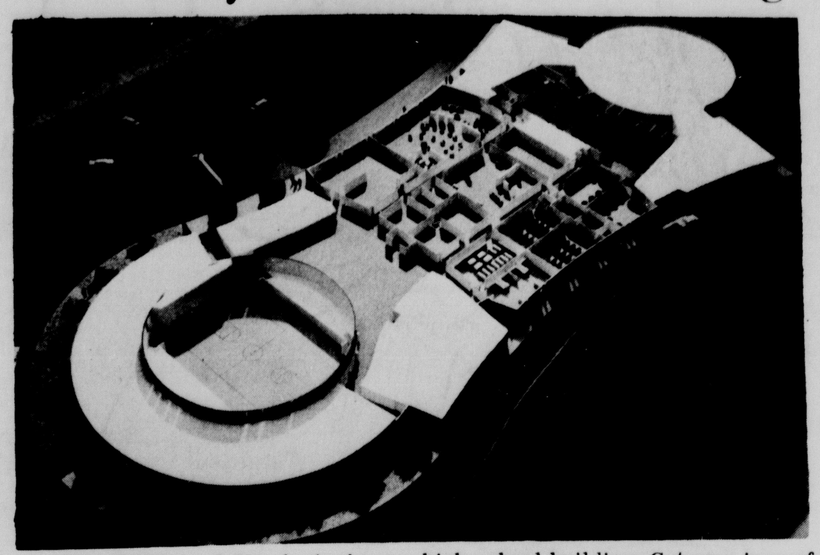
Academic area workshops for junior and senior high school teachers will be held at the high school, beginning Aug. 21.

A kindergarten building near the high school will be the location for elementary teacher in-service training sessions.

Topics for the sessions will be: modern mathematics, July 31-Aug. 11) led by William Heck, director of mathematics for the Robinsdale, Minn., schools; and science, Aug. 14-25, led by Dr. Gordon Bliss of Southern Illinois University, Edwardsville.

Session leaders for the high school training programs will include Dr. Dale Snook, Lincoln, University of Nebraska, physical education; Dr. Milton Beckman, University of Nebraska, mathematics, Dr. Gerald Abegg, Kansas State College, Science; Ray Trenholm, University of Omaha, Music; John Patterson, Jefferson City, Missouri, state department of education, special education; Richard Stokes, Missouri state department of education, Art; Dr. William Frank, Cape Girardeau, Southeast Missouri State College, language arts and Ted Rohr, Southeast Missouri State College, Audio - Visual.

Dr. J. Lloyd Trump, Washington, D.C., associate secretary of the National Association of secondary school principals, will address the conferring teachers Aug. 10.



SCALE MODEL of Charleston's new high school building. Cutaway in roof shows interior arrangement.

Charleston R-1 School district administrators responsible for coordination of the conference include Superintendent Wells, Assistant Superintendents Louis W. Chaney and Bill E. Sellers, and Federal Coordinator Frank A. Hudson. Other conference participants will include Mrs. Mabel McLaughlin and Ronald Miller, team teachers from Seattle, Wash.; and Dr. Donald Hair, assistant superintendent of schools, Kansas City.

The conference will include general sessions, film showings, panel discussions, small group meetings and individual work sessions. A prime purpose of the conference is to acquaint teaching staff members with the extraordinarily high number of progressive and innovative features contained in Charleston's new high school, and to suggest how such features can improve the quality and extent of meaningful teacher - student relationships. The revolutionary new building will itself be the subject of study.

The new high school, designed by Pearce and Pearce, Inc., school architects headquartered in St. Louis, is the product of combined efforts of Charleston school administrators, the architects, and the school planning laboratory of the college of education of the University of Tennessee at Knoxville.

"Unusual as the school may appear, however, it is not an experimental building," Superintendent Wells reports. "Rather, it incorporates most if not all of the most advanced thinking about the functionally effective high school both for today and well into the twenty-first century."

Advancements cited by Wells include team teaching, focusing on the individual, large group instruction, extensive use individual study, promotion of outstanding teacher - student relationships, tracking, variable block scheduling, provision for a student activity period as part of each week's schedule, a closed campus lunch, emphasis on English and social studies, enrichment of the curriculum, provision of resource centers accessible at all times during the school day, stress on quality instruction, elimination of study halls as such, and attention to aesthetics as well as effective function of the building.

The new high school is carpeted and air conditioned. For maximum flexibility, it contains virtually no interior bearing walls; spaces are instead defined by means of movable furniture and equipment. There are few doors inside the building, since students and teachers will be moving frequently from one study area to another. There are virtually no windows. Specially designed electrically powered heat pumps provide year round climate control.

Charleston R-1 School District board members are: James C. Moreton, president; Robert C. Jackson, vice - president; and Robert G. DeLaney, Mrs. W. Clifton Banta, Dennis Quertermous and Miss Helen Currin, members.

Trains Rolling Again As President Signs Back-to-Work Law

WASHINGTON (AP) — The first nationwide rail strike in 20 years ended and trains began moving today after a two-day leup was broken by a federal back-to-work law.

The new law signed by President Johnson Monday night after hasty enactment by Congress requires compulsory settlement if necessary to end a long dispute over wages.

The word to stop the strike spread rapidly across the country after the President acted. Pickets began withdrawing a short time later and many of the commuter trains in big metropolitan areas resumed operations.

A few traffic snarls remained but for the most part officials reported vital materials needed in Vietnam were back on the rails and passenger trains that were halted by the strike took up their journeys where they left off Sunday.

The leaders of six striking shopcraft unions ordered members to heed the back-to-work law.

The White House said Labor Secretary W. Willard Wirtz conferred with leaders of all six unions and afterwards J.E. "Doc" Wolfe, chief negotiator for the railroads, said he was informed the unions ordered membership compliance with the law.

But an official of the Southern Railway said it obtained a court order today enjoining a continuaance of the strike after workers set up additional picket lines.

The Southern Railway spokesman said Judge Frank W. Wilson of the U.S. District Court in Chattanooga, Tenn., issued the order and set a hearing on it for Wednesday morning. Picket lines were reported crumbling elsewhere following enactment of the measure.

"This will enable the products of our farms and factories to move freely once more," said President Johnson in signing the law Congress hastily passed Monday to end the first nationwide rail walkout in 20 years.

"It will permit vitally needed arms and supplies to be sent to our fighting forces in Vietnam — without interruption," Johnson said.

It also requires a government-imposed settlement of the wage dispute if unions and management don't reach their own agreement within 90 days.

A union leader angrily called the law "the strike-breaking act of 1967" but members of six shopcraft unions began obeying it by returning to work a little more than 48 hours after the strike began.

Union Pacific and Great Northern railroad officials said pickets were withdrawn, and a union official said strikers were ready to return to their jobs on the Burlington Railroad.

But pickets remained in many cities, where strikers said they were awaiting official word from their union chiefs before going back to their jobs.

Machinists' official J.A. Nesbett of Pine Bluff, Ark., said it would take a federal court order to get his men back to work.

Even where a quick return to work was expected, railroad officials weren't sure they could get commuter trains running in time for the morning rush of passengers.

The law forbids resumption of any strike for the 90 days in which a White House board will seek a voluntary settlement, and the board could extend this as late as Jan. 1, 1969, by invoking the compulsory settlement provision. The board could also impose a mandatory settlement for a shorter period.

Some 137,000 machinists, electricians, boilermakers, carmen and firemen and oilers seek wage hikes of 6.5 per cent this year and 5 per cent next year, plus 12.5 cents per hour each year for higher skilled men.

They now average $2.94 per hour, with skilled men getting an average $3.05.

The railroads' last reported offer was a 6 per cent wage hike over 18 months plus one 5-cent hike for skilled workers.

Johnson has not yet appointed the five-man board, but said it will be a blue-ribbon panel subservient to neither labor nor management.

The strike shunted hundreds of thousands of train commuters to other transportation, left thousands of freight car loads of perishable foods in danger of rotting on railroad sidings, kept harried postal clerks busy shifting mail to planes and trucks and blocked shipments of ammunition and other war goods destined for Vietnam.

Some firms dependent on rail shipments shut their doors for lack of supplies.

The strike, virtually 100 per cent effective, spurred Congress into passing the law it had haggled over for more than a month. The Senate previously passed the measure as presented by the White House, but the House knocked out the provision for compulsory settlement if a voluntary agreement couldn't be reached.

Congress twice previously had ordered strike delays in the year-old wage dispute.

Despite the pre-strike indecision of Congress, the law sailed through quickly Monday under the pressure of what Senate Republican Leader Everett M. Dirksen called "the chastening and sobering" reality of the nationwide walkout.

Only a few members in the House and Senate urged a law to end the strike without the provision for a compulsory settlement if that becomes necessary.

Former Brazilian President Killed

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — Former President Humberto Castello Branco was killed today in the collision of a Brazilian air force jet and a small private plane in which he was a passenger, the National Security Council announced.

It said the 66-year-old retired army m 1, who took over the government in a military coup in 1964, died near Fortaleza in his home state of Ceara, in northeast Brazil.

Great London, including the 28 metropolitan boroughs, comprises 443, 455 acres. The original old city consists of 675 acres.

U.S. Seeks to Arrange Neutral POW Inspection

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States has asked the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong to permit neutral inspection of their prisoners of war.

Voicing concern over the treatment of some 180 captured U.S. soldiers and civilians, the White House said claims "of the National Liberation Front and the North Vietnamese that they are treated humanely" cannot be verified because neutral observers have not been allowed to visit the prisoners.

The statement Monday said more than 20 Americans are believed held prisoner by the Viet Cong, or National Liberation Front. More than 160 U.S. servicemen, mostly airmen, are known to be imprisoned in North Vietnam.

The White House also urged return of sick and wounded prisoners under terms of the Geneva Convention on prisoners of war.

The statement suggested that the International Committee of the Red Cross, which it said inspects prisoners taken by U.S. or South Vietnamese forces, should be allowed to visit captured American personnel.

Meanwhile eight House Republicans, who last week urged a step by step de-escalation of the Vietnam war, said, "We are not yet convinced that Hanoi has no interest in peace."

"But we are convinced," Rep. F. Bradford Morse, R-Mass., told the House, "that the possibility has not been tested by creative and sensitive U.S. diplomacy."

Their proposal calls for stopping all bombing north of the 21st Parallel for 60 days. If Hanoi responded with a similar de-escalation, bombing then would be stopped north of the 20th Parallel and so on through five steps.

Three Cellmates Blamed For Setting Prison Fire

MILTON, Fla. (AP) — Convicts under shotgun guard have testified that three cellmates deliberately set the prison fire that burned 37 inmates to death.

Among those who died were the three accused of setting the blaze.

As the formal inquest into the Sunday night fire at State Prison Road Camp 12 at Jay, Fla., started in Santa Rosa County Courthouse, 22 bodies sacked in olive drab body bags lay outside the old county jail awaiting positive identification.

The coroner's inquest will decide if criminal negligence or homicide was involved in the tragedy.

On the table before County Judge Mahlon McCall Monday were the prison files of all 51 men who had been in the locked and barred barracks at Camp 12. Of the 51, eight were in the county jail unharmed, six were in hospitals with burns and 37 had perished.

The convicts testified that it was about six minutes after the fire started before guard A.O. Lovett unlocked the barred "cage door" and a solid wooden door to let them flee.

Lovett took the stand and testified that a smashing, shouting disturbance broke out first and he ran to toss the keys over a high barbed-wire fence to guard Richard E. Cobb, who used them to unlock the prison arsenal.

"We had to get longer guns," Lovett said.

When he saw the fire and returned, Lovett said, "I made four passes before I could open the door. It was so hot I had trouble seeing."

Convict Roy G. Regan, 26, said, "I heard the screaming. That's when I looked up and saw the whole wall was afire and it started to roll down the ceiling at me."

Regan and the other prisoner witnesses, some of whom came to court shirtless, others with T-shirts marked by ash and smoke, called the names of the three men who they said turned the 40-by 90-foot wooden barracks into a funeral pyre.

The trio who allegedly set the tragic blaze was identified to the coroner's jury as Joseph Earl Wynder, a Negro, and Thomas E. Ard and Earl Evans, both white men. All were from the Pensacola area.

Wynder was sentenced to prison from Calhoun County for grand larceny and burglary. Information on convictions of Ard and Evans was not immediately available.

The convict witnesses said Wynder, Ard and Evans used newspapers and toilet tissue to start their fires after a television set and fluorescent lights were smashed.

But Lovett said the resentment began when a pornographic book was confiscated from Ard.

Lovett, 49, who has been a prison guard for a year, entered the burning building and herded five frightened men outside. He was burned in the rescue but not severely.

Hopes Dim for U.N. Agreement

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — Prospects faded today for adoption by the U.N. General Assembly of a resolution calling for Israeli troops to withdraw from Arab territory seized in the June war.

Syrian Ambassador George J. Tomeh told the assembly's special session on the Middle East that all the Arab states maintain their refusal to recognize the state of Israel.

Israeli Foreign Minister Abba Eban replied this "strengthens my government's resolve not to respond to any request or interest from these states until or unless there is an explicit recognition of Israel's statehood, sovereignty and territorial rights."

The Latin-American group of 23 nations adopted a passive attitude toward its negotiations with the Soviet Union for a resolution on Israeli withdrawal that could get the two-thirds vote necessary for approval.

Assembly President Abdul Rahman Pazhwak of Afghanistan told the assembly if no agreement was reached by then, it should end the special session. There was no objection, and it appeared that the issues left unsettled would be returned to the Security Council.

As the vanguard of the 33-man U.N. observer team began surveillance of the Suez Canal cease-fire line between Israeli and Egyptian forces, an Israeli-Egyptian dispute over Israel's intention to put patrol boats on the canal threatened the operation.

Israel claimed it had the right to patrol the waters on the eastern side of the canal. Egypt warned that it would open fire on any boats the Israelis launched. Egyptian Ambassador Mohamed Awad El Kony told Secretary-General U Thant by letter Israel had placed nine boats on the east shore of the Bitter Lakes, which form part of the southern half of the canal.

Reports in Vienna said Soviet Communist party chief Leonid I. Brezhnev and Premier Alexei N. Kosygin had urged the leaders of the other European Soviet bloc companies at their meeting last week to contribute more to the aid of the war-battered Arab economies but the smaller Communist governments were unenthusiastic.

Israel exchanged 361 Syrian soldiers and 230 Syrian civilians for an Israeli pilot captured by the Syrians during the war, the bodies of two other Israeli pilots shot down June 5, an 18-year-old Israeli civilian who disappeared on a flower-collecting tour last September, and an Israeli Arab who said he was kidnaped from his home in Nazareth almost seven years ago.

Morse to Head Rail Conciliation

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson named a conciliation board today to try to solve the railroad dispute. He also called for another home-front effort to stimulate employment and opportunities for the poor, in order to avoid what he termed more Wattses and Newarks.

And in the international arena, the President told a suddenly arranged news conference that the United States still stands ready at any moment to negotiate on a Vietnamese settlement. But, he said, it has no signs that Hanoi is willing.

The President declined to get into a detailed discussion of consultations with Vietnamese allies on increasing troop levels for the war but said that "we are in constant touch."

With respect to the Middle East, Johnson conceded that the United States has been unable to get an agreement to hold down arms shipments to the Israelis and Arabs, as he proposed.

Advised of Great Britain's announcement of her intentions to withdraw from Malaya and Singapore in the 1970s, Johnson said that "we have expressed ourselves as very hopeful the British would maintain their position in that part of the world and would hope they would find it useful to do so."

For the panel to try to solve the dispute that brought on a two-day nationwide rail strike, Johnson named a five-member board under the chairmanship of Sen. Wayne Morse, D-Ore., a man on whom he has called in the past for similar duties.

During the night, the President said, he got in touch with Fred Kappel, retired president of American Telephone and Telegraph Co., in Switzerland; with mediator Theodore Kheel in Paris; with AFL-CIO President George Meany in Miami Beach, and with retired Republican Sen. Leverett Saltonstall of Massachusetts. They will serve under Morse.

"Of course we are very hopeful we can get an agreement between the parties," Johnson said.

And he said he would be in touch with Morse during the day and with some of the others.

Also on the domestic scene, the President stood pat on this time on his bid for adding 6 per cent to income tax bills. But he left the way open for some adjustments.

But the President preferred not to go into factors which might call for more than a 6 per cent surtax.

The President said that were it not for tax reductions put in luring his occupancy of the White House, Americans would be paying $24 billion more in taxes now.

"We do not think it unreasonable to ask them to return a small portion," he said. This is needed, he said, for both domestic programs in the field of poverty as well as for the war in Vietnam and foreign aid.

"We think it would be good from the standpoint of defense and the economy," Johnson said.

Asked for his views on what has happened in New Jersey — the rioting and killings that focused around Newark and spread to such points as Plainfield — Johnson said he had no more information than his questioners.

He went on to say, though, that we have a great need to see that people are employed, that there are more opportunities that are equal, that there is better education and housing.

Bluff Securities Firm Suspended

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — James C. Kirkpatrick, secretary of state, announced today that Investors Securities Associates, Inc., of Poplar Bluff, Mo., has been suspended as a dealer in securities.

Suspended also are: Judson Stokley, president; W. Don Bristow, secretary-treasurer; Robert E. Singleton, vice-president, Joseph M. Bumpus, vice-president, all of Poplar Bluff and Warren O. McIntyre, vice-president of Mexico, Mo.

The suspensions resulted from the alleged neglect and refusal of Investors Securities Associates, Inc., its officers and agents, to make a complete settlement to persons for whom they sold securities, and the alleged failure and refusal to deliver securities purchased and paid for by customers. In addition the company is charged with selling unregistered securities in Growth of America Investment Co.

Those charged have 20 days to file a written request for a hearing.

Woman Injured In Accident

LaVonne Downey, 28, route two, Sikeston, is reported in satisfactory condition today in Missouri Delta Community hospital after suffering three or four broken ribs in an auto accident Monday afternoon on East Malone, police said.

The car she was driving east on East Malone collided with an automobile driven by Sherma J. Gulledge, 17, East Prairie, as it turned from Country Club drive onto East Malone, police reported. No summons was issued at the time of the accident. Police said the mishap occurred at 4:06 p.m.

In other police activity, Frank Mullin, Blodgett, was charged Monday with public intoxication.

Albert D. Adams, St. James, was charged by police Monday with peace disturbance.

Euvion Dozier, route two, Sikeston, was charged with peace disturbance early today.

Samuel Hurn, 356 Magnolia, was charged Monday with peace disturbance, and Nora Willis, Poplar Bluff, was arrested today and charged with peace disturbance, police reported.

Two Bound to Circuit Court in Burglary Case

Preliminary hearings were waived today in Magistrate Court in Sikeston for two Sikeston men charged with burglary in connection with the theft of two shotguns from the Herman Dees residence.

John Sanders, 123 West St., and David Jones, route four, Sikeston, were each bound over to appear July 27, in Circuit Court.

Magistrate M. E. Montgomery presided. Assistant prosecuting attorney Tom Gilmore represented the state in cases heard.

Harvey Huse, 510 W. Gladys, charged with careless and reckless driving, dismissed on payment of costs.

Frank E. Felker, Painton, careless and imprudent driving, dismissed on payment of costs.

Walter Moore, Sikeston, charged with burglary and larceny, dismissed and costs certified.

Odis Seabaugh, Sikeston, fraud, dismissed and costs certified.

Jeanette Moore, 737 Greer, charged with cashing an insufficient funds check, dismissed on payment of costs.

Wilbert A. Gossett Jr., 842 E. Gladys, charged with leaving the scene of an accident, set for preliminary hearing next Tuesday in magistrate court.

Donald Fauller, Sikeston, charged with burglary and stealing, set for preliminary hearing next Tuesday in magistrate court.

Four Injured In Accidents

Four were treated for arm and leg injuries Monday at the Missouri Delta Community hospital.

Bobbie R. Leathers, Dexter, fell from tree and injured an elbow; Tammy McCain, caught ankle in bicycle spoke; Linda C. Wilson, fell from moving car and injured arm; Geneva E. Beal, cut hand on knife.

Rolwing Reviews Legislature's Acts

State Rep. David Rolwing of Charleston ticked off accomplishments of the legislature at the Rotary club meeting last night in the Rustic Rock Inn and said that 23 of 25 of Gov. Warren E. Hearnes' proposals were enacted.

He expressed belief that the two which bogged down in the session probably did not concern the governor greatly because they attracted so much controversy.

One bill, which died in the session, would permit an unemployed father to live at home while his children drew aid to independent children funds. Rolwing explained that this should strengthen family life and that safeguards were provided to prevent abuses.

Another loss was a shared time school bill which became embroiled in a controversy over separation of church and state.

Rolwing said that the legislature did "a real good job of taking care of special interests," and spent more than a billion dollars but he observed that the state did no deficit spending.

He defended a new law raising legislator salaries from $4,800 to $8,400 as needed to attract "better representation."

The new toll road law as described as the legislature's most significant accomplishment. He criticized a provision which under state road trust funds could be tapped to build the new highways but noted that any gasoline tax funds used would be reimbursed after payment is completed on the roads.

He said that Missouri with 33,000 miles of road to maintain - second only to New York state - had done a good job considering income.

Othe legislative action included congressional redistricting, new insurance and banking laws, implementation of medicare, sales tax exemption of pesticides and herbicides, additional funds for the Delta center at Portageville.

Rolwing expressed disappointment that a crime study bill "got lost" in the session.

The club will consider forming an intereact club for high school students at its next meeting. The July 31 meeting will be a family night at the Country club.

Harold Rabin of Belle Glade, Fla., was a visiting Rotarian.

Charles Green led the singing with Mary Anne Bruce at the piano.

Alex Waters presided in absence of President Fred Koch.

Cairo Alert But Quiet After Night of Violence

By Warren Sokolis

CAIRO -- It was quiet in this Southern Illinois city last night as law enforcement officers prepared for another night of racial violence.

State and city police and sheriff's officers patrolled the city in squad cars -- four to each car - wearing riot helmets and armed with riot guns.

Monday night's alert was the result of racial violence Sunday night in which about $75,000 worth of property was destroyed by fires.

Fire bombs destroyed gasoline bulk station warehouse and damaged three retail stores and a merchandise warehouse.

A witness said in at least one instance a bomb was thrown by a group of Negroes.

Two versions of the motives for the gasoline bombing were aired.

Preston E. Ewing, president of the Cairo chapter of the NAACP, said the death by hanging of a Negro absent without leave soldier in city jail touched off violence he said had been "brewing for some time."

A witness to one bombing said he believed the bombings were intended to bring pressure on Cairo businesses to hire Negroes in clerking and other white collar jobs, the Associated Press reported.

The witness said delegations of Negroes called on Cairo businesses last week asking them to give more employment to members of their race.

The soldier, Robert Hunt Jr., 19, was found hanged in his cell early Sunday morning. He was reported awol from Ft. Bragg, N.C., and was being held for military authorities.

Coroner Leo Siers said Hunt apparently hanged himself with his shirt.

A Cairo fireman reported six fires were caused by gasoline bombs. One fire destroyed the old Missouri Pacific warehouse, which contained petroleum products and antifreeze.

Last night several businessmen boarded up their shop windows in anticipation of more violence.

Bars were ordered by law enforcement officers not to sell alcoholic beverages and a 10 p.m. curfew was imposed.

POOR CHARLIE SAYS!

THE DAY WHEN FROBISHER BECAME FURIOUS

In the parade of upheavals that have shaken America in the twentieth century, the present gold crisis earns prominence for being astounding. More startling than the crisis itself is the nonsense that full gold backing for the money used by individual Americans is unnecessary.

This argument also claims that dollars held by foreign governments must be backed by gold and that foreign governments must be permitted to exchange their paper dollars for gold; otherwise, American dollars in foreign countries would become worthless.

Even if a person had no knowledge of economics, this line of reasoning would raise the question: Why are dollars held by foreign governments valuable only if backed by gold, while dollars that Americans have earned are supposed to be valuable without redemption rights?

The fact is, the pieces of paper we call money are not money. They are receipts for stored gold. Obviously, such a receipt is only as valuable as the amount of gold for which it is redeemed. Governments know this. This is their reason for refusing to accept paper money unless the issuing country guarantees that it can be exchanged for a specified amount of gold.

Since 1933, Americans have been unable to redeem dollars for gold, yet they continue to accept them in exchange for the products they make or the services they render. Why?

There are two major reasons. The first is that we have no choice; the government has enacted laws forbidding ownership of gold and proclaiming paper notes to be money. Such notes are properly called fiat (decree) money, which means that government issues them and decrees, "These are money because we say they are money."

The second reason that Americans continue to use fiat money is because most of us have vague ideas about what money is: If you were called on to define money and explain its function, how would you answer?

If you say money is a medium of exchange, give yourself a grade of "A". If you know that money makes all exchanges possible, you rate an "A-plus". If you say that, before it becomes a medium of exchange, real money is a useful commodity, go to the head of the class.

Here's the way something becomes money: to barter means to swap the product you make or the service you perform for the product someone else makes or the service he performs. Say, for example, that Frobisher, your next door neighbor, grows corn but he wants beef; you raise cattle and you want corn; then you and Frobisher can swap.

But suppose Frobisher wants beef and you want wheat, - you can't trade. Frobisher must find someone who has wheat and wants his corn. After he swaps corn for wheat, he can trade with you for beef. This is an indirect exchange and it is from this process that money was developed.

Soon the butcher, the baker, the grocer and the shoemaker join your community and offer their goods for exchange. Then comes the merchants, the wagonmakers, blacksmiths - and before you know it an awful lot of people with different goods and services want to do business, but can't because of the confusion. Something has to be done to make trading easier in the market place.

In the competition to become money, gold and silver won out over other products because they had wide acceptance and were so easy to exchange for goods and services.

This is the only process whereby a thing can become money. It must first have value. No one in or out of government possesses the magic power to convert a worthless thing into money. Some people do have the knack for fooling us though; as for example, the counterfeiter who makes something worthless look valuable.

The paper bills that we call money are substitutes for real money; they are, theoretically, warehouse receipts for stored gold. These receipts came into wide use as money-substitutes when buyers and sellers discovered that it was much easier to exchange receipts for goods and services than to go to the gold storage vault. It was a lot of bother, because the buyer would redeem his receipt for the gold, then hand the gold to the vault in exchange for another receipt.

This is the fact that citizens of nations all over the world have lost sight of: the currency that they use in their daily exchanges is supposed to represent an exact amount of gold. That they are not aware of it accounts for the fact that they permit their governments to print more currency and create more credit than the amounts of gold in their vaults.

The word "credit" is why citizens aren't aware that governments increase the supply of paper money far beyond the actual amount of real money (gold and silver) than governments possess.

Virtually every government has a central bank for the purpose of creating money for its spending programs and to control the money, credit, and interest of its nation. The effect of the establishment of a central bank is to prevent citizens from acting freely in the market to determine what money is: how much gold should be minted into money, how much is to be used for jewelry; what interest rates should be charged, etc. The central bank is awarded government-enforced manipulation of money; in the United States the functions of a central bank are performed by the Federal Reserve System. How this arm of the federal government works was neatly explained by former Secretary of the Treasury Robert B. Anderson, who wrote:

" . . .suppose I wanted to write checks for $100 million starting tomorrow morning, but the treasury was out of money. If I called up a bank and said, "Will you loan me $100 million at 3-1/2 per cent for six months if I send you over a note to that effect?" the banker would probably say, 'Yes, I will'.

"Where would he get the $100 million with which to credit the account of the United States Treasury? Would he take it from the account of someone else? No, certainly not. He would merely create that much money, subject to reserve requirements, by crediting our account in that sum and accepting the government's note as an asset.

When I had finished writing checks for $100 million the operation would have added that sum to the money supply.

"Now certainly that approaches the same degree of monetization (creating money) as if I had called down to the Bureau of Engraving and Printing and said, 'Please print me up $100 million worth of greenbacks which I can pay out tomorrow."

Compare this method of bringing additional money into existence with the way in which the free market creates money. Before a thing can become money in the free market it must first have achieved value by virtue of being wanted and freely chosen by men exercising their right of free choice. They have the right to choose whatever they wish as money because the items they sell are produced by their effort.

What gives value to the $100 million created in the manner described by Secretary Anderson? Did the government note represent something of value? If you reply that the note had the value of the United States government behind it, ask yourself who pays the government's debts and who must work to create real value to pay the interest on the note? You, the taxpayer.

What the government has done in this case is inflate the money supply. Say there was $100 million in gold in the bank. When Uncle Sam issued the promissory note to the bank for another $100 million, he increased the money supply. Now, all the people have $200 million dollars; but when they go to the bank there is only $100 million in real value, of gold. Everybody's buck is now worth 50¢ and each taxpayer still must repay the $100 million debt and the interest on it. And you, like Frobisher, are furious.

Thus, the government is writing checks against money that you have not yet earned, and the newly created money makes each of your dollars worth less. Anytime the money supply is increased without increasing the goods and services, each dollar will buy less of the goods and services.

What word identifies the act of creating and spending money that has no real value? Did you say "counterfeit"? If we were talking about private citizens, you would be right, but when government does this it is inflation. The sole cause of inflation is the issuance of an amount of currency or credit greater than the existing stock of metal money. The "wage-price spiral" is not the cause of inflation as is so often claimed: it is an effect of inflation.

Can government go on inflating the money supply forever, without being discovered? Hardly. Each new parcel of money-created-from-nothingness decreases the value of all the nation's money. Eventually the point is reached where a bale of money will not buy a loaf of bread. At this point, a nation's money becomes worthless and it does not have a medium of exchange.

Without a medium of exchange, people are unable to trade their products and services. For all of us the final ruin of our money would be a sentence of chaos and anarchy.

A special plea for drivers to be extra watchful for children at play during these warm summer days was issued by Colonel E. L. (Mike) Hockaday, the Superintendent of the Missouri State Highway Patrol.

"This is the time of the year when youngsters are out in great numbers and drivers must be extra alert to avoid a collision with them," Hockaday declared. "Children are often carried away by play. Sometimes they forget entirely the real world around them. Drivers should be aware of this and always expect the unexpected."

The Patrol Superintendent noted that over 80 pedestrians under 15 years of age were either killed or injured in accident investigated by the Highway Patrol last year.

"The great tragedy of these accidents lies in the fact that many of them could have been avoided if the drivers involved would have been more alert," he stated. "Children do not have the traffic judgment of adults and they cannot be expected to always act with proper regard for their own safety. It is up to the individual driver to do everything in his power to protect children from their own heedlessness."

Colonel Hockaday advised drivers to be extra watchful for children when traveling near playgrounds and in residential areas, or wherever else youngsters are likely to be found.

"Youngsters often seem to materialize out of thin air, right into the driver's path," the Colonel concluded. "A motorist must think quick and act fast to avoid hitting them when they dart out from behind parked cars or cross streets in the middle of the block. That is why a driver must be alert every minute he is behind the wheel."

THE CHALLENGE OF EQUAL JUSTICE

"No man is below the law," is the theme of this year's observance of Law Day, May 1.

The slogan, which is the other side of the more familiar "No man is above the law," has drawn fire from one of the nation's foremost legal educators, Paul M. Siskind, dean of Boston University Law School.

If it is stated as an objective, the theme is worth-while and timely, says the dean, writing in the current issue of Trial magazine, published by the American Trial Lawyers Association.

If it is intended to describe the abstract existence of a body of law available to those fortunate enough to have the resources to invoke it on their behalf, it is "substantially accurate."

But if it is intended to describe the complete effectiveness of our system of law and the protection of the rights of all our people, "it is no more than the statement of a condition which simply has not yet been achieved . . .

"So long as people are denied access to the effective operation of that legal system, no matter how justly and equitably it is conceived and maintained, to them it sits like a rare jewel in a museum, beautiful but remote. "A man is below the law whenever the law is beyond his reach."

Recent Supreme Court mandates requiring that counsel be provided for defendants charged with major criminal activity are highly commendable, says Siskind. They are so basic to a system which congratulates itself that "no man is below the law" that he finds it hard to imagine how they could have been considered revolutionary.

However, even our everyday lives have become so complex, he says, that legal counsel is needed in all but the most routine situations. Yet in the United States there are literally millions of people who through poverty or ignorance, or usually a combination of both, have no effective access to counsel.

He calls on the organized members of the bar to be the moving force to remedy this situation.

The Law Day theme, concludes Siskind, is really a boast which needs to be made good and a challenge which must be met before we can truly say that "No man is below the law."

THE AMERICAN APPETITE FOR TRAVEL

The famous comment that an army travels on its stomach is true not only for the military, but for the army of vacationers that take to our highways every summer. Whether it's fresh walleyes pan-fried in Northern Wisconsin, or a continental six course breakfast at Brennan's in New Orleans, blue points on the half shell in Boston or sub gum in San Francisco, the American traveler comes to see and eat. Aided by Duncan Hines in choosing the right place and Amy Vanderbilt in choosing the right fork, the hungry tourist can sample an endless variety of foods, atmospheres, and culinary traditions. From Delmonico's to McDonalds, America is one long groaning board that keeps us going and coming back for more. The Standard salutes the American restaurants, of which Stromberg's in Aspen, Colorado, is a colorful example.

TOTAL COMMITMENT

When President Johnson winged away on his Asian tour with messages of "peace," "prosperity," and "self-determination" for people of various countries in that part of the globe, he left behind a completely different message for the people in the U. S. Territory of Guam. After Mr. Johnson's departure on October 17, there appeared on the bulletin board of the nearly deserted White House press room a notice that he had that morning vetoed Guam's recently-passed Right-to-Work Law.

In Honolulu later that same day, the President expressed his "hope" that each nation of Asia may become "free,' proud, prosperous . . .(and). . . individualistic." His actions on their right to work bill hardly holds out the same hope for the people of Guam. Neither does it coincide with Mr. Johnson's statements a few weeks back at Rhode Island University: "If there is a single word that describes our form of society, it may be the word voluntary . . . the tremendous prosperity we enjoy and the personal liberty we cherish, are at least good evidence that the system works."

Voluntarism was the very essence of the Guam Legislature's bill which President Johnson vetoed. It stated simply: "No person shall be denied the opportunity to obtain or retain employment because of non-membership in a labor organization."

The efforts of Guamanians to obtain for themselves that basic freedom are an epic performance: First, their elected legislature passed the bill only to have it promptly vetoed by their Presidentially-appointed governor. Four days later a better than two-thirds majority in the legislature overrode that veto. President Johnson had to act, one way or the other, with 90 days or the bill would have automatically been in effect. The manner in which his last minute veto was announced is proof enough for us that he intended all along to kill it.

We think Mr. Reed Larson of the National Right to Work Committee hit the nail on the head when he said, "only a total commitment to the cause of compulsory unionism would compel the President to veto that bill at the very moment he was departing on a mission ostensibly aimed at the preservation of self-determination for the people of Southeast Asia."

There are a good many rubber-stamp congressmen now seeking re-election who are also totally committed to the union bosses and compulsory unionism. They'd like us to forget, until after election, the threat they pose to workingmen's freedom of choice throughout all the United States. If we do forget it -- and allow them to stay in office --we can expect in short order they'll be trying to do to all the rest of us what their "leader's" veto has just done to the workingmen of Guam.

ARM TO JAIL

"Your Honor," said the lawyer, "I submit that my client did not break into the house at all. He found the parlor window open, inserted his right arm and removed a few trifling articles."

"Now, my client's arm is not himself, and I fail to see how you can punish him for an offense committed by one of his limbs."

"Your argument," answered the judge, "is very well put. Following it logically, I sentence the prisoner's right arm to a one year's imprisonment. He can accompany it or not, just as he chooses."

Whereupon the defendant calmly removed his cork arm and walked out.

INSURGENCY IN LATIN AMERICA

A meeting of great potential danger to the United States and the entire Western Hemisphere is scheduled to be held in Havana on July 28. This will be a conference of communist parties from various areas in Latin America to lay plans for increasing their subversive and terrorist activities.

Fidel Castro's communist government in Cuba, supported by Soviet Russia, is promoting an extensive series of guerilla actions aimed at the military forces of governments in Central and South America. According to a report recently issued by a subcommittee of the Foreign Affairs Committee of the U. S. House of Representatives, Castro is steadily adding to his list of target countries. This report points out that "guerilla movements of significance" already exist in Venezuela, Colombia, Guatemala and Bolivia.

The House subcommittee reports that Cuba is still receiving substantial assistance from countries that proclaim themselves as our friends and allies. The assistance they are giving results in holding up Cuba's economy and simultaneously furnishing Castro with additional resources to expand his revolution. Britain, France, Spain, Italy and Canada are among the countries that have granted credits to Cuba.

Castro also continues to get assistance from Russia. The House subcommittee declared that the Soviets have provided a large supply of arms to Cuba and have some 5,000 Russian nationals stationed on the island. Military aid from Russia has increased considerably during the last year. This buildup is designed to continue and step up support of communist insurgency activities in Latin America. No doubt the blueprint will be laid out at the forthcoming Havana conference. HLH.

NEW YORK (AP) — Paul Jones, a fresh voice from Britain, is a young man you may be hearing a great deal more of from now on.

He is one of the top pop singers of Blimeyland, and has just made his first film, "Privilege." It is a bitter comedy about a youthful international entertainment idol whose managers try to change him from a symbol of rebellious youth into an evangelical crusader.

Jones, who is six feet tall, fair-haired, and green-eyed, doesn't fit into any convenient pigeonhole. He isn't that common a bird.

He wears his hair down to the nape of his neck and likes to go around in orange corduroys. But, at 25, he feels he belongs neither to the beat nor the hippie generation.

Once he described himself as an "upper class Bohemian," but now says that was merely a flippant remark.

"Bohemian is such an old-fashioned word. I've always been middle class. Imagewise, I certainly am not the beatnik type. I suppose I'm the British boy-next-door type — incredibly square, and with a social conscience.

"Soul is a very important thing to me. That's why I like Negro blues — it's loud and full of soul.

"To me soul is not just a spiritual quality. It is the ability to combine the spiritual and the earthly, and most of Western society seems unable to do that."

The harmonica-playing singer is the son of a retired English naval captain. Expecting to become an English teacher, he spent a year at Oxford University before deciding to make a career in music.

Before his voice caught the public ear — he's popular on the Continent as well as in his homeland — Jones worked as a railway porter, boat attendant, day laborer and department store salesman.

Now he lives with his wife Sheila and two children in a prosaic London home far from Bohemian Chelsea.

"Sometimes fans bunch outside the house," he remarked. "They stand quietly there and look through the windows and watch us eat. It makes us feel like animals in a zoo."

Money, he says, means very little to him except that it enables him to pursue his hobby of collecting antiques. But fame means much to him.

"I have a quirk for that," he admitted.

Critical of beatniks and hippies because of their passivity, Jones aligns himself with those members of the young generation who want to be more active in changing the status quo.

"I view this hippie thing with an enormous amount of sympathy," he remarked. "But I worry about their tendency to drop out of life.

"I believe in individual responsibility — that it is up to every individual to raise the quality of life. You should find the best thing you can do to make a better and more peaceful world, then do it."

Washington Merry - Go - Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON -- The 27 to 1 vote inside the house agricultural committee rebuking Rep. Joe Resnick, D-N.Y., for his stand against the farm bureau will have far more repercussions than an ordinary congressional feud. It may well do the following:

1. Put Resnick in the race for the senate against Republican Jacob Javits, hitherto considered unbeatable.

2. Raise the issue of congressional ethics once again.

3. Force a showdown regarding the big farm organizations masquerading as nonprofit co-ops but which make tax-free inroads on private business which must pay taxes.

Regarding the first, Democrats have long been looking for a Jewish candidate who could take on Jake Javits. Javits has been a good senator and aspires to be vice president.

Part of his political strength lies in his religion which nets him a preponderance of Jewish-Democratic voters in New York City who cross over to the Republican ticket where Javits is concerned. They even voted for him as against Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., for attorney general.

Resnick, a Jew, is a wealthy electronics manufacturer from Poughkeepsie who has been re-elected in an overwhelmingly Republican district. He is one of the bright stars among New York Democrats, and the unfair vote against him in the house agriculture committee should boost him as a candidate against Javits.

TAX FREE FARM LOBBY

Reason for this unfair rebuke was the fact that Resnick had dared expose the giant American farm bureau federation as a $2 billion lobbying group which paid no taxes.

For a long time business leaders have been griping over the privileged position of farm co-ops which get by without paying taxes. The farm bureau is the No. 1 example. Resnick had pointed out that it operates several insurance companies, gasoline filling stations, automobile accessory stores.

When Resnick first began this campaign, he received commendation from his fellow members on the house agriculture committee.

"Great stuff, Joe," commented chairman Bob Poage of Texas. "You're doing fine. Keep it up."

However, this was before the farm bureau threw its tremendous lobbying power into play. For years it has dominated the farm block on Capitol Hill.

Furthermore it has several of its members on the house agriculture committee. Under the rules of congress they are not supposed to vote on an issue where they have a direct personal or pocketbook interest.

Nevertheless, several congressional members of the farm bureau led the fight to disassociate congress from Resnick because he dared take on the farm bureau. They were: Chairman Poage, Bill Nichols, D-Ala., G. V. Montgomery, D-Miss.; with George Hansen, Idaho, Robert Price, Tex., George Goodling, Pa., and John Zwach, Minn., all Republicans.

The conflict of Rep. Zwach was especially glaring because his administrative assistant, Verlon Welch, served as legislative director of the Minnesota farm bureau from 1961 - 66.

All of the above congressmen voted to censure Adam Clayton Powell. But they saw nothing wrong in leading the fight to rebuke a congressman who dared criticize their own $2 billion farm bureau and its tax-free privileges.

SUPER SECRECY

Significantly, the house agriculture committee meeting to defend the farm bureau was held behind closed doors. No security matters were involved; no military secrets; only the question of whether a lobbying group should continue to have tax-free privileges. Yet the public, which has to make up the tax deficit, was barred.

Significantly also, the meeting was called just 24 hours after the farm bureau executives met in Chicago to plan strategy against Resnick's attack.

The secret committee meeting was held at 9:30 a.m., and was supposed to last until ten. But the battle inside the committee continued so long that White House assistant Walt Rostow was kept an hour and a half waiting to testify.

At the start of the closed-door session, Resnick made a parliamentary inquiry asking that the debate regarding him be open to the press and public.

Chairman Poage remarked that Resnick's criticism of the farm bureau already had received "too much publicity." Resnick was voted down.

He then asked Poage to yield. The chairman refused.

"You want us to make a martyr of you, and I'm going to do it," remarked the congressman from Texas.

In the showdown vote disassociating the committee from Resnick's investigation of the farm bureau, every Democrat voted against his Democratic colleague from New York except three: Rep. Eligio De La Garza, the Spanish - American from Texas, who supported Resnick; and Tom Foley of Washington and Frank Brasco of Brooklyn, who sat on their hands, They voted "present."

Remarked Rep. De La Garza afterward: "If Resnick was impolite to the farm bureau, we should talk to him about it. We don't have to pass a resolution to dissassociate ourselves from what another congressman says. That's his business. "If a congressman has to disassociate himself every day from what another congressman says, we couldn't pass any legislation at all. We'd be too busy disassociating."

East Confronts West Over Miniskirt Question

MOSCOW (AP) — It's the greatest East-West confrontation since Glassboro: miniskirts vs. Muscovites.

And the Russians are taking the hard line. One old woman in Gorky Park took a switch to an American girl and lashed the backs of her bare knees.

Around the Intourist hotels, the foreign currency shops and the International Film Festival, Russians ogle the most scantily, most gaudily clad girls ever seen off the stage of the Bolshoi Ballet.

They're foreigners, mainly British, American, Scandinavian and German tourists.

All winter Moscow heard rumors of just how mini the miniskirt had become in the fabled, distant West. A few brave Russians raised hems a scandalous inch above the knee.

But by spring the average dress still amply covered the usually ample Russian kneecap.

Now they're seeing the real thing— 6 to 10 inches above the knee. And the psychedelic colors seem as surprising as the brevity in the drab Moscow setting.

One girl at a film festival party wore a crocheted, see-through "dress" of bathing-suit proportions over a body-stocking. Even the movie stars, not to mention people from the comparatively sophisticated Soviet cultural scene, were shocked.

Less sophisticated, less worldly Muscovites are not taking this invasion calmly.

The babushka— the word means grandmother but applies to any little old Russian woman — in Gorky Park was not alone.

An Australian girl and another babushka were seen in a tug-of-war all the way across a broad, busy street. The old woman was trying to pull the girl's hem down to her knees and the girl was frantically trying to escape.

Will the secretive Russians, who rejected Western "open skies" and disarmament inspection plans, yield to inspection of the upper legs?

Some of the younger tourists from such Communist countries as Poland and Czechoslovakia are wearing minis. Russian girls are envious— and experimenting.

AND NOBODY BLEW IT

BELEN, N.M. (AP) — Asst. Police Chief Joe Gabaldon said the metal whistle he wears around his neck probably saved his life recently.

Gabaldon and Officer Ernest Trujillo went to a Belen motel where a man reportedly was ill. The officers found a motel guest wrestling with a doctor.

During the scuffle to separate the pair, the guest grabbed Gabaldon's pistol and it discharged.

The bullet was deflected by the whistle and Gabaldon escaped injury.

The motel guest was jailed.

Burneses Accept Position On Miles College Faculty

ST. LOUIS - Mr. and Mrs. Donald W. Burnes have joined the faculty of Miles College, the small, Birmingham, Ala., school which made headlines earlier this year by hiring the dean of Harvard College.

Burnes will be assistant professor of history and assistant in administration, effective July 15, and Mrs. Burnes, the former Kay Standley of Sikeston, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L.M. Standley, will be assistant professor of psychology and will work in counseling with the dean of students, effective Sept. 1.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Burnes are graduates of Washington University. Mrs. Burnes received an bachelor of arts degree in 1962, and master of arts in education in 1963, and is a candidate for the doctor of philosophy degree in clinical psychology.

Burnes, a graduate of Phillips Exeter Academy and Princeton University, received his master's degree in education from Washington University this year.

A volunteer for mission, assigned to Trinity church, by the executive council of the Episcopal church in 1964, Burnes has worked since July, 1966, as research assistant to the Rev. Anthony J. Morley, research and planning officer for the Episcopal Diocese of Missouri.

Mr. and Mrs. Burnes will move to Birmingham, Ala., July 31, and live at 5052 Parkway Avenue, Fairfield.

Mrs. Urban Wins Award

Mrs. Dewey E. Urban has won the annual Bernice Edlund award for the ideal golfer.

Chosen by a secret committee, Mrs. Urban was presented the award at the 29th annual Women's Golf tournament held at the Milburn Country Club in Kansas City July 10-15.

This award is presented each year at the meeting of the Women's Missouri Golf Association to a tournament entrant who has promoted the constitutional aims of the association and set an ideal standard of conduct during the tournament and throughout the year by her application and devotion to golf, her demeanor and appearance on the golf course, her strict observance of the rules and etiquette of the game and her high degree of sportsmanship.

Mrs. Mary McArthur Becomes Administrator

Mrs. Mary McArthur, Morley, has been promoted to dial administrator for Southwestern Bell Telephone Company.

She will coordinate equipment installations and make use studies for 54 exchanges in Southeast Missouri.

Mrs. McArthur joined Southwestern Bell in 1948 in St. Louis as an operator. In 1957, she transferred to Sikeston where she later became a central office clerk.

She and her husband, Con McArthur, have three children: Robert, 11; Sandra Kay, 8; Linda Ann, 7 months.

Southern California's mission of San Juan Capistrano's swallows are cliff swallows. They are one of the few western birds that live close to man, building globular mud nests under eaves.

Fashions Strike Military Poses

ROME (AP)— Rome fashions have gone on military maneuvers.

Fabiani was the commanding officer who put soldier styles on parade Monday.

Coats and suits had the stiff, high collars that Napoleon made famous. Shoulders were briskly squared.

Epaulettes were everywhere. Flag red and Prussian blue were the regimental colors he used.

Coats were boxily straight and loose in back. Then there was the modified military tent, an old Fabiani favorite but less wide this season.

Skirts still looked short although belted raincoats were designed to keep the calves dry.

High crowned fedoras were in plushy felt. British bowler hats were in mink or beaded for evening.

Dresses were so elegantly understated that their only detail was a pair of vertical slit pockets in the skirt.

Schoolboy grey flannel made a divide skirt and shortie jacket with a shell blouse in lighter grey.

Velvet was promoted to the deluxe class by being threaded with glitter yarns in diagonal checks. Two trouser-suits, one in black and the other in mole-brown velvet, had wide legs and were cut ribcage-high to meet stand-up collar jackets.

GROW PULP FOR BOOKS

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) — A Kentuckian who wants to plant a tree merely has to go to his nearest county library.

Under a joint program by the state Departments of Libraries and Natural Resources, seedlings for loblolly, shortleaf and holly pine and yellow poplar are given out free to anyone asking for them. Planting instructions accompany the seedlings.

ROUND THE TOWN

Robert Lee Horton left Thursday after spending his vacation with his mother, Mrs. Juanita Horton, and his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Warren. Robert returned to Alpha, Ill., where he is employed in a nursery.

Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Warren had as guests Wednesday, Mr. and Mrs. Warren McCray of Indianapolis, Ill., who were en route to Brownsville, Tex., to visit her mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Miller, and other relatives.

Mrs. Lora Branum had as guests last week her sister, Mrs. Carrie Alexander, and grandson, David, Kingsville, Tex. This weekend, Mrs. Alexander's daughter, Mrs. Kenneth Cline, and son, Mark of St. Louis, spent the weekend with Mrs. Branum before taking her mother to St. Louis with her for a visit.

Please don't forget to call your locals in to Cherie GR 1-0380. Thanks.

Ensigns, Bob Waters of Chapel Hill, N.C., and Jack Brearetonof New York, were weekend guests of Judge and Mrs. M. E. Montgomery while en route to San Francisco for six months duty in a nuclear school. Bob is the grandson of the Montgomerys. Other guests at the Montgomery home on Sunday were Mr. and Mrs. Creal Black, Mr. Howard Dickerson and Miss Sara Ann Dickerson, Dexter; Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Montgomery, Chaffee; and Mrs. C. A. Mawrs.

Full Dress "Ball"

Calling a full dress dance a "bail" stems from the early practice in Naples of holding a ball game before the dance of the "Feast of Fools." The full dress for men was the odd custom used during the ball game.

CAMPING CAPER

He was equipped with water jug,
And a soft blanket for a rug;
Sandwiches and candy bars—
You'd think he was taking a trip to Mars.

Out onto the law he went

But soon shadows loomed in the gloom--
And boy, did he hie himself back to his room!

WHAT DID YOU PAY FOR ANTIBIOTICS 25 YEARS AGO?

25 years ago you couldn't buy antibiotics at any price. Neither could you get tranquilizers, steroids, radioisotopes, polio vaccines, nor a test of wonder drugs that are now commonplace.

That's why it isn't logical to say, "Prescriptions cost more than they used to." Most of today's drugs weren't available 25 years ago. In fact, over three quarters of the prescriptions written today, are for drugs that didn't exist ten years ago.

Today, Americans spend only one cent from every disposable dollar on drugs. This is no more than in 1938. Also, today's drugs work faster. They are more efficient. They do much to reduce your total of illness. That's why we say: "Today's prescription is the biggest bargain in history."

Mrs. H. Linn Smith Host to Circle

Mrs. H. Linn Smith was hostess in July to the La Verne Tope circle of the First Baptist Church at the regular monthly business meeting and circle program.

Mrs. Louis Goehri opened the meeting with prayer after the scripture and prayer calendar were read.

The minutes were read and approved, followed by the various reports. The new mission book will be studied in ... The study on race relations was an open discussion concerning encouraging developments in race relations in the United States and what the Christian's role is, based on Bible teaching.

A period of meditation on personal attitudes of each one in the group was followed with prayer by Mrs. Phillip Sadler.

Mrs. Smith served sherbet, cookies and fruit juice.

Potlatch Claims 8-6 Duel

DEXTER - Potlatch Forest of Sikeston and Dexter finally got together for a Black River Connie Mack baseball league game after having two previous scheduled duels cancelled. The outcome was an 8-6 come-from-behind victory for Sikeston.

Potlatch Forest, winners of the league title for its second consecutive year, will meet the Cape Girardeau district winner for the Missouri title later this month.

Sikeston's attack was led by three round trippers, by Wayne Limbaugh, Mike Garner and Terry Scudder with the latter connecting on a seventh inning shot that sent Sikeston ahead with two on board.

Ken Walker held the Sikeston nine intact for the first five innings, allowing only one run and two safeties.

But Sikeston's late inning attack started with a three-run sixth and a four-run seventh to clinch the victory.

Despite two round trippers by Alan Kelley Sikeston fought back from a 4-1 drrlcit with its late inning surge.

Kelley's blasts came in the fourth and sixth innings to account for three runs. His fourth inning homer was a solo job to start the inning and his sixth inning shot was a two-run blast.

Rudy Manley was the winning hurler for Potlatch, coming in to relieve starter, Bruce Farris. Walker was the loser.

Garner and Farris led the eight-hit Sikeston barrage with two safeties each.

Bill Ringer and Kelley were Dexter's top hitters, collecting two hits each.

Fisk is scheduled to be Potlatch's final opponent. The game is to be at VFW stadium tomorrow beginning at 8 p.m.

Sports Corner

By RON JAYNES

61 FOR MARIS

There were no indications in Roger Maris' past that he would ever challenge Babe Ruth's home-run record of 60 in one season. During his five seasons in the minor leagues, the native of Fargo, North Dakota, never hit more than 32 home runs in one year. And during his first four years in the majors, he hit 14, 16 and 39 home runs. The latter total came in 1960, Maris' initial season with the New York Yankees. He also batted .283 and had 112 RBI that year, a performance that coupled with is all-around skills to earn him the Most-Valuable Player award

That award seemed to decrease his chances of even equalling his 1960 statistics in '61. After attending banquets throughout the country all winter, the MVP reported to spring training tired and overweight. In fact, in his first appearance in the batting cage at St. Petersburg, Florida, his bat slipped out of his hands and Yankee pitcher Whitey Ford shouted, "What's the matter, Rog? You still got all that chicken grease left on your hands from the winter?"

Not surprisingly, Maris started the season slowly. After ten games, he was batting .200 and had only one home run. Manager Ralph Houk dropped him to seventh in the batting order. But beginning on May 17, he started hitting "the big tonk," as Maris liked to call the home run.

At the end of May, he had raised his batting average to .248 and had hit 12 home runs. By June 20, his homer total was 27. On July 25, he had his biggest home-run day. He hit four, two in each game, of a doubleheader against the White Sox. His fourth home run that day was his 40th of the season.

Through August 13, Maris was battling teammate Mickey Mantle for the home-run crown. That day both got home runs No. 45. Then Maris began to pull away. On August 22, he became only the ninth player in history to hit 50 home runs, and the first ever to hit 50 before September. Babe Ruth's monumental record of 60 home runs was very definitely within his reach.

Naturally, the pressure on Maris was great. He was set upon by newsmen, photographers and fans, before and after games, wherever he went. The pressure took its toll on Roger. His hair began falling out, he had goose bumps and couldn't sleep at night. To add to his misery, baseball commissioner Ford Frick ruled on September 20 that any home runs hit after 154 games would not count in the race against Ruth's record.

Going into his 154th game, Maris had 58 homers and needed two to qualify under Ford's edict. In that 154th game, against Baltimore, Roger almost tied the record. He hit No. 59 in the third inning, and just missed on two other occasions when long drives curved foul. It was a fine clutch performance and, as the Yankees celebrated the clinching of another pennant, Houk said of Maris: "Now everyone realizes what kind of guy he is, that he could go up there and hit that ball. What a battler he is."

Roger was not finished battling. In New York's 159th game, in Yankee Stadium against Baltimore pitcher Jack Fisher, Maris hit No. 60, the ball soaring into the third deck of the right-field stands, six feet inside the foul pole.

Now came the ultimate drama: the last game of the season. On October 1, 1961, 23,000 fans turned out to see the Yankees play the Boston Red Sox. More important to them than the outcome of the game was whether Maris could hit No. 61 in his last chance.

Tracy Stallard, a fastball righthander, was the Sox pitcher, and he was determined to stop Roger. In the first inning, he did just that. He got Maris out on a long fly ball to left field. Maris got his next chance in the fourth inning.

The scoreboard clock read 2:42 and there was no score, one out, and no one on base. Stallard's first pitch was a fastball, high and outside. The umpire called it a ball. The partisan crowd booed Stallard; they wanted to see Roger get a pitch to swing at. But Stallard wasn't anxious to go down in the record books as the man who served up the pitch for No. 61. The next pitch was another fastball, low and inside. The booing grew louder.

Maris dug in again, pumping his bat menacingly. All he wanted was a chance to hit the ball. Stallard wound up and threw. The pitch was a fastball on the outside corner. Maris whipped the bat around in that graceful, picturebook swing of his. The ball soared toward the right-field stands, landing ten rows back and ten feet to the right of the bullpen. Slowly, he circled the bases to the thunderous ovation of the Yankee Stadium crowd.

The home run won the game for New York, 1-0, and won Maris a place in baseball history. It was a magnificent performance by a young man no one had suspected was capable of greatness.

Birds End 3-Game Skid With 6-4 Win

Dal Maxvill goes five years between home runs and when he gets on all he can think about is singles and Tim MCarver takes over the National League batting lead and says he don't want any part of it.

"I hit a homer my first year up in 1962, then waited five years for the next one," said Maxville, the St. Louis Cardinals slender shortstop. "I've come to the conclusion I'm not a long ball hitter.

"I'd really rather have five singles," Maxvill added. They'd help the team a lot more."

Maxie's homer wasn't the winning run in St. Louis' 6-4 decision over the New York Mets Monday night. As a matter of fact the ball didn't even make it into the stands.

But when he lined the ball into centerfield in the sixth inning and Larry Stahl fell before he could cut it off, Maxvill kept running.

McCarver, the league's top hitter, says "I'd much rather hit .240 and win the pennant than hit .370 and come in seventh. The victory left the Cards two games in front of Chicago in the National League pennant race.

"As far as I'm concerned, the leading the league is out of reach," said McCarver after his four straight hits raised his average to .355. "I've flirted with .300 a few times and never even made that."

Mike Shannon's seventh homer of the year in the fourth inning was the conventional type. McCarver singled to open the inning then Shannon sent the next pitch screaming into the left field seats. Two singles and one run later losing pitcher Don Cardwell was gone.

Maxvill's inside-the-park homer wasn't the only heroic's of the sixth inning.

Ed Kranepool bunted a single and Ed Charles doubled to put men on second and third with nobody out. Then pitching coach Billie Muffett waslked to the mound.

"He came out," Dick Hughes said, "and told me 'Boy, this is it. Win it or lose right now.'"

Hughes, who at 29 no longer is a boy, won it, his eighth against three losses. A shallow pop fly, two strikeouts and the Cards walked into the dugout.

But it seemed like every time the Cardinals walked out of the dugout they had to face Jerry Buchek who doubled in the second and scored on Jerry Grote's single. Then in the ninth he smacked his ninth homer of the year.

Detroit Suffers 7th Straight

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The saying goes, "Youth must be served," and old-timer Carl Yastrzemski thinks it could be this year.

Not only does the 27-year-old Boston outfielder think it must be served, he has been taking steps all season to make sure it is.

In his latest step Monday night, Yastrzemski, the oldest regular in a starting line-up which averages 24 years of age, doubled, homered and drove in three runs as the Red Sox trounced Detroit 7-1 and took over sole possesson of third place in the American League.

Washington won its eighth straight by beating Cleveland 4-2, Baltimore topped New York 6-1 and California blanked Minnesota 2-0 in other AL games. Chicago and Kansas City were not scheduled.

Youth and hot weather seem like a winning combination to Yastrzemski.

"This is the youngest team among the contenders," he said. "Even last year when he finished ninth, we played our best ball in late July and August."

In gaining their fourth straight victory and sixth in the last seven games, the Red Sox wasted little time, jumping on Detroit's Denny McLain for three runs in the first inning.

Mike Andrews, 24, scored on a double by Joe Foy, 24. Foy came in on Yastrzemski's double, and 23-year-old George Scott followed with an RBI single.

A double by Foy sandwiched between singles by Andrews and Tony Conigliaro, 22, added two more in the fifth and Yastrzemski's 22nd homer, with Foy aboard on a single, concluded the scoring in the eighth and sealed the Tigers' seventh straight loss which dropped them into fourth place.

Yastrzemski is hitting .328 with 65 RBI. He already has six more homers and just 15 less RBI than he did last season when he hit .278.

Consecutive run-scoring singles in the third inning sparked the Senators, who now have the longest winning streak in the expansion club's history and the longest in Washington since the 1949 coub won nine.

Hornung's Career Questionable

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Paul Hornung, the Golden Boy of pro football for the last decade, may be through.

No one knows. Or at least no one is saying. But the prospects are not good.

"Hornung has a 50-50 chance to play," said Tom Fears, coach of the New Orleans Saints, the expansion team that claimed the do-everything halfback in the draft.

"I don't want to make a statement until everything is sure," said Saints owner John Mecom Jr.

Hornung wasn't saying anything.

The 31-year-old veteran, a two-time NFL Most Valuable Player for the Green Bay Packers and holder of the league scoring record, was in the Scripps Clinic in La Jolla, Calif., today undergoing a second series of tests to determine whether or not he can continue his career.

The question centers around possible nerve damage to his neck and-or left arm, arising out a neck injury he suffered last season while scoring a touchdown against the Chicago Bears.

"My neck snapped back diving into the end zone," Hornung said. "I don't remember the guy who was defending but he fell on me and jammed my neck."

Hornung already has undergone a series of tests at the Mayo Clinic. Those results have not been disclosed, but presumably he would not be taking a second set of tests had Mayo given him a clean bill of health.

Hornung said Mecom urged further tests to get "a couple of opinions. So they thought it would be a good idea to enter Scripps."

While the Saints were holding their breath about Hornung, the New York Jets and Cleveland Browns got some good news and the Detroit Lions got some backtalk as the highlights from the training camps as the major pro teams prepared to get down to heavy work.

Joe Namath, the Jets' $400,000 bonus quarterback, said his latest knee operation apparently was successful. Frank Ryan, Cleveland quarterback, who suffered a shoulder separation last year, said he was fully recovered. Defensive halfback Dick Lebeau and linebacker Wayne Walker became holdouts with Detroit.

"The knee hasn't bothered me since the operation, and it feels the best it has in two years," said Namath, who had a second operation on his balky right knee during the offseason.

"I haven't tried to run and cut yet. Not because I'm afraid to. It just hasn't been necessary."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Rams picked up eight-year veteran center Bob Whitlow from the Atlanta Falcons Monday for an undisclosed future draft choice.

Child's Expression Can Answer Questions about Poverty War

Photographs Tell Story

By BARBARA LACY

What can one expression do; one expression repeated hundreds of times on the faces of children and adults?

It can defy words. What can you say about the toddler on a ragged bed holding a bottle. There is a look in his eyes that says it is empty and that it has been empty before.

What can you say about the little girl with her head buried in her hands leaning against a wire fence. Is the worn terry cloth towel wrapped abound her body for warmth? What can you say about the picture of the head a little girl with large luminous eyes? What can you say but it is a face you will remember.

What can one expression do? When it is the look of poverty it can hurt you and haunt you in your dreams if you really look at it. It can help you understand what the war on poverty is all about.

POVERTY PICTURES attract attention of viewers at the junior high school auditorium.

That is the purpose of the traveling exhibit of 450 prize winning photographs on display from 1 p.m. to 8 p.m. through Monday at the junior high school auditorium. They are not pretty photographs and they are not horrifyingly grotesque yet they are not mediocore.

They are appalling when you realize that they are the faces of today, culled from more than over 25,000 photographs of poverty, pulled from the nation's magazines, newspapers and the files of free lance photographers.

Sure, you've seen poverty before. In Southeast Missouri, how can you avoid it; or in St. Louis, or in Memphis.

That's the point the pictures hope to make; that poverty is everywhere in affluent America.

The exhibit was suggested by Vice President Hubert Humphrey. He was looking for a way to open the eyes of Americans who pass the same nameless faces, the same expressive faces, the same poverty stricken faces as those in the pictures every day, and don't look at them.

The pictures were put in three exhibits and after an opening at the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, D.C., were sent around the country. Sikeston's exhibit came from Joplin and will go to Sedalia. It is sponsored by the Office of Economic Opportunity and the Delta Area Economic Opportunity Corporation.

The photos are representative of all regions of America, including Ozark Missouri.

Some are family portraits and if there is a resemblance between the Ozark family and the West Virginia family. The expression doesn't change with the years either, in comparing historical photographs with the others.

AN IMPOVERISHED CHILD, her dog, a tricycle and rubbish.

Some moments are so intimate that you feel you are intruding. But so do the subjects of one of these photos, as the faces of the young children, who watched their 15-year-old unwed sister give birth to a child born out of wedlock, clearly show.

You'd like to ask somebody who was there questions about many of the photographs. Why is that mother carrying the child with its eyes closed? Is it asleep, ill or dead? What happened to the young migrant worker picking beans? She doesn't look more than seven.

What about that cute little girl in the upstairs bedroom with the wooden plank foor, walls and ceiling. She has a new book in one picture, and in another she is looking out the window with what must be hope for the future. What is her life like? Where will she go?

Some of the pictures are happy and you can laugh with the children jumping on the old sofa or playing in the water.

The end is happy too. The last group of pictures were especially made for the exhibit. They show Head Start, the Job Corps, Volunteers in Service to America and other areas of the poverty program at work.

What can one expression do? It can answer questions about the poverty program.

DREW PEARSON SAYS: Meany blames one man for railroad strike; LBJ pins blame on machinists head Roy Siemiller; five Democratic senators vote solidly for labor against the President.

WASHINGTON -- Two off-the-record meetings were held Friday just before the railroad strike which throw significant insight on why the strike happened.

Meeting No. 1 -- was between representatives of the six shop craft unions at which the majority voted not to strike. One union, however, the international union of association of machinists, voted to strike and sent out carefully worded telegrams hinting that a strike could be called.

The other unions were: the boilermakers, blacksmiths, sheet metal workers, electrical workers, railway carmen, and the firemen and oilers.

The chief dissenter, however, Roy Siemiller, President of the machinists, had his way. After the meeting he sent telegrams to 200 of his lodge Presidents stating that the machinists' no-strike pledge expired at midnight July 15. This indirect notice to strike was enough.

Meeting No. 2 -- also held Friday afternoon, as in the office of speaker John McCormack in the house of representatives to consider the repercussions of a strike. Present were: secretary of defense Robert McNamara; secretary of labor Willard Wirtz; under secretary of labor James Reynolds; Democratic house leader Carl Albert of Oklahoma; Democratic whip Hale Boggs of Louisiana; Rep. Harley Staggers of West Virginia, chairman of the house commerce committee who has been opposed to antistrike legislation; and Rep. William Springer of Illinois, the No. 1 Republican on the house commerce committee who favors strike control in wartime.

VIETNAM AND RAILROAD STRIKE

While this meeting was in session word came from the other meeting that the machinsts were striking four western railroads. This, secretary McNamara pointed out, would affect shipments to Vietnam, since these roads served Pacific rebarkation ports.

Chairman Staggers of the house commerce committee had complete confidence in the machinists and went off to West Virginia for the weekend convinced there would be no strike. He indicated, however, that if there was a strike he would have to reconsider his no-strike bill position. Part of the trouble in the long drawn-out congressional hassle over a railroad mediation - arbitration bill has been the sweet old gentleman from West Virginia, who is torn between the coal-carrying railroads and railroad labor, both of which support him. He has worried himself sick between the two, but finally threw his weight to labor.

Three weeks earlier, June 26, there was another singificant meeting, this one a breakfast at the White House, which the President called for the purpose of convincing Staggers that he was wrong. Members of Staggers' house commerce committee were present, plus Staggers himself.

ONE MAN IS OBSTACLE

"We can get along with everyone except one man," the President told them. "I have it on the word of George Meany, twice, that this dispute could be settled if it were not for one man -- Roy Siemiller."

It was Siemiller who precipitated the airline strike last year that broke the administration's wage guidelines and resulted in a general upward wage spiral. He now wants the same thing in the railway dispute.

The government panel recommended a six per cent wage increase for the shop craft unions. The railways had already reached a five per cent increase with most of their unions; so anything above six per cent for the machinists would cause the entire wage pattern to be reopened.

Meanwhile the dispute has dragged on. First it was postponed 60 days under the railway labor act, then 20 days by act of congress, then 47 days. To prevent further postponements, Sen. Wayne Morse, D-Ore., introduced a "mediation with finality" bill providing for 90 days of mediation after which the recommendations of a government panel would have to be accepted, period. There would be no further delays, no further mediation.

Rep. Staggers and the house of representatives objected. They wanted no mandatory wage agreement after the 90 days of mediation.

The senate accepted the Morse bill 70 to 15. But when the bill went to conference to straighten out differences between the house and senate, five Democratic senators refused to abide by the 70- to 15 senate vote. They stuck by Roy Siemiller. The five Democrats are: Ralph Yarborough, Texas; Harrison Williams, N.J., Claiborne Pell, R. I., Gaylord Nelson, Wis.; and Bobby Kennedy, N.Y.

Labor pressure on them has been terrific. Labor lobbyists bore down with their full artillery.

Their ultimatum was: Either go along or we'll defeat you.

On the other side, supporting Morse for "mediation with finality" was only one Democrat, Jennings Randolph of West Virginia, plus four Republicans -- Jacob Javits, N.Y., Winston Prouty, Vt., Paul Fannin, Arizona, and Robert Griffin, Michigan. In the end, Javits went over to the pro-labor side on a compromise proposal.

On the house side, the following lined up with Staggers for the machinists: John Dingell, Mich., Dan Ronan, Ill., Brock Adams, Wash., all Democrats, with Glenn Cunningham, Nebr., Republican.

Chief support for the administration came from a Republican, Bill Springer, who is not against labor but urged that there must be a limitation on the right to strike in wartime. With him voted Sam Devine, Ohio, Dan Kuykendall, Tenn., Republicans; and Jake Pickle of Texas, a Democrat.

For three weeks the closed-door debate had dragged on with neither side willing to give, until finally Roy Siemiller and the machinists precipitated a showdown strike.

Symington Sponsors Rural Bill

WASHINGTON - Sen. Stuart Symington (D-Mo) announced today that he is joining as a co-sponsor of a bill to provide assistance for development of rural areas and communities. Hearings on the bill are being held by the senate subcommittee on agricultural credit and rural electrification.

The bill would amend the consolidated Farmers Home Administration act. Lans and grants would be authorized for immunity centers in rural areas. Authority would be granted to provide loans to farers to establish non-farm enterprises on their farms where needed to supplement income.

The authorization for water and sewer grants would be increased from $50 million to $150 million and water and sewer planning funds would rise from $5 million to $25 million.

The authorization for water and sewer grants would be increased from $50 million to $150 million and water and sewer planning funds would rise from $5 million to $25 million.

Earlier this year the President recommended the elimination of the $450 million ceiling on the annual insured loans authorizations for loans to individual farmers and rural groups. The bill incorporates this recommendation.

Proposed Postal Hike Advances

WASHINGTON (AP) - It would cost you six cents to mail a letter - or a dime if you send it air mail - under a postal rate increase approved by a House subcommittee.

That's a penny more than the present first class letter rate and two cents more than the air mail levy.

Post cards would be hit even harder, jumping from their present four cent and six cent rates for surface and air mail respectively to the same six cents and ten cents approved for sealed letters.

The proposal still has a long way to go through congressional channels before becoming law, however.

There is much concern these days about bad spelling by the younger generation. For instance, a certain college senior may well be a most bewildered young man. Finding that he had left his dungarees at home, he wrote: "Dear Mother, Please send me my genes."

She replied: "Dear Son, If you don't have them by now, there is nothing I can do about it."

ARMY RESERVE
FACTS

- The Army Reserve consists of more than one million officers and enlisted men and women, all dedicated to the highest principles of military service.
- Army reservists, in their dual role as civilian-soldiers, demonstrate a keen sense of duty in their efforts to maintain military proficiency while carrying on their civilian pursuits.
- The average age of Army Reservists is 35 for officers and 25 for enlisted men.
- In the 1966 National Rifle and Pistol Matches at Camp Perry, Ohio, Army Reserve marksmen set two new pistol team records, won nine major trophies in the rifle matches and set a new national Reserve record in the Infantry Team Match.
- More than 60 per cent of the doctors and 70 per cent of the dentists on active military duty are members of the Army Reserve.

National Rabbit Week Observed

The 25 members of the Southeast Missouri Rabbit Breeders Association are joining in with more than 200,000 members over the nation, in observance of National Rabbit Week, July 16-22.

The association is headed by David C. Hughes, route two, president.

Rabbits were domesticated in Africa and Asia more than 3,000 years ago. Three million pounds of rabbit meat was produced in San Diego alone.

Besides being used as food the fur is used in the manufacturer of millions of men's hats and women's fur pieces.

The district association last year won national honors for promotion.

After working his way through college and graduate school a young scholar obtained a teaching position in a small New England college. To help him repay government educational loans, his wife, an accomplished cook, worked in a bakery as a pastry chief from 4 a.m. until noon each day.

At the midyear faculty party, some of the professors' wives were discussing their extracurricular activities. One confessed that she wrote poetry, another was active in community organizations, still another was taking a Red Cross first-aid course. "And what do you do, my dear?" the wife of the college president asked the young professor's wife.

Hesitating for only a moment, she replied, "I spend a great deal of time making flour arrangements."

MOST TAX FROM SALES

CHICAGO (AP) – Sales taxes proved the best revenue raiser for 31 states, says Commerce Clearing House.

They accounted for 26.8 per cent of the total fiscal 1966 50-state tax take of $29.4 billion.

Of seven states producing $13.8 billion of the total collected, five – California, Pennsylvania, Michigan, Illinois and Ohio – drew the most income from their sales taxes. New York found income taxes a better producer. Texas received most of its revenue from motor fuel taxes.

Only one state – Colorado – showed a switch in its best revenue source from 1965, moving from the income tax to the sales tax.

Pvt. Anthony Howard

(PK0886) CAMP PENDLETON, Calif. (FHTNC) -- Marine Pvt. Anthony R. Howard, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wallace R. Howard of Route 1, Sikeston, Mo., has completed four weeks of individual combat training at this Marine Corps Base.

During his more than 200 hours of training, he learned about weapons and combat techniques, from combat veteran instructors. They taught him how to conduct combat patrols, detect and remove mines and booby traps and use the standard Marine Corps infantry weapons.

He will now receive at least four weeks of specialist training before being assigned to his first permanent unit. Marines going to combat units will get detailed training in the particular combat skill they are designated for. Those who are going into technical fields will receive their advanced training at one of a variety of technical schools throughout the country.

Goodwin Preserving later was absorbed in a merger but Norbert Miller, who had worked for the company, recently received this note from a resident of Hrdcany, Czechoslovakia.

"Dear Sirs:

"After the second great war there was a help of aid for Czechoslovakia, too. It was in the year 1946-47. You are sure not to believe it but really I have the pleasure to let you know some news about the quality of your products.

DIEHLSTADT NEWS

Health is very good.

Death has once more visited our town and taken away one of our best women, the wife of C.C. Poe. Mrs. Poe was a good, kind and affectionate wife, mother and neighbor. She was loved by all who knew her, never having anything to say about anyone only in the highest terms and that in a christian-like manner. She leaves a husband and three children and a host of friends to mourn her death. Her remains were taken to the Benyard cemetry to await the final resurrection at God's call. The husband and family has the sympathy of the community.

Mrs. Loudermilk is in very critical condition and her recovery is said to be doubtful, but it is to be hoped that she may soon be up again.

D. L. Hindman and Mrs. Emma Smiley, both of this place, were united in marriage last Tuesday at Charleston, by Esq. Stratton.

Weather Reports Aid Traveler

by Leonard F. Hand
Meteorologist
Delta Center

PORTAGEVILLE -- Once the forecast has been read, the next question is "Where is it raining now, and when will wet weather reach our location?" Radar reports give good coverage of rain or shower patterns, but many people find it easier to orient themselves by cities rather than by the area described in the radar summary.

Reports from a number of cities in Missouri and surrounding states are transmitted frequently during the day over the ESSA weather wire. Present weather and temperature, given with each report, pinpoint spots where fair or foul weather exists at that time. By listening attentively, you can follow the progress of showers or even cold fronts by the shift from city to city of rain or temperature drops.

Travelers, particularly during the winter, find these reports an excellent means for anticipating snow or icy conditions as they proceed on their route. Motorists alerted to rainy conditions ahead are ready to reduce speed to avoid hazards of slippery, rain - slicked road surfaces.

Winter travellers can use these reports to plan an alternate route or to decide to turn back when snow, sleet or freezing rain are in progress across their intended path or at their destination. If turning back is not practical, preparations such as installing tire chains can be made before the hazard is encountered.

Service stations could greatly increase their aid to motorists by maintaining a route weather check for transient customers stopping for fuel. The reports are there for your use.

SURE-FIRE LIGHTER, reliable as a kitchen match, was modeled by this pretty mam'selle at a recent gadgets show in Paris. And well it should be, since the invention incorporates the style and mechanical ease of a cigarette lighter with the reliability of ordinary matches, which pop up one at a time for quick use.

ARCHITECTURE in Rome, such as St. Peter's Basilica in the background, draws many an admiring glance. So does the new "Miss Italy," 21-year-old Daniela Giordano, posing prettily on Gianicolo Hill.

Colleges Expand Cooperative Ties

FULTON -- After six years of a successful experiment in sharing faculty, facilities and cultural programs, William Woods College for women and Westminster College for men, two private colleges announced the employment of a full - time administrator and continued expansion of their mutual cooperative program aided by a $97,000 grant from the U.S. department of education.

The new administrator, with the rank of vice - president in both institutions, will be Dr. John V. Bosch, professor of business administration at Westminster, and former executive director of the Mid-Missouri Association of Colleges.

Stoddard NSC's To Have Meetings

BELL CITY - The University of Missouri Extension Service will sponsor a series of meetings to be conducted at the Stoddard County Neighborhood Service Center. The first of these meetings was held Tuesday at the Bell City center.

Fredericka Plummer, area home economist, spoke on money management in the home. Aides and co-ordinators who attended will use the information in their work with families in the community.

The next meeting in the series will be Aug. 16.

Bridge Dispute Not Settled By Hearing

CHAFFEE - A hearing on the slowpace of the highway 77 bridge construction Saturday afternoon apparently settled nothing.

Jack Stapleton of Stanberry, chairman of the state highway commission, and Albert C. Riley of New Madrid, commission member, conducted the hearing at the request of Gov. Warren E. Hearnes.

Mayor Robert H. Capshaw said Stapleton told him after the hearing that he believed the work would be completed this fall.

Traffic on highway 77 has been halted by construction of a bridge over Cotton Belt railroad tracks north of Chaffee for more than a year.

Traffic has been detourned over route M by way of Scott City.

Mayor Capshaw charged that Chaffee merchants had been damaged by the shutdown of the highway. He also charged that the delay in construction "has inconvenienced thousands of people. It has caused numerous wrecks between here and Scott City. In one afternoon three cars overturned in single car accidents.

He said Chaffee residents believe the highway department failed badly and the city had been done an injustice and was hurt without cause.

Citing the use of gumbo soil to build the approaches, the mayor said it is Chaffee's contention that another type of soil was readily available, and if it had been used the highway would have been opened this summer.

W. D. Carney of Sikeston, district 10 highway engineer, defended the work of the R. P. Stephens Construction Co. of Jefferson City, contractor for the project.

A bypass around the construction would cost between $75,000 and $80,000 under highway department estimates and subsequent indications based on the Stephens contract indicate it would have risen to about $100,000, Carney said.

He noted that the contractor had been charged by the highway department's resident engineer with eight working days this summer and with 44 last year until construction halted in November, a total of 52 working days in the past year. The contract calls for completion in 130 working days.

Weather and drying time for the fill have been the principal causes for the delay, it was pointed out.

School Children

A larger proportion of children go to school in Utah than in most U.S. states. Recent figures show that at least 58 per cent of the population over age 25 has completed high school. The national average for the same age is 20 per cent.

Jones Opposes House Passage Of Three Bills

WASHINGTON (AP) — How Missouri members of Congress were recorded as voting on recent roll calls:

Senate

On rejection, 14 to 76, of amendment to limit farm benefit payments and subsidies to a maximum of $10,000 per year to any one producer. Against the amendment — Symington. Not voting — Long.

On passage, 46 to 35, of a bill creating a Great Salt Lake National Monument on Antelope Island. For — Long and Symington.

On rejection, 38 to 45, of amendment to require approval of the Utah legislature for acquisition of state property for the national monument. Against the amendment — Long and Symington.

House

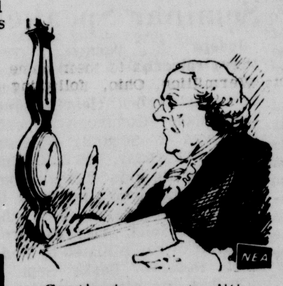
On passage, 283 to 89, of bill extending the life of the Civil Rights Commission. Against: Kennett Democrat.

On passage, 369 to 18, of a bill to create a national water study commission. Against: Jones.

On passage, 271 to 111, of a bill to bar federally chartered or insured banks from selling lottery tickets. Against: Jones.

Whenever the Master could, he stole away
From the great throngs, to seek some quiet place
Where God could come to meet him face to face.
Strange strength is ever born of solitude;
The heart today grows weary of its care,
And overburdened . . . "God, it would be good
To seek a mountainside and find Thee there!"

J. W. Branhall



Continuing a tradition that began with Benjamin Franklin and Thomas Jefferson, thousands of volunteer weathermen daily report temperature and precipitation readings to the U.S. Weather Bureau, says The World Almanac. The volunteers, mostly amateur meteorologists throughout the country, help the bureau maintain accurate information on the climate of the nation.

UNANIMOUS VERDICT: "Great Experience for any boy!"

President Eisenhower, Henry Ford, Thomas Edison, Herbert Hoover, Ford Frick, Benjamin Fairless, Walt Disney, George C. Marshall, Bob Hope and Joe DiMaggio are among the many successful men who were at one time newspaperboys.

The boy who delivers your newspaper — just like these world-famous men — is getting an early business training.

He buys at wholesale, sells at retail and operates his own business. He increases his profits as he builds his route through good service and salesmanship. He even carries his own Accident Insurance.

A newspaper route is a great experience for any boy! No other part-time job will do more to teach him promptness and develop poise and self-confidence.

Your newspaperboy will be ready for the big job opportunities of tomorrow. He is learning the essentials of business success today.

Busy Boys Are Better Boys

If you think your son or some other youngster might profit by similar Newspaperboy experience, why not suggest that he come in and talk to us.

THE DAILY STANDARD

Note to Subscribers: Please have your money ready when your Newspaperboy makes his collections. It will save him time and will also help him maintain his profits.

Giving to the U.S.O. is not an act of absolution.
It will not even up your debt to the young Americans around the world who serve us in the cause of freedom. Give not because of what your gift will do for you, but what it will mean to them.
Give because every U.S.O. club is a friendly arm around a lonely shoulder, far from home.
Give because every visit of a traveling U.S.O. show is a word from home that says "We care!"
Give because 3½ million Americans need the friendship and services that only U.S.O. provides.
Give to U.S.O. through your United Fund or Community Chest. U.S.O. gets no government funds, depends entirely on private contributions.
Someone you know needs U.S.O.

Letters to the Editor

Mr. C. L. Blanton Jr.
Daily Sikeston Standard
Sikeston, Missouri

Dear Mr. Charlie:

One of the high points of every day for me is reading the Daily Sikeston Standard from the front page through the comics. Since I have a son who is fairly active in sports, I eagerly scan the sport page like any other proud father to see his name in the paper after he has participated in a ball game.

Lately there has been an absence of most of the Babe Ruth League games and I am probably more responsible than any one else, since as the scorekeeper, I have not been taking the score books to the police station after each night for the Standard to pick up. For our Babe Ruth Baseball team to compete in any district or State tournaments, many records have to be kept, including official scorebooks of every game. One week before the district tournament was to be held here, one scorebook, which covered about one half of all league games played, was misplaced. All possible places were searched and people were asked but to no avail. Finally it was found in a drawer at the police station. If this book had not been found, our team would have been unable to meet the State Babe Ruth League requirements and would have had to forfit the chance to play for the district championship.

I do not know or care who is to blame, but since that time I have not been leaving the scorebooks for Mr. Jaynes to copy the box scores and insert in the paper.

Mr. Jaynes wrote in his column on Saturday - "We can't spend all morning hunting down scorebooks" - and that brings me to my gripe. If the activities of approximately 90 young men who make up the six Babe Ruth teams is news, why does it have to be delivered to be reported. Other local news media usually have a representative come to part of the games and either get their own information or use the official scorebook at the ballpark. At the District tournament on July 12 and July 13, a Cape Girardeau paper had their sports editor here to cover the game but Mr. Jaynes didn't even have time to hunt for the scorebook.

Mr. Charlie, you and the Standard have always fought for, and supported all of the youth activities, and donated both money and newspaper space to help promote anything for the young people in the community. It will be long-remembered by all persons connected with these activities, and by the youth themselves when they are old enough to comprehend all of the advantages they have been given.

As a father, I want to thank you again for your interest and support in helping our children, and I personally want to thank you for favors done me in the past.

Sincerely yours,
Joe W. Dye

Dear Charles:

I'd like to pass a word for those persons that may be coming to the Expo.

The Expo Lodge upon request had local guest house to contact us for lodging. Upon arrival here, and a deposit before hand, we were disappointed to no ends. Luckey we had a accomodating cab driver that knew of this place list in the above Heading. (Air-View Apartments - 1705 Comartin Street, Saint-Hubert, Montreal - Quebec, Canada.

The apartments are new and the manager is most accomodating. I recommend it with a thought of others that may attend the Expo. I was "con" on the first deal.

Ann Landers

No Ceiling on Her Curiosity

Dear Ann Landers: Am I a dummy or what? A very close friend of mine joined the WACs last year, and she seemed to love it. When she returned for Christmas leave she gave us all a snow job about what a great life she was leading.

Well, last week she came home five months pregnant with no wedding ring. She told everyone that she had become involved with an officer and didn't realize until it was too late that he was married and could not get his freedom. She insists she received an honorable discharge from the WACs.

I say her statement is an insult to the intelligence of a thinking person. That girl must have been discharged dishonorably under the circumstances. Wasn't she? Please answer in print. I want others to see this, too. --- DUMMY?

Dear Dummy: What difference does it make to you if the girl was discharged honorably or not? It so happens that your friend didn't receive a dishonorable discharge from the Army. It was simply an official document separating her from the service.

Dear Ann Landers: I plan to be married in the Fall. The problem is my parents. They want to remodel the back of our home and make an apartment for us.

They have hinted about this for several months and my fiance and I have talked it over and neither of us wants it. We had never said no, straight out -- until last night. It caused a lot of hard feelings and I am sick about it.

My mother called me a selfish brat. She wants to know why we would rather pay out rent money to a stranger than give it to Dad who could use it.

I love my parents very much and have always gotten along weel with them. They have made many sacrifices for me and now I feel like an ungrateful wretch. But, Ann, I really think we would be better off completely on our own. Please tell me if I am right or wrong. I need your thinking. --- NEWSDAY READER

Dear Reader: I believe you and your fiance are entitled to make this decision without being pressured and, in my opinion, you made the right one. The fact that your mother tried to make you feel that you are a selfish brat is pretty good evidence. I hope you will stick to your position and not collapse under the burden of unearned guilt.

Dear Ann Landers: A friend of mine told me about a vinegar diet which sounds wonderful. She lost 10 pounds in two weeks and all she did was drink vinegar in warm water. I think it was equal parts of each. I want to try it but I am a little leery. I know you check with doctors, and I would appreciate your advice in this matter. I like the sound of this diet because vinegar is harmless. Thank you. --- CHUBBY

Dear Chub: Vinegar can kill you if you drink enough of it. Forget about that kooky diet. Excessive acidity can wreck your intestinal system and given you stomach trouble for the rest of your life. If you want to lose weight eat food that has a low calorie count.

What awaits you on the other side of the marriage veil? How can you be sure your marriage will work? Read Ann Landers' booklet "Marriage -- What To Expect." Send your request to Ann Landers in care of this newspaper enclosing 50¢ in coin and a long, stamped, self - addressed envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Reserve Official Seminar Speaker

Joseph C. Wotawa, vice president of the Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis, will speak at a check clearing seminar in the Community meeting room of Security National Bank, Thursday, at 6:30 p.m.

The seminar is being sponsored by the bank in order to acquaint retailers with the change in check clearing procedures to be initiated by Federal Reserve Banks Sept. 1.

On this date, the Federal Reserve Banks will cease the clearing of checks as cash items which do not bear magnetic ink encoding of bank routing symbol.

Wotawa has been associated with the Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis 29 years and heads the Bank's automation department. He is a lecturer at the University of Wisconsin, central states banking school, in Madison.

Parents must accompany their children or send written permission. Transportation will be arranged if needed. Children registered in the summer Head Start program will not be included at this time.

If You Were the Judge

Dentist Can't Be Sued for Trying to Save Tooth

By Jack Strauss, LL.B.

Holding both cheeks in his hands, Pincus arrived at the office of dentist Jones and insisted that he pull out two teeth that were "murdering" him. Instead, the dentist yanked only one tooth and began drilling in the other in an effort to rescue it.

As it developed, Pincus could stand anything but pain. Consequently, when he thought smoke was beginning to come out of his mouth from all the drilling, he went to see another dentist, was told that the maverick tooth could be saved only in a cigar box and had it pulled.

Immediately thereafter, Pincus sued dentist Jones for malpractice.

"He was careless in making me suffer unnecessarily when he should have known that second tooth was a goner," he complained to the judge. "He had me in that chair session after session and while it didn't hurt him, it hurt me plenty."

"I was only trying to do a job," was Jones' answer. "If its remotely possible, I believe in trying to save the tooth, the whole tooth and nothing but the tooth. Surely, I can't be sued for trying."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you permit Pincus to collect for his unfulfilled sessions in the dental chair?

This is how the judge ruled: He sided with the dentist. In doing so, he held that a dentist, exercising care, is not negligent for trying to save a tooth which, in his sound discretion, he feels might be saved.

The Prayer
From The Upper Room

Fight the good fight of faith, lay hold on eternal life. (I Timothy 6:12)

PRAYER: God of grace and God of glory, we read in Thy Word, "The wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." Grant us faith, wisdom, and courage to accept Thy marvelous gift, for the sake of our Savior, Jesus Christ, in whose name we pray. Amen.

CITIZEN'S REQUEST

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) — Gov. Edward T. Breathitt recently inaugurated a Citizen Day during which Kentuckians are invited to drop by his office and talk on any topic.

Among the crowd that showed up was his 8-year-old son, Ned.

"And what can I do for you?" the governor asked.

"Well," his son replied, "you could give me two dimes to use in the candy and soft-drink machines downstairs."

Training for 36 Will Be Provided

KANSAS CITY -- Training as clerk - stenographers will be provided 36 unemployed and under - employment Southeast Missourians in projects under the Manpower Development and Training Act.

Approval of the training was announced today by Secretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz and Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare John W. Gardner.

The 26 weeks of training will be offered in education facilities in the counties of Butler, Carter, Ripley, Dunklin and Pemiscot. The department of labor will allocate $54,856 to the projects, including a sum for allowances for the trainees, to enable them to complete the course.

Referrals to the training will be made by the Missouri division of employment security.

Views Conflict At Newspaper Merger Hearing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jack R. Howard, president of Scripps-Howard Newspapers, said today an antitrust exemption for merger or joint operation of financially failing papers "is vital to the health of the newspaper business."

A publisher from Chattanooga, Tenn., and a professor from Southern Illinois University challenged that view.

They spoke in testimony prepared for the Senate antitrust and monopoly subcommittee.

It is considering legislation to permit the merger or joint commercial operation of newspapers when one of the publications is classified as failing.

Roy McDonald, president and publisher of the Chattanooga News-Free Press, said no matter what name is applied to a joint newspaper operating arrangement, "it is still a monopoly and at this time, no competing media can replace it."

Bryce W. Rucker, a professor of journalism, said, "I fervently hope you will not arm powerful, wealthy men with this weapon with which they may drive the remaining independent publishers to the wall and take over their newspapers. Those giant publishers do not need your help. The small ones do."

Graduate Follow-up Survey Planned

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — Missouri's public high schools graduated 52,298 seniors in 1965 and the State Department of Education will launch a study to find out where they are now, what they are doing and other information.

Commissioner Hubert Wheeler explained last week that the Missouri department of education statewide follow-up study is the first statewide to be conducted in Missouri's public schools.

The work is expected to take about six months.

JULY 4 RUNAWAYS

LOUISVILLE (AP) — Charles and Fred Bauer Jr., who work for the same company, are beginning to feel their homes have a magnetic attraction for runaway cars.

Once, a car came rolling down the street and crashed into Charles' porch.

It happened twice to Fred. Both cars were stolen and both incidents occurred on a July 4.

Today In U. S. History

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Today is Tuesday, July 18, the 199th day of 1967. There are 166 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1940, President Franklin D. Roosevelt was nominated unanimously for a third term by delegates to the Democratic Convention in Chicago.

On this date:

In 1914, the U.S. Army created an aviation section within the Signal Corps.

In 1932, the United States and Canada signed a treaty for the development of the St. Lawrence River into an ocean lane and power project. Opposition delayed actual construction until 1954.

In 1947, President Harry S. Truman signed the Presidential Succession Act.

In 1951, Jersey Joe Walcott knocked out Ezzard Charles in Pittsburgh to win the world heavyweight boxing championship.

In 1963, President John F. Kennedy asked Congress to impose a tax on investments abroad to ease dollar drain.

In 1964, thousands of Negroes rioted in Harlem following the shooting of a Negro youth by a white policeman.

Ten years ago — French Premier Maurice Bourgess-Maunoury received a 280-138 vote of confidence from the French National Assembly on his call for special police powers to combat Algerian rebel terrorism in France.

Five years ago — Military leaders overthrew the government of Peru.

One year ago — Renewed violence wracked the Negro area of Hough on Cleveland's East Side.

Long May Face Another Ethics Panel Session

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Edward V. Long faced the Senate ethics committee on charges he misused a wiretapping probe in a bid to help Teamsters Union President James R. Hoffa.

After a three-hour closed session Monday, Chairman John Stennis, D.Miss., said the ethics panel hasn't formed any conclusions. He indicated another interview was in the offing, but mentioned no date.

Long, a Missouri Democrat, said he volunteered to appear before the bipartisan committee and planned to answer the charges against him— leveled by Life magazine in its May 26 issue— "at the first opportunity."

Life said Long used his subcommittee's investigation in an attempt to keep Hoffa out of jail and later to try to reverse the union leader's conviction. Hoffa, convicted of jury tampering, based his appeal on grounds that evidence against him was obtained through illegal wiretapping.

The magazine said Long received $48,000 from St. Louis lawyer Morris A. Shenker, who represented Hoffa.

Long has acknoweledge receiving the money, but said it resulted from his referral to Shenker of law cases on which the senator— also a lawyer— had worked. He said the cases had nothing to do with Hoffa.

Ferd Stoll. Dexter, Dies

DEXTER -- Services were held Monday at the Dexter Methodist Church for Ferd J. Stoll, owner and operator of the Stoll Hardware and Lumber Co. in Bloomfield.

Conducting the services were the pastor, the Rev. Robert McCoy, and the Rev. Marshall Dark.

Burial was in Dexter cemetery with Rainey Funeral Home in charge.

Stoll, 63, died from a hear attack at 9:15 a.m. Friday in a St. Louis hospital.

He and a group of friends from Bloomfield had gone to St. Louis Thursday to attend a ball game. As he was crossing the street to Busch Stadium, Stoll was stricken. He was rushed to the hospital where he died the following morning.

He was a member of the Dexter Methodist church and of the Bloomfield Chamber of Commerce. He also held membership in the Masonic Lodge at Higginsville.

Stoll was born Feb. 4, 1904, at Lexington. Prior to opening the hardware and lumber company 10 years ago, he was a foreman for International Shoe Company.

Survivors are his wife, Mrs. Marion Peggy Stoll; a daughter, Miss Jane Lynn Stoll, at home, and two brothers, Henry Stoll, Higginsville, and Elmer Stoll, Corder.

PSC Revokes Motor Carrier Permits

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — The Missouri Public Service Commission today revoked 320 interstate motor carrier permits and 31 intrastate permits.

The commission said evidence showed 351 trucking companies had failed to comply with Missouri's insurance coverage requirements or had failed to file annual reports.

When cited for hearings the companies failed to appear or send representatives.

The commission said all the carriers were notified numerous times before today's action.

League Calls for End to Tax on HouseholdGoods

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A resolution urging that the personal property tax on household goods be eliminated is to be presented at the annual meeting of the Missouri Municipal League in Kansas City on September 22.

The league is made up of municipal officials throughout the state.

The league's executive board adopted the resolution at a meeting in St. Louis Monday. The resolution pointed out that "the ease with which the tax is evaded has created a notorious disrespect for it."

The league called for state laws which would provide reasonable assessment procedures for real property. The resolution said there hadn't been a comprehensive reevaluation of real property in some counties for as long as 25 years.

Former Butler Sheriff, Dies

POPLAR BLUFF - William James Brent, 63, former sheriff of Butler county, died of natural causes while in his car on highway 67 near Greenville.

Nursing Home Personnel Hear Panel Program

A panel discussion on "Management of Behavioral Reactions" was conducted this morning at the community room of the Security National Bank with about 75 area nursing home personnel attending.

Moderator of the third of a series of informative meetings for nursing home personnel was Mrs. Henry Etta Mitten, Institutional advisory nurse with the Missouri Division of Health, Poplar Bluff.

Panel members who spoke to the assembled nurses and aides from several area nursing homes were:

Dr. Retus W. Osborn III, superintendent of Farmington State Hospital; Mrs. Jane F. Presnell, director of nursing services at Farmington State Hospital; Donald L. Barton, director of social services department at Farmington, and Mrs. Charlotte LaRose, after care placement director at Farmington State Hospital.

How to detect patients with suicidal tendencies was among the material discussed. Nurses were informed of what signs may indicate that a patient is contemplating suicide, and what they could do to prevent it.

The afternoon program consisted of lectures on trends in charting; housekeeping and sanitation and pharmaceutical services.

There've been some changes made

There was a time when our telephone operators wore "floor duster" dresses and sat on high wooden stools. Not so today.

New equipment and new work techniques have revolutionized the familiar world of "Number, please." And the operating room of the future incorporates the most dramatic and far-reaching changes ever. In these new rooms, there are no plugs, cords or jacks. Instead of being lined up along a multi-position switchboard, operators sit at desk-like consoles widely spaced through the room. Everything is bright and modern.

Already operational in a few Southwestern Bell cities, these newest operating rooms represent more than a change in looks. The new consoles make many new services possible. Customers can dial person-to-person, credit card and collect Long Distance calls. Service is faster and more efficient.

More and more of these new consoles will be installed as time goes by. But despite the changes in equipment and techniques, one thing will remain the same. Our operators will still be dedicated to giving the best possible service to our customers. The "voice with a smile" is as important and meaningful as ever.

Some things just don't need changing.

STEP ON IT, DIRT FLIES AWAY

MIDDLETOWN, Ohio (AP)—Floors of our future homes will have a tremendous — but healthy — appetite for dirt.

So say students of Philadelphia College of Art, participating in a study sponsored by Armco Steel Corporation.

Ingestive, self-cleaning floors will obsolete today's manual devices. Tiny cells activated by easy pressure, such as mere walking, will suck in the dirt and transfer it to ducts under the floor, where forced air will carry it off.

That's not all. Another idea has "nebulizers" fitted in the ceilings to control humidity by emitting vaporized water. The nebulizer will also put out fires, spray chemicals for cleaning and put medication into sickrooms.

Floor and ceiling, it will be a busy place, this house of tomorrow.

ARMED FORCES

PANAMA CITY, Fla. -- Second Lieutenant Norman E. Shepard, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Shepard of R.R. 3, Sikeston, Mo., has been graduated at Tyndall AFB, Fla., from the training course for U.S. Air Force weapons controllers.

Lieutenant Shepard, trained to direct operation and maintenance of ground search and height finding radars, is being assigned to Tyndall. He is a member of the Air Defense Command which protects the U.S. against enemy air attack.

He was commissioned upon completion of Officer Training School at Lackland AFB, Tex., in 1967.

A 1961 graduate of Sikeston Senior High School, he attended the University of Missouri at Rolla. He received his B.A. degree in 1965 from Union University, Jackson, Tenn. He also studied at Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, Louisville, Ky. He is a member of Alpha Tau Omega.

His wife, Johnnie, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Tribble of 1771 Alta Vista, Memphis.

USS BRAINE (FHTNC) -- Midshipman Third Class Dan M. Nichols, son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Nichols of 320 Rannells St., Dexter, Mo., is participating in a six - week Summer Training Cruise as a crewmember aboard the destroyer USS Braine operating in the Pacific Ocean.

During the cruise he will gain first - hand experience in navigation, gunnery, operations, seamanship and other facets of shipboard life essential to a naval officer.

Eighteen ships of the U.S. Pacific Fleet's Cruiser - Destroyer Force are participating in the midshipman training and are scheduled to visit west coast cities of both the U.S. and Canada.

Midshipman Nichols entered the University of Missouri in Columbia in 1966 and will be commissioned an ensign in the Navy upon graduate in 1971.

BLYTHEVILLE AIR FORCE BASE, ARK. -- A record crowd of 20,000 people from Blytheville, the surrounding area, Missouri, and Tennessee, visited Blytheville Air Force Bases' 1967 Annual Open House yesterday evening to make what base officials say, "the biggest Air Force one-day public eventever held in Northeast Arkansas."

Before the base gates were officially opened at 3:30 p.m., hundreds of cars lined the access road waiting to get in.

"We sponsor this event annually especially in the interest of our civilian neighbors to give them an accurate report on Air Force aerospace progress," said Colonel Eugene D. Minietta, 97th Bomb Wing commander. "This year's open house was certainly one of the better ones, if not the best we ever sponsored. We were all very pleased with the civilian turnout."

Highlighted by the world famous Thunderbirds, the United States Air Force official aerospace demonstration team, the event also had several other special attractions including the Strategic Air Command Drill Team, the Screaming Eagles sky divers from Fort Campbell, Ky., a judo demonstration and a four - plane minimum interval takeoff.

Special static displays of several types of aircraft and equipment remained on display throughout the 3 1/2 hour event.

"Crowd reception of every event was excellent," said Colonel Minietta.

Blytheville Mayor Tom Little headed a civilian dignitary delegation that included County Judge A. A. (Shag) Banks, Dr. John W. Hard, president of Blytheville's Chamber of Commerce, and Mr. Robert Wade.

FT. MCCLELLAN, ALA. (AHTNC) -- Private Janet E. Freeland, whose parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jack O. Holt, live on Route 2, Charleston, Mo., completed eight weeks of basic training at the Women's Army Corps Center, Ft. McClellan, Ala., June 30.

She received instruction in Army history and traditions, administrative procedures, military justice, first aid and field training.

U.S. ARMY, VIETNAM (AHTNC) -- Army Specialist Four Calvin Walker, 20, son of Mrs. Florence L. Coleman, Route 1, Bell City, Mo., is participating in "Operation Pershing" in Vietnam.

He and other members of the 1st Air Cavalry Division have evacuated more than 19,000 refugees from coastal areas to numerous refugee centers in secured areas as well as inflicting heavy damage on the Viet Cong.

During the search and clear operation, he was engaged in dragging the VC from their vast network of tunnels and bunkers. They had been driven underground by constant U.S. artillery and air strikes.

Spec. Walker, a message center clerk, is assigned to Headquarters Company of the division's 2nd Brigade.

Follow-up Study Of Graduates

JEFFERSON CITY --- Missouri's public high schools graduated 52,298 seniors in 1965. A search is about to be launched in an effort to locate some 36,000 of them.

The State Department of Education wants to know what these former students are doing; if they had made in their past year of school.

Commissioner Hubert Wheeler explained this week that the Missouri Department of Education and a newly - formed committee of prominent educators would conduct a statewide follow-up study involving most of the State's public high school graduates of 1965.

Why bother with such a survey -- why the class of '65? Wheeler had these answers:

"The State Department of Education, educators in many of our public school districts, personnel at our institutions of higher learning, other state departments of education and the U. S. Office of Education have found it apparent that a lack of information -- considered with such facts as increased school population, a great expansion in the field of education and rapid changes in the business world of today -- emphasizes the need for a follow-up of our high school graduates."

Wheeler said that, primarily, a questionnaire would be utilized together the former seniors' information.

"In the near future," he said, "we will mail questionnaires to all school districts representing about 36,000 young men and women." The Commissioner noted that the Class of 1965 was chosen -- as opposed to 1966 -- because it was felt that the number of months involved (1965 to time of survey) would allow more comparative data and more useful information for planning purposes in the local school districts and the state.

Plans for the follow - up study are completed by the Department of Education, Washington, D.C. in order to be eligible for federal school-aid funds.

"It should also be noted," Wheeler emphasized, "that the Vocational Education Act of 1963 gives the States the incentive to carry our such a statewide study as the one we are about to begin."

The Act specifies that the studies should be conducted by a guidance staff with the assistance of other vocational personnel.

The Guidance Section of the State Department of Education will initiate the study, with assistance coming from the Missouri Department of Education.

Is there a positive relationship existing between aptitude test scores, course grades and success on the job?

Are students who make vocational decisions based upon aptitude test scores and inventories more likely to continue those who made this decision without the aid of these instruments?

What happens to the individual who does not continue in college after the first semester -- where does he go?

What types of services does he have or need?

These are some of the things we need to know," Wheeler added, "if we, as educators, are to successfully plan for the future."

State Department of Education records indicate that this is the first statewide follow - up to be conducted in Missouri's public schools.

According to Wheeler, there have been "a few in some of the districts over the years, but few will mail questionnaires to these were not coordinated and the findings were not shared with the other schools across the State."

The Department of Education expects to complete the study in about six months. Questionnaires will be mailed to parents of graduates about two weeks after the close of school. The information would be made available to the statewide follow - up advisory committee are;

Clyde Baer, Kansas City; David Berryman, Springfield; Gene Engelhardt, Lindbergh, Dr. W. R. Miller, University of Missouri, Columbia; Laurence E. Phelps, Macon; Jack Ray, Kirksville, Dean L. G. Townsend, University of Missouri, Columbia; Lynn Twitty, Sikeston, and William J. Underwood, Lee's Summit.

Harold Reed, U. S. Office of Education, Washington, D. C., also is a member of the committee.

Miss Universe Hopes Friends Will Forget

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) -- Sylvia Hitchcock hopes that when her reign ends and she returns to school her classmates will forget she was Miss Universe.

"I'd rather be Sylvia," said the stunning 21-year-old brunette whose admirers say her smile convinced the judges she was the loveliest of the 56 contestants.

She will be a senior when she returns to the University of Alabama after her reign.

Sylvia, whose 5-foot-7 1/2inches are packed nicely into a 35 1/2 - 24 1/2 - 36 1/2 frame, started life as a loser in beauty contests. She was the runnerup in a "Miss Smile" contest, a finalist in a teen-age beauty contest and usually a member of the court in high school beauty contests.

Sylvia edged out Venezuela's Marisela Perez Branguc for the crown. Third was England's Jennifer Lewis, followed by Finland's Ritva Helena Ishto and Israel's Batya Kabiri.

I was extremely negligent about writing to my mother while I was stationed in the States. When I was sent to Korea, I reported my safe arrival and my good luck in finding a Korean houseboy to do my chores.

Mother's next letter bore this postscript: "Give your houseboy an extra 25 cents and have him write your mother once a week for you."

Council Changes Names

In a special meeting of the City Council Monday evening at the city administration building, the council voted to change the name of the Board of Public Works office to the Sikeston Light and Water Office.

The name of the governing Board of Directors was changed to the Board of Municipal Utilities, and E. R. Inman, whose former title was manager is now called director.

Only the terminology was changed. The functions of the office, the board and the director remain the same.

Miller said the names were changed, mainly because it was a misnomer as applied to the utility office.

Miller also noted that he probably would create a department of public works to include the functions of the street department, plus the construction of storm sewers, and electrical, plumbing inspection and building inspections.

The city passed a resolution to show support of the proposal of Sun Airline Corp. to provide commuter passenger service at the Sikeston Municipal Airport.

The council also agreed to allow the Downtown Merchants Association to block off Front Street from Kingshighway to Stoddard and New Madrid Street from Malone to Center streets Aug. 10 and 11 for a sidewalk sale during the Bootheel Rodeo.

An ordinance accepting the incorporation of the city's housing ordinance into the municipal code of the city was passed. The housing ordinance had not been included through an oversight previously.

Six final ordinances accepting work done on resurfacing of streets and calling for the issuance of tax bills to property owners were passed. The ordinance were for the following streets:

1. Installation of 6" soil cement with curb and gutter on both sides of Gladys St. from Pine to Ingram.

2. Application of 2" hot mix asphalt surface to a 7" soil cement base to Ingram Road from Ables road north to the existing pavement.

3. Application of 1-1/2" hot mix asphalt to a 6' soil cement base, and installation of curb and guttering on both sides of Kendall Street from Handy street to South West street.

4. Application of 1-1/2" hot asphalt mix to a 6" soil cement base and installation of curb and guttering on both sides of Lee street from Jaycee street to a point 700 feet east.

5. Application of 1-1/2" hot asphalt mix to a 6" soil cement base on Oklahoma street from Missouri to Broadway.

6. Application of 1-1/2" hot asphalt mix to Warner Street from Hardin to Murray Lane.

Bids were received for a project to widen Greer street by six feet on the north side from Main to Pine. Cowan-Holman Construction Co. submitted the low bid of $6,925.50. Other bids received on the project were: Flaire Ferrell, $7,749.60, and Bob Patterson of Central Contractors, $10,080.

Flaire Ferrell submitted the low bid on a project to install curb and guttering on both sides of Smith Avenue from Main to Ingram. His bid was $9,947.70. Other bids on the project were: Bob Patterson, $10,750, and Cowan-Holman, $10,118.40.

The council also approved the application of a transfer of a 5 per cent beer license from Ira Woods to C.D. Russell, operator of "Russell's Bulldog Inn." The establishment formerly was called "Ira & Louise's."

In other action, the council passed a resolution calling for the application of blade mix asphalt surfacing to Watson street from Lillian drive east to the existing pavement at a cost of 50 cents per square foot.

Agreement also was reached on a proposal that the city and the Chamber of Commerce have a joint membership represent Sikeston on the SEMO toll road association.

Teachers Will Study New Charleston High School

CHARLESTON -- Team teaching training programs will be held at the new 1,000 - student high school commencing Monday Supt. Thomas U. Wells of the Charleston R-1 school district announced.

The Monday through Friday sessions will continue through Aug. 11.

Academic area workshops for junior and senior high school teachers will be held at the high school, beginning Aug. 21.

A kindergarten building near the high school will be the location for elementary teacher in-service training sessions.

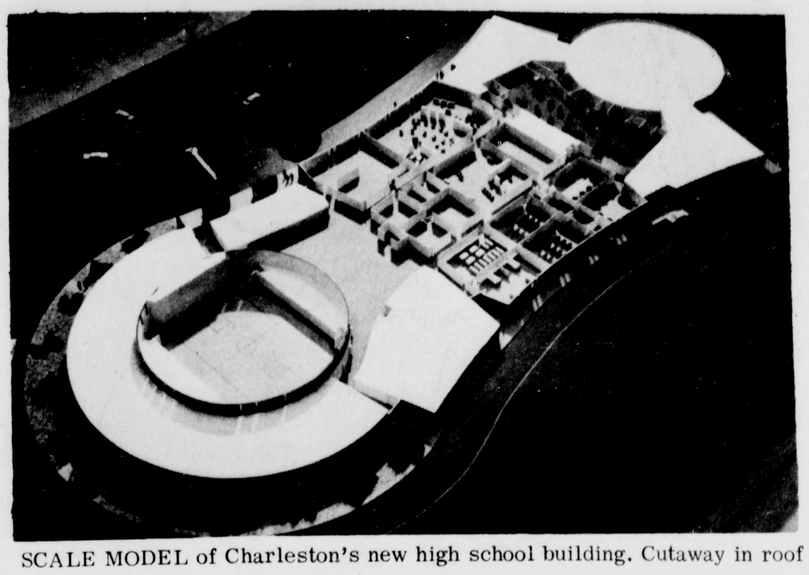
Topics for the sessions will be: modern mathematics, July 31-Aug. 11) led by William Heck, director of mathematics for the Robinsdale, Minn., schools; and science, Aug. 14-25, led by Dr. Gordon Bliss of Southern Illinois University, Edwardsville.

Session leaders for the high school training programs will include Dr. Dale Snook, Lincoln, University of Nebraska, physical education; Dr. Milton Beckman, University of Nebraska, mathematics, Dr. Gerald Abegg, Kansas State College, Science; Ray Trenholm, University of Omaha, Music; John Patterson, Jefferson City, Missouri, state department of education, special education; Richard Stokes, Missouri state department of education, Art; Dr. William Frank, Cape Girardeau, Southeast Missouri State College, language arts and Ted Rohr, Southeast Missouri State College, Audio - Visual.

Dr. J. Lloyd Trump, Washington, D.C., associate secretary of the National Association of secondary school principals, will address the conferring teachers Aug. 10.

Charleston R-1 School district administrators responsible for coordination of the conference include Superintendent Wells, Assistant Superintendents Louis W. Chaney and Bill E. Sellers, and Federal Coordinator Frank A. Hudson. Other conference participants will include Mrs. Mabel McLaughlin and Ronald Miller, team teachers from Seattle, Wash.; and Dr. Donald Hair, assistant superintendent of schools, Kansas City.

The conference will include general sessions, film showings, panel discussions, small group meetings and individual work sessions. A prime purpose of the conference is to acquaint teaching staff members with the extraordinarily high number of progressive and innovative features contained in Charleston's new high school, and to suggest how such features can improve the quality and extent of meaningful teacher - student relationships. The revolutionary new building will itself be the subject of study.



SCALE MODEL of Charleston's new high school building. Cutaway in roof shows interior arrangement.

The new high school, designed by Pearce and Pearce, Inc., school architects headquartered in St. Louis, is the product of combined efforts of Charleston school administrators, the architects, and the school planning laboratory of the college of education of the University of Tennessee at Knoxville.

"Unusual as the school may appear, however, it is not an experimental building," Superintendent Wells reports. "Rather, it incorporates most if not all of the most advanced thinking about the functionally effective high school both for today and well into the twenty-first century."

Advancements cited by Wells include team teaching, focusing on the individual, large group instruction, extensive use individual study, promotion of outstanding teacher - student relationships, tracking, variable block scheduling, provision for a student activity period as part of each week's schedule, a closed campus lunch, emphasis on English and social studies, enrichment of the curriculum, provision of resource centers accessible at all times during the school day, stress on quality instruction, elimination of study halls as such, and attention to aesthetics as well as effective function of the building.

The new high school is carpeted and air conditioned. For maximum flexibility, it contains virtually no interior bearing walls; spaces are instead defined by means of movable furniture and equipment. There are few doors inside the building, since students and teachers will be moving frequently from one study area to another. There are virtually no windows. Specially designed electrically powered heat pumps provide year round climate control.

Charleston R-1 School District board members are: James C. Moreton, president; Robert C. Jackson, vice - president; and Robert G. DeLaney, Mrs. W. Clifton Banta, Dennis Quertermous and Miss Helen Currin, members.

U.S. Seeks to Arrange Neutral POW Inspection

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States has asked the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong to permit neutral inspection of their prisoners of war.

Voicing concern over the treatment of some 180 captured U.S. soldiers and civilians, the White House said claims "of the National Liberation Front and the North Vietnamese that they are treated humanely" cannot be verified because neutral observers have not been allowed to visit the prisoners.

The statement Monday said more than 20 Americans are believed held prisoner by the Viet Cong, or National Liberation Front. More than 160 U.S. servicemen, mostly airmen, are known to be imprisoned in North Vietnam.

The White House also urged return of sick and wounded prisoners under terms of the Geneva Convention on prisoners of war.

The statement suggested that the International Committee of the Red Cross, which it said inspects prisoners taken by U.S. or South Vietnamese forces, should be allowed to visit captured American personnel.

Meanwhile eight House Republicans, who last week urged a step by step de-escalation of the Vietnam war, said, "We are not yet convinced that Hanoi has no interest in peace."

"But we are convinced," Rep. F. Bradford Morse, R-Mass., told the House, "that the possibility has not been tested by creative and sensitive U.S. diplomacy."

Their proposal calls for stopping all bombing north of the 21st Parallel for 60 days. If Hanoi responded with a similar de-escalation, bombing then would be stopped north of the 20th Parallel and so on through five steps.

Three Cellmates Blamed For Setting Prison Fire

MILTON, Fla. (AP) — Convicts under shotgun guard have testified that three cellmates deliberately set the prison fire that burned 37 inmates to death.

Among those who died were the three accused of setting the blaze.

As the formal inquest into the Sunday night fire at State Prison Road Camp 12 at Jay, Fla., started in Santa Rosa County Courthouse, 22 bodies sacked in olive drab body bags lay outside the old county jail awaiting positive identification.

The coroner's inquest will decide if criminal negligence or homicide was involved in the tragedy.

On the table before County Judge Mahlon McCall Monday were the prison files of all 51 men who had been in the locked and barred barracks at Camp 12. Of the 51, eight were in the county jail unharmed, six were in hospitals with burns and 37 had perished.

The convicts testified that it was about six minutes after the fire started before guard A.O. Lovett unlocked the barred "cage door" and a solid wooden door to let them flee.

Lovett took the stand and testified that a smashing, shouting disturbance broke out first and he ran to toss the keys over a high barbed-wire fence to guard Richard E. Cobb, who used them to unlock the prison arsenal.

"We had to get longer guns," Lovett said.

When he saw the fire and returned, Lovett said, "I made four passes before I could open the door. It was so hot I had trouble seeing."

Convict Roy G. Regan, 26, said, "I heard the screaming. That's when I looked up and saw the whole wall was afire and it started to roll down the ceiling at me."

Regan and the other prisoner witnesses, some of whom came to court shirtless, others with T-shirts marked by ash and smoke, called the names of the three men who they said turned the 40-by 90-foot wooden barracks into a funeral pyre.

The trio who allegedly set the tragic blaze was identified to the coroner's jury as Joseph Earl Wynder, a Negro, and Thomas E. Ard and Earl Evans, both white men. All were from the Pensacola area.

Wynder was sentenced to prison from Calhoun County for grand larceny and burglary. Information on convictions of Ard and Evans was not immediately available.

The convict witnesses said Wynder, Ard and Evans used newspapers and toilet tissue to start their fires after a television set and fluorescent lights were smashed.

But Lovett said the resentment began when a pornographic book was confiscated from Ard.

Lovett, 49, who has been a prison guard for a year, entered the burning building and herded five frightened men outside. He was burned in the rescue but not severely.

Hopes Dim for U.N. Agreement

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — Prospects faded today for adoption by the U.N. General Assembly of a resolution calling for Israeli troops to withdraw from Arab territory seized in the June war.

Syrian Ambassador George J. Tomeh told the assembly's special session on the Middle East that all the Arab states maintain their refusal to recognize the state of Israel.

Israeli Foreign Minister Abba Eban replied this "strengthens my government's resolve not to respond to any request or interest from these states until or unless there is an explicit recognition of Israel's statehood, sovereignty and territorial rights."

The Latin-American group of 23 nations adopted a passive attitude toward its negotiations with the Soviet Union for a resolution on Israeli withdrawal that could get the two-thirds vote necessary for approval.

Assembly President Abdul Rahman Pazhwak of Afghanistan told the assembly if no agreement was reached by then, it should end the special session. There was no objection, and it appeared that the issues left unsettled would be returned to the Security Council.

As the vanguard of the 33-man U.N. observer team began surveillance of the Suez Canal cease-fire line between Israeli and Egyptian forces, an Israeli-Egyptian dispute over Israel's intention to put patrol boats on the canal threatened the operation.

Israel claimed it had the right to patrol the waters on the eastern side of the canal. Egypt warned that it would open fire on any boats the Israelis launched. Egyptian Ambassador Mohamed Awad El Kony told Secretary-General U Thant by letter Israel had placed nine boats on the east shore of the Bitter Lakes, which form part of the southern half of the canal.

Reports in Vienna said Soviet Communist party chief Leonid I. Brezhnev and Premier Alexei N. Kosygin had urged the leaders of the other European Soviet bloc companies at their meeting last week to contribute more to the aid of the war-battered Arab economies but the smaller Communist governments were unenthusiastic.

Israel exchanged 361 Syrian soldiers and 230 Syrian civilians for an Israeli pilot captured by the Syrians during the war, the bodies of two other Israeli pilots shot down June 5, an 18-year-old Israeli civilian who disappeared on a flower-collecting tour last September, and an Israeli Arab who said he was kidnaped from his home in Nazareth almost seven years ago.

Morse to Head Rail Conciliation

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson named a conciliation board today to try to solve the railroad dispute. He also called for another home-front effort to stimulate employment and opportunities for the poor, in order to avoid what he termed more Wattses and Newarks.

And in the international arena, the President told a suddenly arranged news conference that the United States still stands ready at any moment to negotiate on a Vietnamese settlement. But, he said, it has no signs that Hanoi is willing.

The President declined to get into a detailed discussion of consultations with Vietnamese allies on increasing troop levels for the war but said that "we are in constant touch."

With respect to the Middle East, Johnson conceded that the United States has been unable to get an agreement to hold down arms shipments to the Israelis and Arabs, as he proposed.

Advised of Great Britain's announcement of her intentions to withdraw from Malaya and Singapore in the 1970s, Johnson said that "we have expressed ourselves as very hopeful the British would maintain their position in that part of the world and would hope they would find it useful to do so."

For the panel to try to solve the dispute that brought on a two-day nationwide rail strike, Johnson named a five-member board under the chairmanship of Sen. Wayne Morse, D-Ore., a man on whom he has called in the past for similar duties.

During the night, the President said, he got in touch with Fred Kappel, retired president of American Telephone and Telegraph Co., in Switzerland; with mediator Theodore Kheel in Paris; with AFL-CIO President George Meany in Miami Beach, and with retired Republican Sen. Leverett Saltonstall of Massachusetts. They will serve under Morse.

"Of course we are very hopeful we can get an agreement between the parties," Johnson said.

And he said he would be in touch with Morse during the day and with some of the others.

Also on the domestic scene, the President stood pat on this time on his bid for adding 6 per cent to income tax bills. But he left the way open for some adjustments.

But the President preferred not to go into factors which might call for more than a 6 per cent surtax.

The President said that were it not for tax reductions put in during his occupancy of the White House, Americans would be paying $24 billion more in taxes now.

"We do not think it unreasonable to ask them to return a small portion," he said. This is needed, he said, for both domestic programs in the field of poverty as well as for the war in Vietnam and foreign aid.

"We think it would be good from the standpoint of defense and the economy," Johnson said.

Asked for his views on what has happened in New Jersey — the rioting and killings that focused around Newark and spread to such points as Plainfield — Johnson said he had no more information than his questioners.

He went on to say, though, that we have a great need to see that people are employed, that there are more opportunities that are equal, that there is better education and housing.

Bluff Securities Firm Suspended

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — James C. Kirkpatrick, secretary of state, announced today that Investors Securities Associates, Inc., of Poplar Bluff, Mo., has been suspended as a dealer in securities.

Suspended also are: Judson Stokley, president; W. Don Bristow, secretary-treasurer; Robert E. Singleton, vice-president, Joseph M. Bumpus, vice-president, all of Poplar Bluff and Warren O. McIntyre, vice-president of Mexico, Mo.

The suspensions resulted from the alleged neglect and refusal of Investors Securities Associates, Inc., its officers and agents, to make a complete settlement to persons for whom they sold securities, and the alleged failure and refusal to deliver securities purchased and paid for by customers. In addition the company is charged with selling unregistered securities in Growth of America Investment Co.

Those charged have 20 days to file a written request for a hearing.

Cairo Alert But Quiet After Night of Violence

By Warren Sokolis

CAIRO -- It was quiet in this Southern Illinois city last night as law enforcement officers prepared for another night of racial violence.

State and city police and sheriff's officers patrolled the city in squad cars -- four to each car - wearing riot helmets and armed with riot guns.

Monday night's alert was the result of racial violence Sunday night in which about $75,000 worth of property was destroyed by fires.

Fire bombs destroyed gasoline bulk station warehouse and damaged three retail stores and a merchandise warehouse.

A witness said in at least one instance a bomb was thrown by a group of Negroes.

Two versions of the motives for the gasoline bombing were aired.

Preston E. Ewing, president of the Cairo chapter of the NAACP, said the death by hanging of a Negro absent without leave soldier in city jail touched off violence he said had been "brewing for some time."

A witness to one bombing said he believed the bombings were intended to bring pressure on Cairo businesses to hire Negroes in clerking and other white collar jobs, the Associated Press reported.

The witness said delegations of Negroes called on Cairo businesses last week asking them to give more employment to members of their race.

The soldier, Robert Hunt Jr., 19, was found hanged in his cell early Sunday morning. He was reported awol from Ft. Bragg, N.C., and was being held for military authorities.

Coroner Leo Siers said Hunt apparently hanged himself with his shirt.

A Cairo fireman reported six fires were caused by gasoline bombs. One fire destroyed the old Missouri Pacific warehouse, which contained petroleum products and antifreeze.

Last night several businessmen boarded up their shop windows in anticipation of more violence.

Bars were ordered by law enforcement officers not to sell alcoholic beverages and a 10 p.m. curfew was imposed.

Woman Injured In Accident

LaVonne Downey, 28, route two, Sikeston, is reported in satisfactory condition today in Missouri Delta Community hospital after suffering three or four broken ribs in an auto accident Monday afternoon on East Malone, police said.

The car she was driving east on East Malone collided with an automobile driven by Sherma J. Gulledge, 17, East Prairie, as it turned from Country Club drive onto East Malone, police reported. No summons was issued at the time of the accident. Police said the mishap occurred at 4:06 p.m.

In other police activity, Frank Mullin, Blodgett, was charged Monday with public intoxication.

Albert D. Adams, St. James, was charged by police Monday with peace disturbance.

Euvion Dozier, route two, Sikeston, was charged with peace disturbance early today.

Samuel Hurn, 356 Magnolia, was charged Monday with peace disturbance, and Nora Willis, Poplar Bluff, was arrested today and charged with peace disturbance, police reported.

Trains Rolling Again As President Signs Back-to-Work Law

WASHINGTON (AP) — The first nationwide rail strike in 20 years ended and trains began moving today after a two-day lieup was broken by a federal back-to-work law.

The new law signed by President Johnson Monday night after hasty enactment by Congress requires compulsory settlement if necessary to end a long dispute over wages.

The word to stop the strike spread rapidly across the country after the President acted. Pickets began withdrawing a short time later and many of the commuter trains in big metropolitan areas resumed operations.

A few traffic snarls remained but for the most part officials reported vital materials needed in Vietnam were back on the rails and passenger trains that were halted by the strike took up their journeys where they left off Sunday.

The leaders of six striking shopcraft unions ordered members to heed the back-to-work law.

The White House said Labor Secretary W. Willard Wirtz conferred with leaders of all six unions and afterwards J.E. "Doc" Wolfe, chief negotiator for the railroads, said he was informed the unions ordered membership compliance with the law.

But an official of the Southern Railway said it obtained a court order today enjoining a continuaance of the strike after workers set up additional picket lines.

The Southern Railway spokesman said Judge Frank W. Wilson of the U.S. District Court in Chattanooga, Tenn., issued the order and set a hearing on it for Wednesday morning. Picket lines were reported crumbling elsewhere following enactment of the measure.

"This will enable the products of our farms and factories to move freely once more," said President Johnson in signing the law Congress hastily passed Monday to end the first nationwide rail walkout in 20 years.

"It will permit vitally needed arms and supplies to be sent to our fighting forces in Vietnam — without interruption," Johnson said.

It also requires a government-imposed settlement of the wage dispute if unions and management don't reach their own agreement within 90 days.

A union leader angrily called the law "the strike-breaking act of 1967" but members of six shopcraft unions began obeying it by returning to work a little more than 48 hours after the strike began.

Union Pacific and Great Northern railroad officials said pickets were withdrawn, and a union official said strikers were ready to return to their jobs on the Burlington Railroad.

But pickets remained in many cities, where strikers said they were awaiting official word from their union chiefs before going back to their jobs.

Machinists' official J.A. Nesbett of Pine Bluff, Ark., said it would take a federal court order to get his men back to work.

Even where a quick return to work was expected, railroad officials weren't sure they could get commuter trains running in time for the morning rush of passengers.

The law forbids resumption of any strike for the 90 days in which a White House board will seek a voluntary settlement, and the board could extend this as late as Jan. 1, 1969, by invoking the compulsory settlement provision. The board could also impose a mandatory settlement for a shorter period.

Some 137,000 machinists, electricians, boilermakers, carmen and firemen and oilers seek wage hikes of 6.5 per cent this year and 5 per cent next year, plus 12.5 cents per hour each year for higher skilled men.

They now average $2.94 per hour, with skilled men getting an average $3.05.

The railroads' last reported offer was a 6 per cent wage hike over 18 months plus one 5-cent hike for skilled workers.

Johnson has not yet appointed the five-man board, but said it will be a blue-ribbon panel subservient to neither labor nor management.

The strike shunted hundreds of thousands of train commuters to other transportation, left thousands of freight car loads of perishable foods in danger of rotting on railroad sidings, kept harried postal clerks busy shifting mail to planes and trucks and blocked shipments of ammunition and other war goods destined for Vietnam.

Some firms dependent on rail shipments shut their doors for lack of supplies.

The strike, virtually 100 per cent effective, spurred Congress into passing the law it had haggled over for more than a month. The Senate previously passed the measure as presented by the White House, but the House knocked out the provision for compulsory settlement if a voluntary agreement couldn't be reached.

Congress twice previously had ordered strike delays in the year-old wage dispute.

Despite the pre-strike indecision of Congress, the law sailed through quickly Monday under the pressure of what Senate Republican Leader Everett M. Dirksen called "the chastening and sobering" reality of the nationwide walkout.

Only a few members in the House and Senate urged a law to end the strike without the provision for a compulsory settlement if that becomes necessary.

Former Brazilian President Killed

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — Former President Humberto Castello Branco was killed today in the collision of a Brazilian air force jet and a small private plane in which he was a passenger, the National Security Council announced.

It said the 66-year-old retired army m 1, who took over the government in a military coup in 1964, died near Fortaleza in his home state of Ceara, in northeast Brazil.

Great London, including the 28 metropolitan boroughs, comprises 443, 455 acres. The original old city consists of 675 acres.

Two Bound to Circuit Court in Burglary Case

Preliminary hearings were waived today in Magistrate Court in Sikeston for two Sikeston men charged with burglary in connection with the theft of two shotguns from the Herman Dees residence.

John Sanders, 123 West St., and David Jones, route four, Sikeston, were each bound over to appear July 27, in Circuit Court.

Magistrate M. E. Montgomery presided. Assistant prosecuting attorney Tom Gilmore represented the state in cases heard.

Harvey Huse, 510 W. Gladys, charged with careless and reckless driving, dismissed on payment of costs.

Frank E. Felker, Painton, careless and imprudent driving, dismissed on payment of costs.

Walter Moore, Sikeston, charged with burglary and larceny, dismissed and costs certified.

Odis Seabaugh, Sikeston, fraud, dismissed and costs certified.

Jeanette Moore, 737 Greer, charged with cashing an insufficient funds check, dismissed on payment of costs.

Wilbert A. Gossett Jr., 842 E. Gladys, charged with leaving the scene of an accident, set for preliminary hearing next Tuesday in magistrate court.

Donald Fauller, Sikeston, charged with burglary and stealing, set for preliminary hearing next Tuesday in magistrate court.

Four Injured In Accidents

Four were treated for arm and leg injuries Monday at the Missouri Delta Community hospital.

Bobbie R. Leathers, Dexter, fell from tree and injured an elbow; Tammy McCain, caught ankle in bicycle spoke; Linda C. Wilson, fell from moving car and injured arm; Geneva E. Beal, cut hand on knife.

Rolwing Reviews Legislature's Acts

State Rep. David Rolwing of Charleston ticked off accomplishments of the legislature at the Rotary club meeting last night in the Rustic Rock Inn and said that 23 of 25 of Gov. Warren E. Hearnes' proposals were enacted.

He expressed belief that the two which bogged down in the session probably did not concern the governor greatly because they attracted so much controversy.

One bill, which died in the session, would permit an unemployed father to live at home while his children drew aid to dependent children funds. Rolwing explained that this should strengthen family life and that safeguards were provided to prevent abuses.

Another loss was a shared time school bill which became embroiled in a controversy over separation of church and state.

Rolwing said that the legislature did "a real good job of taking care of special interests," and spent more than a billion dollars but he observed that the state did no deficit spending.

He defended a new law raising legislator salaries from $4,800 to $8,400 as needed to attract "better representation."

The new toll road law as described as the legislature's most significant accomplishment. He criticized a provision which under state road trust funds could be tapped to build the new highways but noted that any gasoline tax funds used would be reimbursed after payment is completed on the roads.

He said that Missouri with 33,000 miles of road to maintain - second only to New York state - had done a good job considering income.

Othe legislative action included congressional redistricting, new insurance and banking laws, implementation of medicare, sales tax exemption of pesticides and herbicides, additional funds for the Delta center at Portageville.

Rolwing expressed disappointment that a crime study bill "got lost" in the session.

The club will consider forming an intereact club for high school students at its next meeting. The July 31 meeting will be a family night at the Country club.

Harold Rabin of Belle Glade, Fla., was a visiting Rotarian.

Charles Green led the singing with Mary Anne Bruce at the piano.

Alex Waters presided in absence of President Fred Koch.

DREW PEARSON AND JACK ANDERSON SAY:
Congressmen are scared stiff by Farm Bureau; they rebuke Rep. Resnick for tangling with tax-free lobby; their vote raises question of congressional ethics.

Council Changes Names

In a special meeting of the City Council Monday evening at the city administration building, the council voted to change the name of the Board of Public Works office to the Sikeston Light and Water Office.

The name of the governing Board of Directors was changed to the Board of Municipal Utilities, and E. R. Inman, whose former title was manager is now called director.

Only the terminology was changed. The functions of the office, the board and the director remain the same.

Miller said the names were changed, mainly because it was a misnomer as applied to the utility office.

Miller also noted that he probably would create a department of public works to include the functions of the street department, plus the construction of storm sewers, and electrical, plumbing inspection and building inspections.

The city passed a resolution to show support of the proposal of Sun Airline Corp. to provide commuter passenger service at the Sikeston Municipal Airport.

The council also agreed to allow the Downtown Merchants Association to block off Front Street from Kingshighway to Stoddard and New Madrid Street from Malone to Center streets Aug. 10 and 11 for a sidewalk sale during the Bootheel Rodeo.

An ordinance accepting the incorporation of the city's housing ordinance into the municipal code of the city was passed. The housing ordinance had not been included through an oversight previously.

Six final ordinances accepting work done on resurfacing of streets and calling for the issuance of tax bills to property owners were passed. The ordinance were for the following streets:

1. Installation of 6" soil cement with curb and gutter on both sides of Gladys St. from Pine to Ingram.

2. Application of 2" hot mix asphalt surface to a 7" soil cement base to Ingram Road from Ables road north to the existing pavement.

3. Application of 1-1/2" hot mix asphalt to a 6" soil cement base, and installation of curb and guttering on both sides of Kendall Street from Handy street to South West street.

4. Application of 1-1/2" hot asphalt mix to a 6" soil cement base and installation of curb and guttering on both sides of Lee street from Jaycee street to a point 700 feet east.

5. Application of 1-1/2" hot asphalt mix to a 6" soil cement base on Oklahoma street from Missouri to Broadway.

6. Application of 1-1/2" hot asphalt mix to Warner Street from Hardin to Murray Lane.

Bids were received for a project to widen Greer street by six feet on the north side from Main to Pine. Cowan-Holman Construction Co. submitted the low bid of $6,925.50. Other bids received on the project were: Flaire Ferrell, $7,749.60, and Bob Patterson of Central Contractors, $10,080.

Flaire Ferrell submitted the low bid on a project to install curb and guttering on both sides of Smith Avenue from Main to Ingram. His bid was $9,947.70. Other bids on the project were: Bob Patterson, $10,750, and Cowan-Holman, $10,118.40.

The council also approved the application of a transfer of a 5 per cent beer license from Ira Woods to C.D. Russell, operator of "Russell's Bulldog Inn." The establishment formerly was called "Ira & Louise's."

In other action, the council passed a resolution calling for the application of blade mix asphalt surfacing to Watson street from Lillian drive east to the existing pavement at a cost of 50 cents per square foot.

Agreement also was reached on a proposal that the city and the Chamber of Commerce have a joint membership represent Sikeston on the SEMO toll road association.

Teachers Will Study New Charleston High School

CHARLESTON -- Team teaching training programs will be held at the new 1,000 - student high school commencing Monday Supt. Thomas U. Wells of the Charleston R-1 school district announced.

The Monday through Friday sessions will continue through Aug. 11.

Academic area workshops for junior and senior high school teachers will be held at the high school, beginning Aug. 21.

A kindergarten building near the high school will be the location for elementary teacher in-service training sessions.

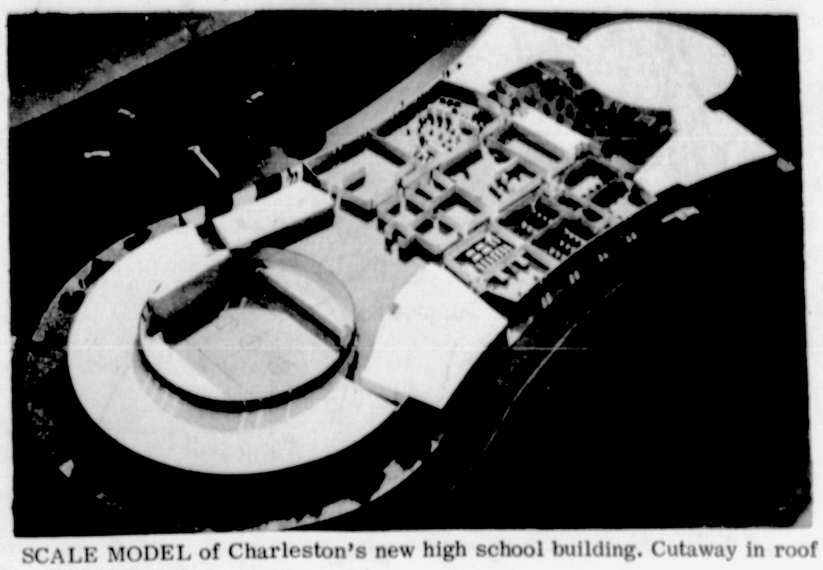
Topics for the sessions will be: modern mathematics, July 31-Aug. 11) led by William Heck, director of mathematics for the Robinsdale, Minn., schools; and science, Aug. 14-25, led by Dr. Gordon Bliss of Southern Illinois University, Edwardsville.

Session leaders for the high school training programs will include Dr. Dale Snook, Lincoln, University of Nebraska, physical education; Dr. Milton Beckman, University of Nebraska, mathematics, Dr. Gerald Abegg, Kansas State College, Science; Ray Trenholm, University of Omaha, Music; John Patterson, Jefferson City, Missouri, state department of education, special education; Richard Stokes, Missouri state department of education, Art; Dr. William Frank, Cape Girardeau, Southeast Missouri State College, language arts and Ted Rohr, Southeast Missouri State College, Audio - Visual.

Dr. J. Lloyd Trump, Washington, D.C., associate secretary of the National Association of secondary school principals, will address the conferring teachers Aug. 10.

Charleston R-1 School district administrators responsible for coordination of the conference include Superintendent Wells, Assistant Superintendents Louis W. Chaney and Bill E. Sellers, and Federal Coordinator Frank A. Hudson. Other conference participants will include Mrs. Mabel McLaughlin and Ronald Miller, team teachers from Seattle, Wash.; and Dr. Donald Hair, assistant superintendent of schools, Kansas City.

The conference will include general sessions, film showings, panel discussions, small group meetings and individual work sessions. A prime purpose of the conference is to acquaint teaching staff members with the extraordinarily high number of progressive and innovative features contained in Charleston's new high school, and to suggest how such features can improve the quality and extent of meaningful teacher - student relationships. The revolutionary new building will itself be the subject of study.



SCALE MODEL of Charleston's new high school building. Cutaway in roof shows interior arrangement.

The new high school, designed by Pearce and Pearce, Inc., school architects headquartered in St. Louis, is the product of combined efforts of Charleston school administrators, the architects, and the school planning laboratory of the college of education of the University of Tennessee at Knoxville.

"Unusual as the school may appear, however, it is not an experimental building," Superintendent Wells reports. "Rather, it incorporates most if not all of the most advanced thinking about the functionally effective high school both for today and well into the twenty-first century."

Advancements cited by Wells include team teaching, focusing on the individual, large group instruction, extensive use individual study, promotion of outstanding teacher - student relationships, tracking, variable block scheduling, provision for a student activity period as part of each week's schedule, a closed campus lunch, emphasis on English and social studies, enrichment of the curriculum, provision of resource centers accessible at all times during the school day, stress on quality instruction, elimination of study halls as such, and attention to aesthetics as well as effective function of the building.

The new high school is carpeted and air conditioned. For maximum flexibility, it contains virtually no interior bearing walls; spaces are instead defined by means of movable furniture and equipment. There are few doors inside the building, since students and teachers will be moving frequently from one study area to another. There are virtually no windows. Specially designed electrically powered heat pumps provide year round climate control.

Charleston R-1 School District board members are: James C. Moreton, president; Robert C. Jackson, vice - president; and Robert G. DeLaney, Mrs. W. Clifton Banta, Dennis Querter-mous and Miss Helen Currin, members.

U.S. Seeks to Arrange Neutral POW Inspection

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States has asked the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong to permit neutral inspection of their prisoners of war.

Voicing concern over the treatment of some 180 captured U.S. soldiers and civilians, the White House said claims "of the National Liberation Front and the North Vietnamese that they are treated humanely" cannot be verified because neutral observers have not been allowed to visit the prisoners.

The statement Monday said more than 20 Americans are believed held prisoner by the Viet Cong, or National Liberation Front. More than 160 U.S. servicemen, mostly airmen, are known to be imprisoned in North Vietnam.

The White House also urged return of sick and wounded prisoners under terms of the Geneva Convention on prisoners of war.

The statement suggested that the International Committee of the Red Cross, which it said inspects prisoners taken by U.S. or South Vietnamese forces, should be allowed to visit captured American personnel.

Meanwhile eight House Republicans, who last week urged a step by step de-escalation of the Vietnam war, said, "We are not yet convinced that Hanoi has no interest in peace."

"But we are convinced," Rep. F. Bradford Morse, R-Mass., told the House, "that the possibility has not been tested by creative and sensitive U.S. diplomacy."

Their proposal calls for stopping all bombing north of the 21st Parallel for 60 days. If Hanoi responded with a similar de-escalation, bombing then would be stopped north of the 20th Parallel and so on through five steps.

Hopes Dim for U.N. Agreement

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — Prospects faded today for adoption by the U.N. General Assembly of a resolution calling for Israeli troops to withdraw from Arab territory seized in the June war.

Syrian Ambassador George J. Tomeh told the assembly's special session on the Middle East that all the Arab states maintain their refusal to recognize the state of Israel.

Israeli Foreign Minister Abba Eban replied this "strengthens my government's resolve not to respond to any request or interest from these states until or unless there is an explicit recognition of Israel's statehood, sovereignty and territorial rights."

The Latin-American group of 23 nations adopted a passive attitude toward its negotiations with the Soviet Union for a resolution on Israeli withdrawal that could get the two-thirds vote necessary for approval.

Assembly President Abdul Rahman Pazhwak of Afghanistan told the assembly if no agreement was reached by then, it should end the special session. There was no objection, and it appeared that the issues left unsettled would be returned to the Security Council.

As the vanguard of the 33-man U.N. observer team began surveillance of the Suez Canal cease-fire line between Israeli and Egyptian forces, an Israeli-Egyptian dispute over Israel's intention to put patrol boats on the canal threatened the operation.

Israel claimed it had the right to patrol the waters on the eastern side of the canal. Egypt warned that it would open fire on any boats the Israelis launched. Egyptian Ambassador Mohamed Awad El Kony told Secretary-General U Thant by letter Israel had placed nine boats on the east shore of the Bitter Lakes, which form part of the southern half of the canal.

Reports in Vienna said Soviet Communist party chief Leonid I. Brezhnev and Premier Alexei N. Kosygin had urged the leaders of the other European Soviet bloc companies at their meeting last week to contribute more to the aid of the war-battered Arab economies but the smaller Communist governments were unenthusiastic.

Israel exchanged 361 Syrian soldiers and 230 Syrian civilians for an Israeli pilot captured by the Syrians during the war, the bodies of two other Israeli pilots shot down June 5, an 18-year-old Israeli civilian who disappeared on a flower-collecting tour last September, and an Israeli Arab who said he was kidnaped from his home in Nazareth almost seven years ago.

Morse to Head Rail Conciliation

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson named a conciliation board today to try to solve the railroad dispute. He also called for another home-front effort to stimulate employment and opportunities for the poor, in order to avoid what he termed more Wattses and Newarks.

And in the international arena, he President told a suddenly arranged news conference that the United States still stands ready at any moment to negotiate on a Vietnamese settlement. But, he said, it has no signs that Hanoi is willing.

The President declined to get into a detailed discussion of consultations with Vietnamese allies on increasing troop levels for the war but said that "we are in constant touch."

With respect to the Middle East, Johnson conceded that the United States has been unable to get an agreement to hold down arms shipments to the Israelis and Arabs, as he proposed.

Advised of Great Britain's announcement of her intentions to withdraw from Malaya and Singapore in the 1970s, Johnson said that "we have expressed ourselves as very hopeful the British would maintain their position in that part of the world and would hope they would find it useful to do so."

For the panel to try to solve the dispute that brought on a two-day nationwide rail strike, Johnson named a five-member board under the chairmanship of Sen. Wayne Morse, D-Ore., a man on whom he has called in the past for similar duties.

During the night, the President said, he got in touch with Fred Kappel, retired president of American Telephone and Telegraph Co., in Switzerland; with mediator Theodore Kheel in Paris; with AFL-CIO President George Meany in Miami Beach, and with retired Republican Sen. Leverett Saltonstall of Massachusetts. They will serve under Morse.

"Of course we are very hopeful we can get an agreement between the parties," Johnson said.

And he said he would be in touch with Morse during the day and with some of the others.

Also on the domestic scene, the President stood pat on this time on his bid for adding 6 per cent to income tax bills. But he left the way open for some adjustments.

But the President preferred not to go into factors which might call for more than a 6 per cent surtax.

The President said that were it not for tax reductions put in luring his occupancy of the White House, Americans would be paying $24 billion more in taxes now.

"We do not think it unreasonable to ask them to return a small portion," he said. This is needed, he said, for both domestic programs in the field of poverty as well as for the war in Vietnam and foreign aid.

"We think it would be good from the standpoint of defense and the economy," Johnson said.

Asked for his views on what has happened in New Jersey — the rioting and killings that focused around Newark and spread to such points as Plainfield — Johnson said he had no more information than his questioners.

He went on to say, though, that we have a great need to see that people are employed, that there are more opportunities that are equal, that there is better education and housing.

Three Cellmates Blamed For Setting Prison Fire

MILTON, Fla. (AP) — Convicts under shotgun guard have testified that three cellmates deliberately set the prison fire that burned 37 inmates to death.

Among those who died were the three accused of setting the blaze.

As the formal inquest into the Sunday night fire at State Prison Road Camp 12 at Jay, Fla., started in Santa Rosa County Courthouse, 22 bodies sacked in olive drab body bags lay outside the old county jail awaiting positive identification.

The coroner's inquest will decide if criminal negligence or homicide was involved in the tragedy.

On the table before County Judge Mahlon McCall Monday were the prison files of all 51 men who had been in the locked and barred barracks at Camp 12. Of the 51, eight were in the county jail unharmed, six were in hospitals with burns and 37 had perished.

The convicts testified that it was about six minutes after the fire started before guard A.O. Lovett unlocked the barred "cage door" and a solid wooden door to let them flee.

Lovett took the stand and testified that a smashing, shouting disturbance broke out first and he ran to toss the keys over a high barbed-wire fence to guard Richard E. Cobb, who used them to unlock the prison arsenal.

"We had to get longer guns," Lovett said.

When he saw the fire and returned, Lovett said, "I made four passes before I could open the door. It was so hot I had trouble seeing."

Convict Roy G. Regan, 26, said, "I heard the screaming. That's when I looked up and saw the whole wall was afire and it started to roll down the ceiling at me."

Regan and the other prisoner witnesses, some of whom came to court shirtless, others with T-shirts marked by ash and smoke, called the names of the three men who they said turned the 40-by 90-foot wooden barracks into a funeral pyre.

The trio who allegedly set the tragic blaze was identified to the coroner's jury as Joseph Earl Wynder, a Negro, and Thomas E. Ard and Earl Evans, both white men. All were from the Pensacola area.

Wynder was sentenced to prison from Calhoun County for grand larceny and burglary. Information on convictions of Ard and Evans was not immediately available.

The convict witnesses said Wynder, Ard and Evans used newspapers and toilet tissue to start their fires after a television set and fluorescent lights were smashed.

But Lovett said the resentment began when a pornographic book was confiscated from Ard.

Lovett, 49, who has been a prison guard for a year, entered the burning building and herded five frightened men outside. He was burned in the rescue but not severely.

Cairo Alert But Quiet After Night of Violence

By Warren Sokolis

CAIRO -- It was quiet in this Southern Illinois city last night as law enforcement officers prepared for another night of racial violence.

State and city police and sheriff's officers patrolled the city in squad cars -- four to each car - wearing riot helmets and armed with riot guns.

Monday night's alert was the result of racial violence Sunday night in which about $75,000 worth of property was destroyed by fires.

Fire bombs destroyed gasoline bulk station warehouse and damaged three retail stores and a merchandise warehouse.

A witness said in at least one instance a bomb was thrown by a group of Negroes.

Two versions of the motives for the gasoline bombing were aired.

Preston E. Ewing, president of the Cairo chapter of the NAACP, said the death by hanging of a Negro absent without leave soldier in city jail touched off violence he said had been "brewing for some time."

A witness to one bombing said he believed the bombings were intended to bring pressure on Cairo businesses to hire Negroes in clerking and other white collar jobs, the Associated Press reported.

The witness said delegations of Negroes called on Cairo businesses last week asking them to give more employment to members of their race.

The soldier, Robert Hunt Jr., 19, was found hanged in his cell early Sunday morning. He was reported awol from Ft. Bragg, N.C., and was being held for military authorities.

Coroner Leo Siers said Hunt apparently hanged himself with his shirt.

A Cairo fireman reported six fires were caused by gasoline bombs. One fire destroyed the old Missouri Pacific warehouse, which contained petroleum products and antifreeze.

Last night several businessmen boarded up their shop windows in anticipation of more violence.

Bars were ordered by law enforcement officers not to sell alcoholic beverages and a 10 p.m. curfew was imposed.

Bluff Securities Firm Suspended

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — James C. Kirkpatrick, secretary of state, announced today that Investors Securities Associates, Inc., of Poplar Bluff, Mo., has been suspended as a dealer in securities.

Suspended also are: Judson Stokley, president; W. Don Bristow, secretary-treasurer; Robert E. Singleton, vice-president, Joseph M. Bumpus, vice-president, all of Poplar Bluff and Warren O. McIntyre, vice-president of Mexico, Mo.

The suspensions resulted from the alleged neglect and refusal of Investors Securities Associates, Inc., its officers and agents, to make a complete settlement to persons for whom they sold securities, and the alleged failure and refusal to deliver securities purchased and paid for by customers. In addition the company is charged with selling unregistered securities in Growth of America Investment Co.

Those charged have 20 days to file a written request for a hearing.

Woman Injured In Accident

LaVonne Downey, 28, route two, Sikeston, is reported in satisfactory condition today in Missouri Delta Community hospital after suffering three or four broken ribs in an auto accident Monday afternoon on East Malone, police said.

The car she was driving east on East Malone collided with an automobile driven by Sherma J. Gulledge, 17, East Prairie, as it turned from Country Club drive onto East Malone, police reported. No summons was issued at the time of the accident. Police said the mishap occurred at 4:06 p.m.

In other police activity, Frank Mullin, Blodgett, was charged Monday with public intoxication.

Albert D. Adams, St. James, was charged by police Monday with peace disturbance.

Euvion Dozier, route two, Sikeston, was charged with peace disturbance early today.

Samuel Hurn, 356 Magnolia, was charged Monday with peace disturbance, and Nora Willis, Poplar Bluff, was arrested today and charged with peace disturbance, police reported.

Trains Rolling Again As President Signs Back-to-Work Law

WASHINGTON (AP) — The first nationwide rail strike in 20 years ended and trains began moving today after a two-day lieup was broken by a federal back-to-work law.

The new law signed by President Johnson Monday night after hasty enactment by Congress requires compulsory settlement if necessary to end a long dispute over wages.

The word to stop the strike spread rapidly across the country after the President acted. Pickets began withdrawing a short time later and many of the commuter trains in big metropolitan areas resumed operations.

A few traffic snarls remained but for the most part officials reported vital materials needed in Vietnam were back on the rails and passenger trains that were halted by the strike took up their journeys where they left off Sunday.

The leaders of six striking shopcraft unions ordered members to heed the back-to-work law.

The White House said Labor Secretary W. Willard Wirtz conferred with leaders of all six unions and afterwards J.E. "Doc" Wolfe, chief negotiator for the railroads, said he was informed the unions ordered membership compliance with the law.

But an official of the Southern Railway said it obtained a court order today enjoining a continuaance of the strike after workers set up additional picket lines.

The Southern Railway spokesman said Judge Frank W. Wilson of the U.S. District Court in Chattanooga, Tenn., issued the order and set a hearing on it for Wednesday morning. Picket lines were reported crumbling elsewhere following enactment of the measure.

"This will enable the products of our farms and factories to move freely once more," said President Johnson in signing the law Congress hastily passed Monday to end the first nationwide rail walkout in 20 years.

"It will permit vitally needed arms and supplies to be sent to our fighting forces in Vietnam — without interruption," Johnson said.

It also requires a government-imposed settlement of the wage dispute if unions and management don't reach their own agreement within 90 days.

A union leader angrily called the law "the strike-breaking act of 1967" but members of six shopcraft unions began obeying it by returning to work a little more than 48 hours after the strike began.

Union Pacific and Great Northern railroad officials said pickets were withdrawn, and a union official said strikers were ready to return to their jobs on the Burlington Railroad.

But pickets remained in many cities, where strikers said they were awaiting official word from their union chiefs before going back to their jobs.

Machinists' official J.A. Nesbett of Pine Bluff, Ark., said it would take a federal court order to get his men back to work.

Even where a quick return to work was expected, railroad officials weren't sure they could get commuter trains running in time for the morning rush of passengers.

The law forbids resumption of any strike for the 90 days in which a White House board will seek a voluntary settlement, and the board could extend this as late as Jan. 1, 1969, by invoking the compulsory settlement provision. The board could also impose a mandatory settlement for a shorter period.

Some 137,000 machinists, electricians, boilermakers, carmen and firemen and oilers seek wage hikes of 6.5 per cent this year and 5 per cent next year, plus 12.5 cents per hour each year for higher skilled men.

They now average $2.94 per hour, with skilled men getting an average $3.05.

The railroads' last reported offer was a 6 per cent wage hike over 18 months plus one 5-cent hike for skilled workers.

Johnson has not yet appointed the five-man board, but said it will be a blue-ribbon panel subservient to neither labor nor management.

The strike shunted hundreds of thousands of train commuters to other transportation, left thousands of freight car loads of perishable foods in danger of rotting on railroad sidings, kept harried postal clerks busy shifting mail to planes and trucks and blocked shipments of ammunition and other war goods destined for Vietnam.

Some firms dependent on rail shipments shut their doors for lack of supplies.

The strike, virtually 100 per cent effective, spurred Congress into passing the law it had haggled over for more than a month. The Senate previously passed the measure as presented by the White House, but the House knocked out the provision for compulsory settlement if a voluntary agreement couldn't be reached.

Congress twice previously had ordered strike delays in the year-old wage dispute.

Despite the pre-strike indecision of Congress, the law sailed through quickly Monday under the pressure of what Senate Republican Leader Everett M. Dirksen called "the chastening and sobering" reality of the nationwide walkout.

Only a few members in the House and Senate urged a law to end the strike without the provision for a compulsory settlement if that becomes necessary.

Former Brazilian President Killed

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — Former President Humberto Castello Branco was killed today in the collision of a Brazilian air force jet and a small private plane in which he was a passenger, the National Security Council announced.

It said the 66-year-old retired army m l, who took over the government in a military coup in 1964, died near Fortaleza in his home state of Ceara, in northeast Brazil.

Great London, including the 28 metropolitan boroughs, comprises 443, 455 acres. The original old city consists of 675 acres.

Two Bound to Circuit Court in Burglary Case

Preliminary hearings were waived today in Magistrate Court in Sikeston for two Sikeston men charged with burglary in connection with the theft of two shotguns from the Herman Dees residence.

Four Injured In Accidents

Four were treated for arm and leg injuries Monday at the Missouri Delta Community hospital.

Bobbie R. Leathers, Dexter, fell from tree and injured an elbow; Tammy McCain, caught ankle in bicycle spoke; Linda C. Wilson, fell from moving car and injured arm; Geneva E. Beal, cut hand on knife.

Rolwing Reviews Legislature's Acts

State Rep. David Rolwing of Charleston ticked off accomplishments of the legislature at the Rotary club meeting last night in the Rustic Rock Inn and said that 23 of 25 of Gov. Warren E. Hearnes' proposals were enacted.

He expressed belief that the two which bogged down in the session probably did not concern the governor greatly because they attracted so much controversy.

One bill, which died in the session, would permit an unemployed father to live at home while his children drew aid to dependent children funds. Rolwing explained that this should strengthen family life and that safeguards were provided to prevent abuses.

Another loss was a shared time school bill which became embroiled in a controversy over separation of church and state.

Rolwing said that the legislature did "a real good job of taking care of special interests," and spent more than a billion dollars but he observed that the state did no deficit spending.

He defended a new law raising legislator salaries from $4,800 to $8,400 as needed to attract "better representation."

The new toll road law as described as the legislature's most significant accomplishment. He criticized a provision which could be tapped to build the new highways but noted that any gasoline tax funds used would be reimbursed after payment is completed on the roads.

He said that Missouri with 33,000 miles of road to maintain - second only to New York state - had done a good job considering income.

Othe legislative action included congressional redistricting, new insurance and banking laws, implementation of medicare, sales tax exemption of pesticides and herbicides, additional funds for the Delta center at Portageville.

Rolwing expressed disappointment that a crime study bill "got lost" in the session.

The club will consider forming an intereact club for high school students at its next meeting. The July 31 meeting will be a family night at the Country club.

Harold Rabin of Belle Glade, Fla., was a visiting Rotarian.

Charles Green led the singing with Mary Anne Bruce at the piano.

Alex Waters presided in absence of President Fred Koch.

POOR CHARLIE SAYS!

THE DAY WHEN FROBISHER BECAME FURIOUS

In the parade of upheavals that have shaken America in the twentieth century, the present gold crisis earns prominence for being astounding. More startling than the crisis itself is the nonsense that full gold backing for the money used by individual Americans is unnecessary.

This argument also claims that dollars held by foreign governments must be backed by gold and that foreign governments must be permitted to exchange their paper dollars for gold; otherwise, American dollars in foreign countries would become worthless.

Even if a person had no knowledge of economics, this line of reasoning would raise the question: Why are dollars held by foreign governments valuable only if backed by gold, while dollars that Americans have earned are supposed to be valuable without redemption rights?

The fact is, the pieces of paper we call money are not money. They are receipts for stored gold. Obviously, such a receipt is only as valuable as the amount of gold for which it is redeemed. Governments know this. This is their reason for refusing to accept paper money unless the issuing country guarantees that it can be exchanged for a specified amount of gold.

Since 1933, Americans have been unable to redeem dollars for gold, yet they continue to accept them in exchange for the products they make or the services they render. Why?

There are two major reasons. The first is that we have no choice; the government has enacted laws forbidding ownership of gold and proclaiming paper notes to be money. Such notes are properly called fiat (decree) money, which means that government issues them and decrees, "These are money because we say they are money."

The second reason that Americans continue to use fiat money is because most of us have vague ideas about what money is: If you were called on to define money and explain its function, how would you answer?

If you say money is a medium of exchange, give yourself a grade of "A". If you know that money makes all exchanges possible, you rate an "A-plus". If you say that, before it becomes a medium of exchange, real money is a useful commodity, go to the head of the class.

Here's the way something becomes money: to barter means to swap the product you make or the service you perform for the product someone else makes or the service he performs. Say, for example, that Frobisher, your next door neighbor, grows corn but he wants beef; you raise cattle and you want corn; then you and Frobisher can swap.

But suppose Frobisher wants beef and you want wheat, - you can't trade. Frobisher must find someone who has wheat and wants his corn. After he swaps corn for wheat, he can trade with you for beef. This is an indirect exchange and it is from this process that money was developed.

Soon the butcher, the baker, the grocer and the shoemaker join your community and offer their goods for exchange. Then comes the merchants, the wagonmakers, blacksmiths - and before you know it an awful lot of people with different goods and services want to do business, but can't because of the confusion. Something has to be done to make trading easier in the market place.

In the competition to become money, gold and silver won out over other products because they had wide acceptance and were so easy to exchange for goods and services.

This is the only process whereby a thing can become money. It must first have value. No one in or out of government possesses the magic power to convert a worthless thing into money. Some people do have the knack for fooling us though; as for example, the counterfeiter who makes something worthless look valuable.

The paper bills that we call money are substitutes for real money; they are, theoretically, warehouse receipts for stored gold. These receipts came into wide use as money-substitutes when buyers and sellers discovered that it was much easier to exchange receipts for goods and services than to go to the gold storage vault. It was a lot of bother, because the buyer would redeem his receipt for the gold, then hand the gold to the vault in exchange for another receipt.

This is the fact that citizens of nations all over the world have lost sight of: the currency that they use in their daily exchanges is supposed to represent an exact amount of gold. That they are not aware of it accounts for the fact that they permit their governments to print more currency and create more credit than the amounts of gold in their vaults.

The word "credit" is why citizens aren't aware that governments increase the supply of paper money far beyond the actual amount of real money (gold and silver) than governments possess.

Virtually every government has a central bank for the purpose of creating money for its spending programs and to control the money, credit, and interest of its nation. The effect of the establishment of a central bank is to prevent citizens from acting freely in the market to determine what money is: how much gold should be minted into money, how much is to be used for jewelry; what interest rates should be charged, etc. The central bank is awarded government-enforced manipulation of money; in the United States the functions of a central bank are performed by the Federal Reserve System. How this arm of the federal government works was neatly explained by former Secretary of the Treasury Robert B. Anderson, who wrote:

" . . .suppose I wanted to write checks for $100 million starting tomorrow morning, but the treasury was out of money. If I called up a bank and said, "Will you loan me $100 million at 3-1/2 per cent for six months if I send you over a note to that effect?" the banker would probably say, 'Yes, I will'.

"Where would he get the $100 million with which to credit the account of the United States Treasury? Would he take it from the account of someone else? No, certainly not. He would merely create that much money, subject to reserve requirements, by crediting our account in that sum and accepting the government's note as an asset.

When I had finished writing checks for $100 million the operation would have added that sum to the money supply.

"Now certainly that approaches the same degree of monetization (creating money) as if I had called down to the Bureau of Engraving and Printing and said, 'Please print me up $100 million worth of greenbacks which I can pay out tomorrow."

Compare this method of bringing additional money into existence with the way in which the free market creates money. Before a thing can become money in the free market it must first have achieved value by virtue of being wanted and freely chosen by men exercising their right of free choice. They have the right to choose whatever they wish as money because the items they sell are produced by their effort.

What gives value to the $100 million created in the manner described by Secretary Anderson? Did the government note represent something of value? If you reply that the note had the value of the United States government behind it, ask yourself who pays the government's debts and who must work to create real value to pay the interest on the note? You, the taxpayer.

What the government has done in this case is inflate the money supply. Say there was $100 million in gold in the bank. When Uncle Sam issued the promissory note to the bank for another $100 million, he increased the money supply. Now, all the people have $200 million dollars; but when they go to the bank there is only $100 million in real value, of gold. Everybody's buck is now worth 50c and each taxpayer still must repay the $100 million debt and the interest on it. And you, like Frobisher, are furious.

Thus, the government is writing checks against money that you have not yet earned, and the newly created money makes each of your dollars worth less. Anytime the money supply is increased without increasing the goods and services, each dollar will buy less of the goods and services.

What word identifies the act of creating and spending money that has no real value? Did you say "counterfeit"? If we were talking about private citizens, you would be right, but when government does this it is inflation. The sole cause of inflation is the issuance of an amount of currency or credit greater than the existing stock of metal money. The "wage-price spiral" is not the cause of inflation as is so often claimed: it is an effect of inflation.

Can government go on inflating the money supply forever, without being discovered? Hardly. Each new parcel of money-created-from-nothingness decreases the value of all the nation's money. Eventually the point is reached where a bale of money will not buy a loaf of bread. At this point, a nation's money becomes worthless and it does not have a medium of exchange.

Without a medium of exchange, people are unable to trade their products and services. For all of us the final ruin of our money would be a sentence of chaos and anarchy.

A special plea for drivers to be extra watchful for children at play during these warm summer days was issued by Colonel E. I. (Mike) Hockaday, the Superintendent of the Missouri State Highway Patrol.

"This is the time of the year when youngsters are out in great numbers and drivers must be extra alert to avoid a collision with them," Hockaday declared. "Children are often carried away by play. Sometimes they forget entirely the real world around them. Drivers should be aware of this and always expect the unexpected."

The Patrol Superintendent noted that over 80 pedestrians under 15 years of age were either killed or injured in accident investigated by the Highway Patrol last year.

"The great tragedy of these accidents lies in the fact that many of them could have been avoided if the drivers involved would have been more alert," he stated. "Children do not have the traffic judgment of adults and they cannot be expected to always act with proper regard for their own safety. It is up to the individual driver to do everything in his power to protect children from their own heedlessness."

Colonel Hockaday advised drivers to be extra watchful for children when traveling near playgrounds and in residential areas, or wherever else youngsters are likely to be found.

"Youngsters often seem to materialize out of thin air, right into the driver's path," the Colonel concluded. "A motorist must think quick and act fast to avoid hitting them when they dart out from behind parked cars or cross streets in the middle of the block. That is why a driver must be alert every minute he is behind the wheel."

THE CHALLENGE OF EQUAL JUSTICE

"No man is below the law," is the theme of this year's observance of Law Day, May 1.

The slogan, which is the other side of the more familiar "No man is above the law," has drawn fire from one of the nation's foremost legal educators, Paul M. Siskind, dean of Boston University Law School.

If it is stated as an objective, the theme is worth-while and timely, says the dean, writing in the current issue of Trial magazine, published by the American Trial Lawyers Association.

If it is intended to describe the abstract existence of a body of law available to those fortunate enough to have the resources to invoke it on their behalf, it is "substantially accurate."

But if it is intended to describe the complete effectiveness of our system of law and the protection of the rights of all our people, "it is no more than the statement of a condition which simply has not yet been achieved . . .

"So long as people are denied access to the effective operation of that legal system, no matter how justly and equitably it is conceived and maintained, to them it sits like a rare jewel in a museum, beautiful but remote.

"A man is below the law whenever the law is beyond his reach."

Recent Supreme Court mandates requiring that counsel be provided for defendants charged with major criminal activity are highly commendable, says Siskind. They are so basic to a system which congratulates itself that "no man is below the law" that he finds it hard to imagine how they could have been considered revolutionary.

However, even our everyday lives have become so complex, he says, that legal counsel is needed in all but the most routine situations. Yet in the United States there are literally millions of people who through poverty or ignorance, or usually a combination of both, have no effective access to counsel.

He calls on the organized members of the bar to be the moving force to remedy this situation.

The Law Day theme, concludes Siskind, is really a boast which needs to be made good and a challenge which must be met before we can truly say that "No man is below the law."

THE AMERICAN APPETITE FOR TRAVEL

The famous comment that an army travels on its stomach is true not only for the military, but for the army of vacationers that take to our highways every summer. Whether it's fresh walleyes pan-fried in Northern Wisconsin, or a continental six course breakfast at Brennan's in New Orleans, blue points on the half shell in Boston or sub gum in San Francisco, the American traveler comes to see and eat. Aided by Duncan Hines in choosing the right place and Amy Vanderbilt in choosing the right fork, the hungry tourist can sample an endless variety of foods, atmospheres, and culinary traditions. From Delmonico's to McDonalds, America is one long groaning board that keeps us going and coming back for more. The Standard salutes the American restaurants, of which Stromberg's in Aspen, Colorado, is a colorful example.

TOTAL COMMITMENT

When President Johnson winged away on his Asian tour with messages of "peace," "prosperity," and "self-determination" for people of various countries in that part of the globe, he left behind a completely different message for the people in the U. S. Territory of Guam. After Mr. Johnson's departure on October 17, there appeared on the bulletin board of the nearly deserted White House press room a notice that he had had that morning vetoed Guam's recently-passed Right-to-Work Law.

In Honolulu later that same day, the President expressed his "hope" that each nation of Asia may become "free,' proud, prosperous . . .(and). . . individualistic." His actions on their right to work bill hardly holds out the same hope for the people of Guam. Neither does it coincide with Mr. Johnson's statements a few weeks back at Rhode Island University: "If there is a single word that describes our form of society, it may be the word voluntary . . . the tremendous prosperity we enjoy and the personal liberty we cherish, are at least good evidence that the system works."

Voluntarism was the very essence of the Guam Legislature's bill which President Johnson vetoed. It stated simply: "No person shall be denied the opportunity to obtain or retain employment because of non-membership in a labor organization."

The efforts of Guamanians to obtain for themselves that basic freedom are an epic performance: First, their elected legislature passed the bill only to have it promptly vetoed by their Presidentially-appointed governor. Four days later a better than two-thirds majority in the legislature overrode that veto. President Johnson had to act, one way or the other, with 90 days or the bill would have automatically been in effect. The manner in which his last minute veto was announced is proof enough for us that he intended all along to kill it.

We think Mr. Reed Larson of the National Right to Work Committee hit the nail on the head when he said, "only a total commitment to the cause of compulsory unionism would compel the President to veto that bill at the very moment he was departing on a mission ostensibly aimed at the preservation of self-determination for the people of South-east Asia."

There are a good many rubber-stamp congressmen now seeking re-election who are also totally committed to the union bosses and compulsory unionism. They'd like us to forget, until after election, the threat they pose to workingmen's freedom of choice throughout all the United States. If we do forget it -- and allow them to stay in office --we can expect in short order they'll be trying to do to all the rest of us what their "leader's" veto has just done to the workingmen of Guam.

ARM TO JAIL

"Your Honor," said the lawyer, "I submit that my client did not break into the house at all. He found the parlor window open, inserted his right arm and removed a few trifling articles."

"Now, my client's arm is not himself, and I fail to see how you can punish him for an offense committed by one of his limbs."

"Your argument," answered the judge, "is very well put. Following it logically, I sentence the prisoner's right arm to a one year's imprisonment. He can accompany it or not, just as he chooses."

Whereupon the defendant calmly removed his cork arm and walked out.

INSURGENCY IN LATIN AMERICA

A meeting of great potential danger to the United States and the entire Western Hemisphere is scheduled to be held in Havana on July 28. This will be a conference of communist parties from various areas in Latin America to lay plans for increasing their subversive and terrorist activities.

Fidel Castro's communist government in Cuba, supported by Soviet Russia, is promoting an extensive series of guerilla actions aimed at the military forces of governments in Central and South America. According to a report recently issued by a subcommittee of the Foreign Affairs Committee of the U. S. House of Representatives, Castro is steadily adding to his list of target countries. This report points out that "guerilla movements of significance" already exist in Venezuela, Colombia, Guatemala and Bolivia.

The House subcommittee reports that Cuba is still receiving substantial assistance from countries that proclaim themselves as our friends and allies. The assistance they are giving results in holding up Cuba's economy and simultaneously furnishing Castro with additional resources to expand his revolution. Britain, France, Spain, Italy and Canada are among the countries that have granted credits to Cuba.

Castro also continues to get assistance from Russia. The House subcommittee declared that the Soviets have provided a large supply of arms to Cuba and have some 5,000 Russian nationals stationed on the island. Military aid from Russia has increased considerably during the last year. This buildup is designed to continue and step up support of communist insurgency activities in Latin America. No doubt the blueprint will be laid out at the forthcoming Havana conference.

NEW YORK (AP) — Paul Jones, a fresh voice from Britain, is a young man you may be hearing a great deal more of from now on.

He is one of the top pop singers of Blimeyland, and has just made his first film, "Privilege." It is a bitter comedy about a youthful international entertainment idol whose managers try to change him from a symbol of rebellious youth into an evangelical crusader.

Jones, who is six feet tall, fair-haired, and green-eyed, doesn't fit into any convenient pigeonhole. He isn't that common a bird.

He wears his hair down to the nape of his neck and likes to go around in orange corduroys. But, at 25, he feels he belongs neither to the beat nor the hippie generation.

Once he described himself as an "upper class Bohemian," but now says that was merely a flippant remark.

"Bohemian is such an old-fashioned word. I've always been middle class. Imagewise, I certainly am not the beatnik type. I suppose I'm the British boy-next-door type — incredibly square, and with a social conscience.

"Soul is a very important thing to me. That's why I like Negro blues — it's loud and full of soul.

"To me soul is not just a spiritual quality. It is the ability to combine the spiritual and the earthly, and most of Western society seems unable to do that."

The harmonica-playing singer is the son of a retired English naval captain. Expecting to become an English teacher, he spent a year at Oxford University before deciding to make a career in music.

Before his voice caught the public ear — he's popular on the Continent as well as in his homeland — Jones worked as a railway porter, boat attendant, day laborer and department store salesman.

Now he lives with his wife Sheila and two children in a prosaic London home far from Bohemian Chelsea.

"Sometimes fans bunch outside the house," he remarked. "They stand quietly there and look through the windows and watch us eat. It makes us feel like animals in a zoo."

Money, he says, means very little to him except that it enables him to pursue his hobby of collecting antiques. But fame means much to him.

"I have a quirk for that," he admitted.

Critical of beatniks and hippies because of their passivity, Jones aligns himself with those members of the young generation who want to be more active in changing the status quo.

"I view this hippie thing with an enormous amount of sympathy," he remarked. "But I worry about their tendency to drop out of life.

"I believe in individual responsibility — that it is up to every individual to raise the quality of life. You should find the best thing you can do to make a better and more peaceful world, then do it."

Washington Merry - Go - Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON -- The 27 to 1 vote inside the house agricultural committee rebuking Rep. Joe Resnick, D-N.Y., for his stand against the farm bureau will have far more repercussions than an ordinary congressional feud. It may well do the following:

1. Put Resnick in the race for the senate against Republican Jacob Javits, hitherto considered unbeatable.

2. Raise the issue of congressional ethics once again.

3. Force a showdown regarding the big farm organizations masquerading as nonprofit co-ops but which make tax-free inroads on private business which must pay taxes.

Regarding the first, Democrats have long been looking for a Jewish candidate who could take on Jake Javits. Javits has been a good senator and aspires to be vice president.

Part of his political strength lies in his religion which nets him a preponderance of Jewish-Democratic voters in New York City who cross over to the Republican ticket where Javits is concerned. They even voted for him as against Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., for attorney general.

Resnick, a Jew, is a wealthy electronics manufacturer from Poughkeepsie who has been re-elected in an overwhelmingly Republican district. He is one of the bright stars among New York Democrats, and the unfair vote against him in the house agriculture committee should boost him as a candidate against Javits.

TAX FREE FARM LOBBY

Reason for this unfair rebuke was the fact that Resnick had dared expose the giant American farm bureau federation as a $2 billion lobbying group which paid no taxes.

For a long time business leaders have been griping over the privileged position of farm co-ops which get by without paying taxes. The farm bureau is the No. 1 example. Resnick had pointed out that it operates several insurance companies, gasoline filling stations, automobile accessory stores.

When Resnick first began this campaign, he received commendation from his fellow members on the house agriculture committee.

"Great stuff, Joe," commented chairman Bob Poage of Texas. "You're doing fine. Keep it up."

However, this was before the farm bureau threw its tremendous lobbying power into play. For years it has dominated the farm block on Capitol Hill.

Furthermore it has several of its members on the house agriculture committee. Under the rules of congress they are not supposed to vote on an issue where they have a direct personal or pocketbook interest.

Nevertheless, several congressional members of the farm bureau led the fight to disassociate congress from Resnick because he dared take on the farm bureau. They were: Chairman Poage, Bill Nichols, D-Ala., G. V. Montgomery, D-Miss.; with George Hansen, Idaho, Robert Price, Tex., George Goodling, Pa., and John Zwach, Minn., all Republicans.

The conflict of Rep. Zwach was especially glaring because his administrative assistant, Verlon Welch, served as legislative director of the Minnesota farm bureau from 1961 - 66.

All of the above congressmen voted to censure Adam Clayton Powell. But they saw nothing wrong in leading the fight to rebuke a congressman who dared criticize their own $2 billion farm bureau and its tax-free privileges.

SUPER SECRECY

Significantly, the house agriculture committee meeting to defend the farm bureau was held behind closed doors. No security matters were involved; no military secrets; only the question of whether a lobbying group should continue to have tax-free privileges. Yet the public, which has to make up the tax deficit, was barred.

Significantly also, the meeting was called just 24 hours after the farm bureau executives met in Chicago to plan strategy against Resnick's attack.

The secret committee meeting was held at 9:30 a.m., and was supposed to last until ten. But the battle inside the committee continued so long that White House assistant Walt Rostow was kept an hour and a half waiting to testify.

At the start of the closed-door session, Resnick made a parliamentary inquiry asking that the debate regarding him be open to the press and public.

Chairman Poage remarked that Resnick's criticism of the farm bureau already had received "too much publicity." Resnick was voted down.

He then asked Poage to yield. The chairman refused.

"You want us to make a martyr of you, and I'm going to do it," remarked the congressman from Texas.

In the showdown vote disassociating the committee from Resnick's investigation of the farm bureau, every Democrat voted against his Democratic colleague from New York except three: Rep. Eligio De La Garza, the Spanish - American from Texas, who supported Resnick; and Tom Foley of Washington and Frank Brasco of Brooklyn, who sat on their hands, They voted "present."

Remarked Rep. De La Garza afterward: "If Resnick was impolite to the farm bureau, we should talk to him about it. We don't have to pass a resolution to dissassociate ourselves from what another congressman says. That's his business. "If a congressman has to disassociate himself every day from what another congressman says, we couldn't pass any legislation at all. We'd be too busy disassociating."

If you say money is a medium of exchange, give yourself a grade of "A". If you know that money makes all exchanges possible, you rate an "A-plus". If you say that, before it becomes a medium of exchange, real money is a useful commodity, go to the head of the class.

Here's the way something becomes money: to barter means to swap the product you make or the service you perform for the product someone else makes or the service he performs. Say, for example, that Frobisher, your next door neighbor, grows corn but he wants beef; you raise cattle and you want corn; then you and Frobisher can swap.

But suppose Frobisher wants beef and you want wheat, - you can't trade. Frobisher must find someone who has wheat and wants his corn. After he swaps corn for wheat, he can trade with you for beef. This is an indirect exchange and it is from this process that money was developed.

Soon the butcher, the baker, the grocer and the shoemaker join your community and offer their goods for exchange. Then comes the merchants, the wagonmakers, blacksmiths - and before you know it an awful lot of people with different goods and services want to do business, but can't because of the confusion. Something has to be done to make trading easier in the market place.

In the competition to become money, gold and silver won out over other products because they had wide acceptance and were so easy to exchange for goods and services.

This is the only process whereby a thing can become money. It must first have value. No one in or out of government possesses the magic power to convert a worthless thing into money. Some people do have the knack for fooling us though; as for example, the counterfeiter who makes something worthless look valuable.

The paper bills that we call money are substitutes for real money; they are, theoretically, warehouse receipts for stored gold. These receipts came into wide use as money-substitutes when buyers and sellers discovered that it was much easier to exchange receipts for goods and services than to go to the gold storage vault. It was a lot of bother, because the buyer would redeem his receipt for the gold, then hand the gold to the vault in exchange for another receipt.

This is the fact that citizens of nations all over the world have lost sight of: the currency that they use in their daily exchanges is supposed to represent an exact amount of gold. That they are not aware of it accounts for the fact that they permit their governments to print more currency and create more credit than the amounts of gold in their vaults.

The word "credit" is why citizens aren't aware that governments increase the supply of paper money far beyond the actual amount of real money (gold and silver) than governments possess.

Virtually every government has a central bank for the purpose of creating money for its spending programs and to control the money, credit, and interest of its nation. The effect of the establishment of a central bank is to prevent citizens from acting freely in the market to determine what money is: how much gold should be minted into money, how much is to be used for jewelry; what interest rates should be charged, etc. The central bank is awarded government-enforced manipulation of money; in the United States the functions of a central bank are performed by the Federal Reserve System. How this arm of the federal government works was neatly explained by former Secretary of the Treasury Robert B. Anderson, who wrote:

" . . .suppose I wanted to write checks for $100 million starting tomorrow morning, but the treasury was out of money. If I called up a bank and said, "Will you loan me $100 million at 3-1/2 per cent for six months if I send you over a note to that effect?" the banker would probably say, 'Yes, I will'.

"Where would he get the $100 million with which to credit the account of the United States Treasury? Would he take it from the account of someone else? No, certainly not. He would merely create that much money, subject to reserve requirements, by crediting our account in that sum and accepting the government's note as an asset.

When I had finished writing checks for $100 million the operation would have added that sum to the money supply.

"Now certainly that approaches the same degree of monetization (creating money) as if I had called down to the Bureau of Engraving and Printing and said, 'Please print me up $100 million worth of greenbacks which I can pay out tomorrow."

Compare this method of bringing additional money into existence with the way in which the free market creates money. Before a thing can become money in the free market it must first have achieved value by virtue of being wanted and freely chosen by men exercising their right of free choice. They have the right to choose whatever they wish as money because the items they sell are produced by their effort.

What gives value to the $100 million created in the manner described by Secretary Anderson? Did the government note represent something of value? If you reply that the note had the value of the United States government behind it, ask yourself who pays the government's debts and who must work to create real value to pay the interest on the note? You, the taxpayer.

What the government has done in this case is inflate the money supply. Say there was $100 million in gold in the bank. When Uncle Sam issued the promissory note to the bank for another $100 million, he increased the money supply. Now, all the people have $200 million dollars; but when they go to the bank there is only $100 million in real value, of gold. Everybody's buck is now worth 50c and each taxpayer still must repay the $100 million debt and the interest on it. And you, like Frobisher, are furious.

Thus, the government is writing checks against money that you have not yet earned, and the newly created money makes each of your dollars worth less. Anytime the money supply is increased without increasing the goods and services, each dollar will buy less of the goods and services.

What word identifies the act of creating and spending money that has no real value? Did you say "counterfeit"? If we were talking about private citizens, you would be right, but when government does this it is inflation. The sole cause of inflation is the issuance of an amount of currency or credit greater than the existing stock of metal money. The "wage-price spiral" is not the cause of inflation as is so often claimed: it is an effect of inflation.

Can government go on inflating the money supply forever, without being discovered? Hardly. Each new parcel of money-created-from-nothingness decreases the value of all the nation's money. Eventually the point is reached where a bale of money will not buy a loaf of bread. At this point, a nation's money becomes worthless and it does not have a medium of exchange.

Without a medium of exchange, people are unable to trade their products and services. For all of us the final ruin of our money would be a sentence of chaos and anarchy.

A special plea for drivers to be extra watchful for children at play during these warm summer days was issued by Colonel E. L. (Mike) Hockaday, the Superintendent of the Missouri State Highway Patrol.

"This is the time of the year when youngsters are out in great numbers and drivers must be extra alert to avoid a collision with them," Hockaday declared. "Children are often carried away by play. Sometimes they forget entirely the real world around them. Drivers should be aware of this and always expect the unexpected."

The Patrol Superintendent noted that over 80 pedestrians under 15 years of age were either killed or injured in accident investigated by the Highway Patrol last year.

"The great tragedy of these accidents lies in the fact that many of them could have been avoided if the drivers involved would have been more alert," he stated. "Children do not have the traffic judgment of adults and they cannot be expected to always act with proper regard for their own safety. It is up to the individual driver to do everything in his power to protect children from their own headlessness."

Colonel Hockaday advised drivers to be extra watchful for children when traveling near playgrounds and in residential areas, or wherever else youngsters are likely to be found.

"Youngsters often seem to materialize out of thin air, right into the driver's path," the Colonel concluded. "A motorist must think quick and act fast to avoid hitting them when they dart out from behind parked cars or cross streets in the middle of the block. That is why a driver must be alert every minute he is behind the wheel."

THE CHALLENGE OF EQUAL JUSTICE

"No man is below the law," is the theme of this year's observance of Law Day, May 1.

The slogan, which is the other side of the more familiar "No man is above the law," has drawn fire from one of the nation's foremost legal educators, Paul M. Siskind, dean of Boston University Law School.

If it is stated as an objective, the theme is worth-while and timely, says the dean, writing in the current issue of Trial magazine, published by the American Trial Lawyers Association.

If it is intended to describe the abstract existence of a body of law available to those fortunate enough to have the resources to invoke it on their behalf, it is "substantially accurate."

But if it is intended to describe the complete effectiveness of our system of law and the protection of the rights of all our people, "it is no more than the statement of a condition which simply has not yet been achieved . . .

"So long as people are denied access to the effective operation of that legal system, no matter how justly and equitably it is conceived and maintained, to them it sits like a rare jewel in a museum, beautiful but remote.

"A man is below the law whenever the law is beyond his reach."

Recent Supreme Court mandates requiring that counsel be provided for defendants charged with major criminal activity are highly commendable, says Siskind. They are so basic to a system which congratulates itself that "no man is below the law" that he finds it hard to imagine how they could have been considered revolutionary.

However, even our everyday lives have become so complex, he says, that legal counsel is needed in all but the most routine situations. Yet in the United States there are literally millions of people who through poverty or ignorance, or usually a combination of both, have no effective access to counsel.

He calls on the organized members of the bar to be the moving force to remedy this situation.

The Law Day theme, concludes Siskind, is really a boast which needs to be made good and a challenge which must be met before we can truly say that "No man is below the law."

THE AMERICAN APPETITE FOR TRAVEL

The famous comment that an army travels on its stomach is true not only for the military, but for the army of vacationers that take to our highways every summer. Whether it's fresh walleyes pan-fried in Northern Wisconsin, or a continental six course breakfast at Brennan's in New Orleans, blue points on the half shell in Boston or sub gum in San Francisco, the American traveler comes to see and eat. Aided by Duncan Hines in choosing the right place and Amy Vanderbilt in choosing the right fork, the hungry tourist can sample an endless variety of foods, atmospheres, and culinary traditions. From Delmonico's to McDonalds, America is one long groaning board that keeps us going and coming back for more. The Standard salutes the American restaurants, of which Stromberg's in Aspen, Colorado, is a colorful example.

TOTAL COMMITMENT

When President Johnson winged away on his Asian tour with messages of "peace," "prosperity," and "self-determination" for people of various countries in that part of the globe, he left behind a completely different message for the people in the U. S. Territory of Guam. After Mr. Johnson's departure on October 17, there appeared on the bulletin board of the nearly deserted White House press room a notice that he had that morning vetoed Guam's recently-passed Right-to-Work Law.

In Honolulu later that same day, the President expressed his "hope" that each nation of Asia may become "free,' proud, prosperous . . .(and). . . individualistic." His actions on their right to work bill hardly holds out the same hope for the people of Guam. Neither does it coincide with Mr. Johnson's statements a few weeks back at Rhode Island University: "If there is a single word that describes our form of society, it may be the word voluntary . . . the tremendous prosperity we enjoy and the personal liberty we cherish, are at least good evidence that the system works."

Voluntarism was the very essence of the Guam Legislature's bill which President Johnson vetoed. It stated simply: "No person shall be denied the opportunity to obtain or retain employment because of non-membership in a labor organization."

The efforts of Guamanians to obtain for themselves that basic freedom are an epic performance: First, their elected legislature passed the bill only to have it promptly vetoed by their Presidentially-appointed governor. Four days later a better than two-thirds majority in the legislature overrode that veto. President Johnson had to act, one way or the other, with 90 days or the bill would have automatically been in effect. The manner in which his last minute veto was announced is proof enough for us that he intended all along to kill it.

We think Mr. Reed Larson of the National Right to Work Committee hit the nail on the head when he said, "only a total commitment to the cause of compulsory unionism would compel the President to veto that bill at the very moment he was departing on a mission ostensibly aimed at the preservation of self-determination for the people of South-east Asia."

There are a good many rubber-stamp congressmen now seeking re-election who are also totally committed to the union bosses and compulsory unionism. They'd like us to forget, until after election, the threat they pose to workingmen's freedom of choice throughout all the United States. If we do forget it -- and allow them to stay in office --we can expect in short order they'll be trying to do to all the rest of us what their "leader's" veto has just done to the workingmen of Guam.

ARM TO JAIL

"Your Honor," said the lawyer, "I submit that my client did not break into the house at all. He found the parlor window open, inserted his right arm and removed a few trifling articles."

"Now, my client's arm is not himself, and I fail to see how you can punish him for an offense committed by one of his limbs."

"Your argument," answered the judge, "is very well put. Following it logically, I sentence the prisoner's right arm to a one year's imprisonment. He can accompany it or not, just as he chooses."

Whereupon the defendant calmly removed his cork arm and walked out.

INSURGENCY IN LATIN AMERICA

A meeting of great potential danger to the United States and the entire Western Hemisphere is scheduled to be held in Havana on July 28. This will be a conference of communist parties from various areas in Latin America to lay plans for increasing their subversive and terrorist activities.

Fidel Castro's communist government in Cuba, supported by Soviet Russia, is promoting an extensive series of guerilla actions aimed at the military forces of governments in Central and South America. According to a report recently issued by a subcommittee of the Foreign Affairs Committee of the U. S. House of Representatives, Castro is steadily adding to his list of target countries. This report points out that "guerilla movements of significance" already exist in Venezuela, Colombia, Guatemala and Bolivia.

The House subcommittee reports that Cuba is still receiving substantial assistance from countries that proclaim themselves as our friends and allies. The assistance they are giving results in holding up Cuba's economy and simultaneously furnishing Castro with additional resources to expand his revolution. Britain, France, Spain, Italy and Canada are among the countries that have granted credits to Cuba.

Castro also continues to get assistance from Russia. The House subcommittee declared that the Soviets have provided a large supply of arms to Cuba and have some 5,000 Russian nationals stationed on the island. Military aid from Russia has increased considerably during the last year. This buildup is designed to continue and step up support of communist insurgency activities in Latin America. No doubt the blueprint will be laid out at the forthcoming Havana conference. HLH.

NEW YORK (AP) — Paul Jones, a fresh voice from Britain, is a young man you may be hearing a great deal more of from now on.

He is one of the top pop singers of Blimeyland, and has just made his first film, "Privilege." It is a bitter comedy about a youthful international entertainment idol whose managers try to change him from a symbol of rebellious youth into an evangelical crusader.

Jones, who is six feet tall, fair-haired, and green-eyed, doesn't fit into any convenient pigeonhole. He isn't that common a bird.

He wears his hair down to the nape of his neck and likes to go around in orange corduroys. But, at 25, he feels he belongs neither to the beat nor the hippie generation.

Once he described himself as an "upper class Bohemian," but now says that was merely a flippant remark.

"Bohemian is such an old-fashioned word. I've always been middle class. Imagewise, I certainly am not the beatnik type. I suppose I'm the British boy-next-door type — incredibly square, and with a social conscience.

"Soul is a very important thing to me. That's why I like Negro blues — it's loud and full of soul.

"To me soul is not just a spiritual quality. It is the ability to combine the spiritual and the earthly, and most of Western society seems unable to do that."

The harmonica-playing singer is the son of a retired English naval captain. Expecting to become an English teacher, he spent a year at Oxford University before deciding to make a career in music.

Before his voice caught the public ear — he's popular on the Continent as well as in his homeland — Jones worked as a railway porter, boat attendant, day laborer and department store salesman.

Now he lives with his wife Sheila and two children in a prosaic London home far from Bohemian Chelsea.

"Sometimes fans bunch outside the house," he remarked. "They stand quietly there and look through the windows and watch us eat. It makes us feel like animals in a zoo."

Money, he says, means very little to him except that it enables him to pursue his hobby of collecting antiques. But fame means much to him.

"I have a quirk for that," he admitted.

Critical of beatniks and hippies because of their passivity, Jones aligns himself with those members of the young generation who want to be more active in changing the status quo.

"I view this hippie thing with an enormous amount of sympathy," he remarked. "But I worry about their tendency to drop out of life.

"I believe in individual responsibility — that it is up to every individual to raise the quality of life. You should find the best thing you can do to make a better and more peaceful world, then do it."

Washington Merry - Go - Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON -- The 27 to 1 vote inside the house agricultural committee rebuking Rep. Joe Resnick, D-N.Y., for his stand against the farm bureau will have far more repercussions than an ordinary congressional feud. It may well do the following:

1. Put Resnick in the race for the senate against Republican Jacob Javits, hitherto considered unbeatable.

2. Raise the issue of congressional ethics once again.

3. Force a showdown regarding the big farm organizations masquerading as nonprofit co-ops but which make tax-free inroads on private business which must pay taxes.

Regarding the first, Democrats have long been looking for a Jewish candidate who could take on Jake Javits. Javits has been a good senator and aspires to be vice president.

Part of his political strength lies in his religion which nets him a preponderance of Jewish-Democratic voters in New York City who cross over to the Republican ticket where Javits is concerned. They even voted for him as against Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., for attorney general.

Resnick, a Jew, is a wealthy electronics manufacturer from Poughkeepsie who has been re-elected in an overwhelmingly Republican district. He is one of the bright stars among New York Democrats, and the unfair vote against him in the house agriculture committee should boost him as a candidate against Javits.

TAX FREE FARM LOBBY

Reason for this unfair rebuke was the fact that Resnick had dared expose the giant American farm bureau federation as a $2 billion lobbying group which paid no taxes.

For a long time business leaders have been griping over the privileged position of farm co-ops which get by without paying taxes. The farm bureau is the No. 1 example. Resnick had pointed out that it operates several insurance companies, gasoline filling stations, automobile accessory stores.

When Resnick first began this campaign, he received commendation from his fellow members on the house agriculture committee.

"Great stuff, Joe," commented chairman Bob Poage of Texas. "You're doing fine. Keep it up."

However, this was before the farm bureau threw its tremendous lobbying power into play. For years it has dominated the farm block on Capitol Hill.

Furthermore it has several of its members on the house agriculture committee. Under the rules of congress they are not supposed to vote on an issue where they have a direct personal or pocketbook interest.

Nevertheless, several congressional members of the farm bureau led the fight to disassociate congress from Resnick because he dared take on the farm bureau. They were: Chairman Poage, Bill Nichols, D-Ala., G. V. Montgomery, D-Miss.; with George Hansen, Idaho, Robert Price, Tex., George Goodling, Pa., and John Zwach, Minn., all Republicans.

The conflict of Rep. Zwach was especially glaring because his administrative assistant, Verlon Welch, served as legislative director of the Minnesota farm bureau from 1961 - 66.

All of the above congressmen voted to censure Adam Clayton Powell. But they saw nothing wrong in leading the fight to rebuke a congressman who dared criticize their own $2 billion farm bureau and its tax-free privileges.

SUPER SECRECY

Significantly, the house agriculture committee meeting to defend the farm bureau was held behind closed doors. No security matters were involved; no military secrets; only the question of whether a lobbying group should continue to have tax-free privileges. Yet the public, which has to make up the tax deficit, was barred.

Significantly also, the meeting was called just 24 hours after the farm bureau executives met in Chicago to plan strategy against Resnick's attack.

The secret committee meeting was held at 9:30 a.m., and was supposed to last until ten. But the battle inside the committee continued so long that White House assistant Walt Rostow was kept an hour and a half waiting to testify.

At the start of the closed-door session, Resnick made a parliamentary inquiry asking that the debate regarding him be open to the press and public.

Chairman Poage remarked that Resnick's criticism of the farm bureau already had received "too much publicity." Resnick was voted down.

He then asked Poage to yield. The chairman refused.

"You want us to make a martyr of you, and I'm going to do it," remarked the congressman from Texas.

In the showdown vote disassociating the committee from Resnick's investigation of the farm bureau, every Democrat voted against his Democratic colleague from New York except three: Rep. Eligio De La Garza, the Spanish - American from Texas, who supported Resnick; and Tom Foley of Washington and Frank Brasco of Brooklyn, who sat on their hands, They voted "present."

Remarked Rep. De La Garza afterward: "If Resnick was impolite to the farm bureau, we should talk to him about it. We don't have to pass a resolution to dissassociate ourselves from what another congressman says. That's his business. "If a congressman has to disassociate himself every day from what another congressman says, we couldn't pass any legislation at all. We'd be too busy disassociating."

East Confronts West Over Miniskirt Question

MOSCOW (AP) — It's the greatest East-West confrontation since Glassboro: miniskirts vs. Muscovites.

And the Russians are taking the hard line. One old woman in Gorky Park took a switch to an American girl and lashed the backs of her bare knees.

Around the Intourist hotels, the foreign currency shops and the International Film Festival, Russians ogle the most scantily, most gaudily clad girls ever seen off the stage of the Bolshoi Ballet.

They're foreigners, mainly British, American, Scandinavian and German tourists.

All winter Moscow heard rumors of just how mini the miniskirt had become in the fabled, distant West. A few brave Russians raised hems a scandalous inch above the knee.

But by spring the average dress still amply covered the usually ample Russian kneecap.

Now they're seeing the real thing— 6 to 10 inches above the knee. And the psychedelic colors seem as surprising as the brevity in the drab Moscow setting.

One girl at a film festival party wore a crocheted, see-through "dress" of bathing-suit proportions over a body-stocking. Even the movie stars, not to mention people from the comparatively sophisticated Soviet cultural scene, were shocked.

Less sophisticated, less worldly Muscovites are not taking this invasion calmly.

The babushka— the word means grandmother but applies to any little old Russian woman — in Gorky Park was not alone.

An Australian girl and another babushka were seen in a tug-of-war all the way across a broad, busy street. The old woman was trying to pull the girl's hem down to her knees and the girl was frantically trying to escape.

Will the secretive Russians, who rejected Western "open skies" and disarmament inspection plans, yield to inspection of the upper legs?

Some of the younger tourists from such Communist countries as Poland and Czechoslovakia are wearing minis. Russian girls are envious— and experimenting.

AND NOBODY BLEW IT

BELEN, N.M. (AP) — Asst. Police Chief Joe Gabaldon said the metal whistle he wears around his neck probably saved his life recently.

Gabaldon and Officer Ernest Trujillo went to a Belen motel where a man reportedly was ill. The officers found a motel guest wrestling with a doctor.

During the scuffle to separate the pair, the guest grabbed Gabaldon's pistol and it discharged.

The bullet was deflected by the whistle and Gabaldon escaped injury.

The motel guest was jailed.

Burneses Accept Position On Miles College Faculty

ST. LOUIS - Mr. and Mrs. Donald W. Burnes have joined the faculty of Miles College, the small, Birmingham, Ala., school which made headlines earlier this year by hiring the dean of Harvard College.

Burnes will be assistant professor of history and assistant in administration, effective July 15, and Mrs. Burnes, the former Kay Standley of Sikeston, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L.M. Standley, will be assistant professor of psychology and will work in counseling with the dean of students, effective Sept. 1.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Burnes are graduates of Washington University. Mrs. Burnes received an bachelor of arts degree in 1962, and master of arts in education in 1963, and is a candidate for the doctor of philosophy degree in clinical psychology.

Burnes, a graduate of Phillips Exeter Academy and Princeton University, received his master's degree in education from Washington University this year.

A volunteer for mission, assigned to Trinity church, by the executive council of the Episcopal church in 1964, Burnes has worked since July, 1966, as research assistant to the Rev. Anthony J. Morley, research and planning officer for the Episcopal Diocese of Missouri.

Mr. and Mrs. Burnes will move to Birmingham, Ala., July 31, and live at 5052 Parkway Avenue, Fairfield.

Mrs. Urban Wins Award

Mrs. Dewey E. Urban has won the annual Bernice Edlund award for the ideal golfer.

Chosen by a secret committee, Mrs. Urban was presented the award at the 29th annual Women's Golf tournament held at the Milburn Country Club in Kansas City July 10-15.

This award is presented each year at the meeting of the Women's Missouri Golf Association to a tournament entrant who has promoted the constitutional aims of the association and set an ideal standard of conduct during the tournament and throughout the year by her application and devotion to golf, her demeanor and appearance on the golf course, her strict observance of the rules and etiquette of the game and her high degree of sportsmanship.

Mrs. Mary McArthur Becomes Administrator

Mrs. Mary McArthur, Morley, has been promoted to dial administrator for Southwestern Bell Telephone Company.

She will coordinate equipment installations and make use studies for 54 exchanges in Southeast Missouri.

Mrs. McArthur joined Southwestern Bell in 1948 in St. Louis as an operator. In 1957, she transferred to Sikeston where she later became a central office clerk.

She and her husband, Con McArthur, have three children: Robert, 11; Sandra Kay, 8; Linda Ann, 7 months.

Fashions Strike Military Poses

ROME (AP)— Rome fashions have gone on military maneuvers.

Fabiani was the commanding officer who put soldier styles on parade Monday.

Coats and suits had the stiff, high collars that Napoleon made famous. Shoulders were briskly squared.

Epaulettes were everywhere. Flag red and Prussian blue were the regimental colors he used.

Coats were boxily straight and loose in back. Then there was the modified military tent, an old Fabiani favorite but less wide this season.

Skirts still looked short although belted raincoats were designed to keep the calves dry.

High crowned fedoras were in plushy felt. British bowler hats were in mink or beaded for evening.

Dresses were so elegantly understated that their only detail was a pair of vertical slit pockets in the skirt.

Schoolboy grey flannel made a divide skirt and shortie jacket with a shell blouse in lighter grey.

Velvet was promoted to the deluxe class by being threaded with glitter yarns in diagonal checks. Two trouser-suits, one in black and the other in mole-brown velvet, had wide legs and were cut ribcage-high to meet stand-up collar jackets.

GROW PULP FOR BOOKS

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) — A Kentuckian who wants to plant a tree merely has to go to his nearest county library.

Under a joint program by the state Departments of Libraries and Natural Resources, seedlings for loblolly, shortleaf and holly pine and yellow poplar are given out free to anyone asking for them. Planting instructions accompany the seedlings.

The theme for the program is "Get Booked for Seedlings."

WHAT DID YOU PAY FOR ANTIBIOTICS 25 YEARSAGO?

25 years ago you couldn't buy antibiotics at any price. Neither could you get tranquilizers, steroids, radioisotopes, polio vaccines, nor a test of wonder drugs that are now commonplace.

That's why it isn't logical to say, "Prescriptions cost more than they used to." Most of today's drugs weren't available 25 years ago. In fact, over three quarters of the prescriptions written today, are for drugs that didn't exist ten years ago.

Today, Americans spend only one cent from every disposable dollar on drugs. This is no more than in 1938. Also, today's drugs work faster. They are more efficient. They do much to reduce your total of illness. That's why we say: "Today's prescription is the biggest bargain in history."

East Confronts West Over Miniskirt Question

MOSCOW (AP) — It's the greatest East-West confrontation since Glassboro: miniskirts vs. Muscovites.

And the Russians are taking the hard line. One old woman in Gorky Park took a switch to an American girl and lashed the backs of her bare knees.

Around the Intourist hotels, the foreign currency shops and the International Film Festival, Russians ogle the most scantily, most gaudily clad girls ever seen off the stage of the Bolshoi Ballet.

They're foreigners, mainly British, American, Scandinavian and German tourists.

All winter Moscow heard rumors of just how mini the miniskirt had become in that fabled, distant West. A few brave Russians raised hems a scandalous inch above the knee.

But by spring the average dress still amply covered the usually ample Russian kneecap.

Now they're seeing the real thing— 6 to 10 inches above the knee. And the psychedelic colors seem as surprising as the brevity in the drab Moscow setting.

One girl at a film festival party wore a crocheted, see-through "dress" of bathing-suit proportions over a body-stocking. Even the movie stars, not to mention people from the comparatively sophisticated Soviet cultural scene, were shocked.

Less sophisticated, less worldly Muscovites are not taking this invasion calmly.

The babushka— the word means grandmother but applies to any little old Russian woman — in Gorky Park was not alone.

An Australian girl and another babushka were seen in a tug-of-war all the way across a broad, busy street. The old woman was trying to pull the girl's hem down to her knees and the girl was frantically trying to escape.

Will the secretive Russians, who rejected Western "open skies" and disarmament inspection plans, yield to inspection of the upper legs?

Some of the younger tourists from such Communist countries as Poland and Czechoslovakia are wearing minis. Russian girls are envious— and experimenting.

AND NOBODY BLEW IT

BELEN, N.M. (AP) — Asst. Police Chief Joe Gabaldon said the metal whistle he wears around his neck probably saved his life recently.

Gabaldon and Officer Ernest Trujillo went to a Belen motel where a man reportedly was ill. The officers found a motel guest wrestling with a doctor.

During the scuffle to separate the pair, the guest grabbed Gabaldon's pistol and it discharged.

The bullet was deflected by the whistle and Gabaldon escaped injury.

The motel guest was jailed.

Burneses Accept Position On Miles College Faculty

ST. LOUIS - Mr. and Mrs. Donald W. Burnes have joined the faculty of Miles College, the small, Birmingham, Ala., school which made headlines earlier this year by hiring the dean of Harvard College.

Burnes will be assistant professor of history and assistant in administration, effective July 15, and Mrs. Burnes, the former Kay Standley of Sikeston, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L.M. Standley, will be assistant professor of psychology and will work in counseling with the dean of students, effective Sept. 1.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Burnes are graduates of Washington University. Mrs. Burnes received an bachelor of arts degree in 1962, and master of arts in education in 1963, and is a candidate for the doctor of philosophy degree in clinical psychology.

Burnes, a graduate of Phillips Exeter Academy and Princeton University, received his master's degree in education from Washington University this year.

A volunteer for mission, assigned to Trinity church, by the executive council of the Episcopal church in 1964, Burnes has worked since July, 1966, as research assistant to the Rev. Anthony J. Morley, research and planning officer for the Episcopal Diocese of Missouri.

Mr. and Mrs. Burnes will move to Birmingham, Ala., July 31, and live at 5052 Parkway Avenue, Fairfield.

Mrs. Urban Wins Award

Mrs. Dewey E. Urban has won the annual Bernice Edlund award for the ideal golfer.

Chosen by a secret committee, Mrs. Urban was presented the award at the 29th annual Women's Golf tournament held at the Milburn Country Club in Kansas City July 10-15.

This award is presented each year at the meeting of the Women's Missouri Golf Association to a tournament entrant who has promoted the constitutional aims of the association and set an ideal standard of conduct during the tournament and throughout the year by her application and devotion to golf, her demeanor and appearance on the golf course, her strict observance of the rules and etiquette of the game and her high degree of sportsmanship.

Mrs. Mary McArthur Becomes Administrator

Mrs. Mary McArthur, Morley, has been promoted to dial administrator for Southwestern Bell Telephone Company.

She will coordinate equipment installations and make use studies for 54 exchanges in Southeast Missouri.

Potlatch Claims 8-6 Duel

DEXTER - Potlatch Forest of Sikeston and Dexter finally got together for a Black River Connie Mack baseball league game after having two previous scheduled duels cancelled. The outcome was an 8-6 come-from-behind victory for Sikeston.

Potlatch Forest, winners of the league title for its second consecutive year, will meet the Cape Girardeau district winner for the Missouri title later this month.

Sikeston's attack was led by three round trippers, by Wayne Limbaugh, Mike Garner and Terry Scudder with the latter connecting on a seventh inning shot that sent Sikeston ahead with two on board.

Ken Walker held the Sikeston nine intact for the first five innings, allowing only one run and two safeties.

But Sikeston's late inning attack started with a three-run sixth and a four-run seventh to clinch the victory.

Despite two round trippers by Alan Kelley Sikeston fought back from a 4-1 drficit with its late inning surge.

Kelley's blasts came in the fourth and sixth innings to account for three runs. His fourth inning homer was a solo job to start the inning and his sixth inning shot was a two-run blast.

Rudy Manley was the winning hurler for Potlatch, coming in to relieve starter, Bruce Farris. Walker was the loser.

Garner and Farris led the eight-hit Sikeston barrage with two safeties each.

Bill Ringer and Kelley were Dexter's top hitters, collecting two hits each.

61 FOR MARIS

There were no indications in Roger Maris' past that he would ever challenge Babe Ruth's home-run record of 60 in one season. During his five seasons in the minor leagues, the native of Fargo, North Dakota, never hit more than 32 home runs in one year. And during his first four years in the majors, he hit 14, 16 and 39 home runs. The latter total came in 1960, Maris' initial season with the New York Yankees. He also batted .283 and had 112 RBI that year, a performance that coupled with is all-around skills to earn him the Most-Valuable Player award

That award seemed to decrease his chances of even equalling his 1960 statistics in '61. After attending banquets throughout the country all winter, the MVP reported to spring training tired and overweight. In fact, in his first appearance in the batting cage at St. Petersburg, Florida, his bat slipped out of his hands and Yankee pitcher Whitey Ford shouted, "What's the matter, Rog? You still got all that chicken grease left on your hands from the winter?"

Not surprisingly, Maris started the season slowly. After ten games, he was batting .200 and had only one home run. Manager Ralph Houk dropped him to seventh in the batting order. But beginning on May 17, he started hitting "the big tonk," as Maris liked to call the home run.

At the end of May, he had raised his batting average to .248 and had hit 12 home runs. By June 20, his homer total was 27. On July 25, he had his biggest home-run day. He hit four, two in each game, of a doubleheader against the White Sox. His fourth home run that day was his 40th of the season.

Through August 13, Maris was battling teammate Mickey Mantle for the home-run crown. That day both got home runs No. 45. Then Maris began to pull away. On August 22, he became only the ninth player in history to hit 50 home runs, and the first ever to hit 50 before September. Babe Ruth's monumental record of 60 home runs was very definitely within his reach.

Naturally, the pressure on Maris was great. He was set upon by newsmen, photographers and fans, before and after games, wherever he went. The pressure took its toll on Roger. His hair began falling out, he had goose bumps and couldn't sleep at night. To add to his misery, baseball commissioner Ford Frick ruled on September 20 that any home runs hit after 154 games would not count in the race against Ruth's record.

Going into his 154th game, Maris had 58 homers and needed two to qualify under Ford's edict. In that 154th game, against Baltimore, Roger almost tied the record. He hit No. 59 in the third inning, and just missed on two other occasions when long drives curved foul. It was a fine clutch performance and, as the Yankees celebrated the clinching of another pennant, Houk said of Maris: "Now everyone realizes what kind of guy he is, that he could go up there and hit that ball. What a battler he is."

Roger was not finished battling. In New York's 159th game, in Yankee Stadium against Baltimore pitcher Jack Fisher, Maris hit No. 60, the ball soaring into the third deck of the right-field stands, six feet inside the foul pole.

Now came the ultimate drama: the last game of the season. On October 1, 1961, 23,000 fans turned out to see the Yankees play the Boston Red Sox. More important to them than the outcome of the game was whether Maris could hit No. 61 in his last chance.

Tracy Stallard, a fastball righthander, was the Sox pitcher, and he was determined to stop Roger. In the first inning, he did just that. He got Maris out on a long fly ball to left field. Maris got his next chance in the fourth inning.

The scoreboard clock read 2:42 and there was no score, one out, and no one on base. Stallard's first pitch was a fastball, high and outside. The umpire called it a ball. The partisan crowd booed Stallard; they wanted to see Roger get a pitch to swing at. But Stallard wasn't anxious to go down in the record books as the man who served up the pitch for No. 61. The next pitch was another fastball, low and inside. The booing grew louder.

Maris dug in again, pumping his bat menacingly. All he wanted was a chance to hit the ball. Stallard wound up and threw. The pitch was a fastball on the outside corner. Maris whipped the bat around in that graceful, picturebook swing of his. The ball soared toward the right-field stands, landing ten rows back and ten feet to the right of the bullpen. Slowly, he circled the bases to the thunderous ovation of the Yankee Stadium crowd.

The home run won the game for New York, 1-0, and won Maris a place in baseball history. It was a magnificent performance by a young man no one had suspected was capable of greatness.

Birds End 3-Game Skid With 6-4 Win

Dal Maxvill goes five years between home runs and when he gets on all he can think about is singles and Tim MCarver takes over the National League batting lead and says he don't want any part of it.

"I hit a homer my first year up in 1962, then waited five years for the next one," said Maxville, the St. Louis Cardinals slender shortstop. "I've come to the conclusion I'm not a long ball hitter.

"I'd really rather have five singles," Maxvill added. They'd help the team a lot more."

Maxie's homer wasn't the winning run in St. Louis' 6-4 decision over the New York Mets Monday night. As a matter of fact the ball didn't even make it into the stands.

But when he lined the ball into centerfield in the sixth inning and Larry Stahl fell before he could cut it off, Maxvill kept running.

McCarver, the league's top hitter, says "I'd much rather hit .240 and win the pennant than hit .370 and come in seventh. The victory left the Cards two games in front of Chicago in the National League pennant race.

"As far as I'm concerned, leading the league is out of reach," said McCarver after his four straight hits raised his average to .355. "I've flirted with .300 a few times and never even made that."

Mike Shannon's seventh homer of the year in the fourth inning was the conventional type. McCarver singled to open the inning then Shannon sent the next pitch screaming into the left field seats. Two singles and one run later losing pitcher Don Cardwell was gone.

Maxvill's inside-the-park homer wasn't the only heroic's of the sixth inning.

Ed Kranepool bunted a single and Ed Charles doubled to put men on second and third with nobody out. Then pitching coach Billie Muffett waslked to the mound.

"He came out," Dick Hughes said, "and told me 'Boy, this is it. Win it or lose right now.' "

Hughes, who at 29 no longer is a boy, won it, his eighth against three losses. A shallow pop fly, two strikeouts and the Cards walked into the dugout.

But it seemed like every time the Cardinals walked out of the dugout they had to face Jerry Buchek who doubled in the second and scored on Jerry Grote's single. Then in the ninth he smacked his ninth homer of the year.

Detroit Suffers 7th Straight

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The saying goes, "Youth must be served," and old-timer Carl Yastrzemski thinks it could be this year.

Not only does the 27-year-old Boston outfielder think it must be served, he has been taking steps all season to make sure it is.

In his latest step Monday night, Yastrzemski, the oldest regular in a starting line-up which averages 24 years of age, doubled, homered and drove in three runs as the Red Sox trounced Detroit 7-1 and took over sole possession of third place in the American League.

Washington won its eighth straight by beating Cleveland 4-2, Baltimore topped New York 6-1 and California blanked Minnesota 2-0 in other AL games. Chicago and Kansas City were not scheduled.

Youth and hot weather seem like a winning combination to Yastrzemski.

"This is the youngest team among the contenders," he said. "Even last year when he finished ninth, we played our best ball in late July and August."

In gaining their fourth straight victory and sixth in the last seven games, the Red Sox wasted little time, jumping on Detroit's Denny McLain for three runs in the first inning.

Mike Andrews, 24, scored on a double by Joe Foy, 24. Foy came in on Yastrzemski's double, and 23-year-old George Scott followed with an RBI single.

A double by Foy sandwiched between singles by Andrews and Tony Conigliaro, 22, added two more in the fifth and Yastrzemski's 22nd homer, with Foy aboard on a single, concluded the scoring in the eighth and sealed the Tigers' seventh straight loss which dropped them into fourth place.

Yastrzemski is hitting .328 with 65 RBI. He already has six more homers and just 15 less RBI than he did last season when he hit .278.

Consecutive run-scoring singles in the third inning sparked the Senators, who now have the longest winning streak in the expansion club's history and the longest in Washington since the 1949 coub won nine.

Hornung's Career Questionable

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Paul Hornung, the Golden Boy of pro football for the last decade, may be through.

No one knows. Or at least no one is saying. But the prospects are not good.

"Hornung has a 50-50 chance to play," said Tom Fears, coach of the New Orleans Saints, the expansion team that claimed the do-everything halfback in the draft.

"I don't want to make a statement until everything is sure," said Saints owner John Mecom Jr.

Hornung wasn't saying anything.

The 31-year-old veteran, a two-time NFL Most Valuable Player for the Green Bay Packers and holder of the league scoring record, was in the Scripps Clinic in La Jolla, Calif., today undergoing a second series of tests to determine whether or not he can continue his career.

The question centers around possible nerve damage to his neck and-or left arm, arising out a neck injury he suffered last season while scoring a touchdown against the Chicago Bears.

"My neck snapped back diving into the end zone," Hornung said. "I don't remember the guy who was defending but he fell on me and jammed my neck."

Hornung already has undergone a series of tests at the Mayo Clinic. Those results have not been disclosed, but presumably he would not be taking a second set of tests had Mayo given him a clean bill of health.

Hornung said Mecom urged further tests to get "a couple of opinions. So they thought it would be a good idea to enter Scripps."

While the Saints were holding their breath about Hornung, the New York Jets and Cleveland Browns got some good news and the Detroit Lions got some backtalk as the highlights from the training camps as the major pro teams prepared to get down to heavy work.

Joe Namath, the Jets' $400,000 bonus quarterback, said his latest knee operation apparently was successful. Frank Ryan, Cleveland quarterback, who suffered a shoulder separation last year, said he was fully recovered. Defensive halfback Dick Lebeau and linebacker Wayne Walker became holdouts with Detroit.

"The knee hasn't bothered me since the operation, and it feels the best it has in two years," said Namath, who had a second operation on his balky right knee during the offseason.

"I haven't tried to run and cut yet. Not because I'm afraid to. It just hasn't been necessary."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Rams picked up eight-year veteran center Bob Whitlow from the Atlanta Falcons Monday for an undisclosed future draft choice.

Potlatch Claims 8-6 Duel

DEXTER - Potlatch Forest of Sikeston and Dexter finally got together for a Black River Connie Mack baseball league game after having two previous scheduled duels cancelled. The outcome was an 8-6 come-from-behind victory for Sikeston.

Potlatch Forest, winners of the league title for its second consecutive year, will meet the Cape Girardeau district winner for the Missouri title later this month.

Sikeston's attack was led by three round trippers, by Wayne Limbaugh, Mike Garner and Terry Scudder with the latter connecting on a seventh inning shot that sent Sikeston ahead with two on board.

Ken Walker held the Sikeston nine intact for the first five innings, allowing only one run and two safeties.

But Sikeston's late inning attack started with a three-run sixth and a four-run seventh to clinch the victory.

Despite two round trippers by Alan Kelley Sikeston fought back from a 4-1 drficit with its late inning surge.

Kelley's blasts came in the fourth and sixth innings to account for three runs. His fourth inning homer was a solo job to start the inning and his sixth inning shot was a two-run blast.

Rudy Manley was the winning hurler for Potlatch, coming in to relieve starter, Bruce Farris. Walker was the loser.

Garner and Farris led the eight-hit Sikeston barrage with two safeties each.

Bill Ringer and Kelley were Dexter's top hitters, collecting two hits each.

Fisk is scheduled to be Potlatch's final opponent. The game is to be at VFW stadium tomorrow beginning at 8 p.m.

What a battler he is."

Roger was not finished battling. In New York's 159th game, in Yankee Stadium against Baltimore pitcher Jack Fisher, Maris hit No. 60, the ball soaring into the third deck of the right-field stands, six feet inside the foul pole.

Now came the ultimate drama: the last game of the season. On October 1, 1961, 23,000 fans turned out to see the Yankees play the Boston Red Sox. More important to them than the outcome of the game was whether Maris could hit No. 61 in his last chance.

Tracy Stallard, a fasthall righthander, was the Sox pitcher, and he was determined to stop Roger. In the first inning, he did just that. He got Maris out on a long fly ball to left field. Maris got his next chance in the fourth inning.

The scoreboard clock read 2:42 and there was no score, one out, and no one on base. Stallard's first pitch was a fasthall, high and outside. The umpire called it a ball. The partisan crowd booed Stallard; they wanted to see Roger get a pitch to swing at. But Stallard wasn't anxious to go down in the record books as the man who served up the pitch for No. 61. The next pitch was another fasthall, low and inside. The booing grew louder.

Maris dug in again, pumping his bat menacingly. All he wanted was a chance to hit the ball. Stallard wound up and threw. The pitch was a fasthall on the outside corner. Maris whipped the bat around in that graceful, picturebook swing of his. The ball soared toward the right-field stands, landing ten rows back and ten feet to the right of the bullpen. Slowly, he circled the bases to the thunderous ovation of the Yankee Stadium crowd.

The home run won the game for New York, 1-0, and won Maris a place in baseball history. It was a magnificent performance by a young man no one had suspected was capable of greatness.

Birds End 3-Game Skid With 6-4 Win

Dal Maxvill goes five years between home runs and when he gets on all he can think about is singles and Tim MCarver takes over the National League batting lead and says he don't want any part of it.

"I hit a homer my first year up in 1962, then waited five years for the next one," said Maxville, the St. Louis Cardinals slender shortstop. "I've come to the conclusion I'm not a long ball hitter.

"I'd really rather have five singles," Maxvill added. They'd help the team a lot more."

Maxie's homer wasn't the winning run in St. Louis' 6-4 decision over the New York Mets Monday night. As a matter of fact the ball didn't even make it into the stands.

But when he lined the ball into centerfield in the sixth inning and Larry Stahl fell before he could cut it off, Maxvill kept running.

MCarver, the league's top hitter, says "I'd much rather hit .240 and win the pennant than hit .370 and come in seventh. The victory left the Cards two games in front of Chicago in the National League pennant race.

"As far as I'm concerned, the leading the league is out of reach," said McCarver after his four straight hits raised his average to .355. "I've flirted with .300 a few times and never even made that."

Mike Shannon's seventh homer of the year in the fourth inning was the conventional type. McCarver singled to open the inning then Shannon sent the next pitch screaming into the left field seats. Two singles and one run later losing pitcher Don Cardwell was gone.

Maxvill's inside-the-park homer wasn't the only heroic's of the sixth inning.

Ed Kranepool bunted a single and Ed Charles doubled to put men on second and third with nobody out. Then pitching coach Billie Muffett waslked to the mound.

"He came out," Dick Hughes said, "and told me 'Boy, this is it. Win it or lose right now.'"

Hughes, who at 29 no longer is a boy, won it, his eighth against three losses. A shallow pop fly, two strikeouts and the Cards walked into the dugout.

But it seemed like every time the Cardinals walked out of the dugout they had to face Jerry Buchek who doubled in the second and scored on Jerry Grote's single. Then in the ninth he smacked his ninth homer of the year.

Detroit Suffers 7th Straight

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The saying goes, "Youth must be served," and old-timer Carl Yastrzemski thinks it could be this year.

Not only does the 27-year-old Boston outfielder think it must be served, he has been taking steps all season to make sure it is.

In his latest step Monday night, Yastrzemski, the oldest regular in a starting line-up which averages 24 years of age, doubled, homered and drove in three runs as the Red Sox trounced Detroit 7-1 and took over sole possesson of third place in the American League.

Washington won its eighth straight by beating Cleveland 4-2, Baltimore topped New York 6-1 and California blanked Minnesota 2-0 in other AL games. Chicago and Kansas City were not scheduled.

Youth and hot weather seem like a winning combination to Yastrzemski.

"This is the youngest team among the contenders," he said. "Even last year when he finished ninth, we played our best ball in late July and August."

In gaining their fourth straight victory and sixth in the last seven games, the Red Sox wasted little time, jumping on Detroit's Denny McLain for three runs in the first inning.

Mike Andrews, 24, scored on a double by Joe Foy, 24. Foy came in on Yastrzemski's double, and 23-year-old George Scott followed with an RBI single.

A double by Foy sandwiched between singles by Andrews and Tony Conigliaro, 22, added two more in the fifth and Yastrzemski's 22nd homer, with Foy aboard on a single, concluded the scoring in the eighth and sealed the Tigers' seventh straight loss which dropped them into fourth place.

Yastrzemski is hitting .328 with 65 RBI. He already has six more homers and just 15 less RBI than he did last season when he hit .278.

Consecutive run-scoring singles in the third inning sparked the Senators, who now have the longest winning streak in the expansion club's history and the longest in Washington since the 1949 coub won nine.

Hornung's Career Questionable

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Paul Hornung, the Golden Boy of pro football for the last decade, may be through.

No one knows. Or at least no one is saying. But the prospects are not good.

"Hornung has a 50-50 chance to play," said Tom Fears, coach of the New Orleans Saints, the expansion team that claimed the do-everything halfback in the draft.

"I don't want to make a statement until everything is sure," said Saints owner John Mecom Jr.

Hornung wasn't saying anything.

The 31-year-old veteran, a two-time NFL Most Valuable Player for the Green Bay Packers and holder of the league scoring record, was in the Scripps Clinic in La Jolla, Calif., today undergoing a second series of tests to determine whether or not he can continue his career.

The question centers around possible nerve damage to his neck and-or left arm, arising out a neck injury he suffered last season while scoring a touchdown against the Chicago Bears.

"My neck snapped back diving into the end zone," Hornung said. "I don't remember the guy who was defending but he fell on me and jammed my neck."

Hornung already has undergone a series of tests at the Mayo Clinic. Those results have not been disclosed, but presumably he would not be taking a second set of tests had Mayo given him a clean bill of health.

Hornung said Mecom urged further tests to get "a couple of opinions. So they thought it would be a good idea to enter Scripps."

While the Saints were holding their breath about Hornung, the New York Jets and Cleveland Browns got some good news and the Detroit Lions got some backtalk as the highlights from the training camps as the major pro teams prepared to get down to heavy work.

Joe Namath, the Jets' $400,000 bonus quarterback, said his latest knee operation apparently was successful. Frank Ryan, Cleveland quarterback, who suffered a shoulder separation last year, said he was fully recovered. Defensive halfback Dick Lebeau and linebacker Wayne Walker became holdouts with Detroit.

"The knee hasn't bothered me since the operation, and it feels the best it has in two years," said Namath, who had a second operation on his balky right knee during the offseason.

"I haven't tried to run and cut yet. Not because I'm afraid to. It just hasn't been necessary."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Rams picked up eight-year veteran center Bob Whitlow from the Atlanta Falcons Monday for an undisclosed future draft choice.

Child's Expression Can Answer Questions about Poverty War

POVERTY PICTURES attract attention of viewers at the junior high school auditorium.

That is the purpose of the traveling exhibit of 450 prize winning photographs on display from 1 p.m. to 8 p.m. through Monday at the junior high school auditorium. They are not pretty photographs and they are not horrifyingly grotesque yet they are not mediocore.

They are appalling when you realize that they are the faces of today, culled from more than over 25,000 photographs of poverty, pulled from the nation's magazines, newspapers and the files of free lance photographers.

Sure, you've seen poverty before. In Southeast Missouri, how can you avoid it; or in St. Louis, or in Memphis.

That's the point the pictures hope to make; that poverty is everywhere in affluent America.

The exhibit was suggested by Vice President Hubert Humphrey. He was looking for a way to open the eyes of Americans who pass the same nameless faces, the same expressive faces, the same poverty stricken faces as those in the pictures every day, and don't look at them.

The pictures were put in three exhibits and after an opening at the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, D.C., were sent around the country. Sikeston's exhibit came from Joplin and will go to Sedalia. It is sponsored by the Office of Economic Opportunity and the Delta Area Economic Opportunity Corporation.

The photos are representative of all regions of America, including Ozark Missouri.

Some are family portraits and if there is a resemblance between the Ozark family and the West Virginia family. The expression doesn't change with the years either, in comparing historical photographs with the others.

AN IMPOVERISHED CHILD, her dog, a tricycle and rubbish.

Some moments are so intimate that you feel you are intruding. But so do the subjects of one of these photos, as the faces of the young children, who watched their 15-year-old unwed sister give birth to a child born out of wedlock, clearly show.

You'd like to ask somebody who was there questions about many of the photographs. Why is that mother carrying the child with its eyes closed? Is it asleep, ill or dead? What happened to the young migrant worker picking beans? She doesn't look more than seven.

What about that cute little girl in the upstairs bedroom with the wooden plank foor, walls and ceiling. She has a new book in one picture, and in another she is looking out the window with what must be hope for the future. What is her life like? Where will she go?

Some of the pictures are happy and you can laugh with the children jumping on the old sofa or playing in the water.

The end is happy too. The last group of pictures were especially made for the exhibit. They show Head Start, the Job Corps, Volunteers in Service to America and other areas of the poverty program at work.

What can one expression do? It can answer questions about the poverty program.

DREW PEARSON SAYS: Meany blames one man for railroad strike; LBJ pins blame on machinists head Roy Siemiller; five Democratic senators vote solidly for labor against the President.

WASHINGTON -- Two off-the-record meetings were held Friday just before the railroad strike which throw significant insight on why the strike happened.

Meeting No. 1 -- was between representatives of the six shop craft unions at which the majority voted not to strike. One union, however, the international union of association of machinists, voted to strike and sent out carefully worded telegrams hinting that a strike could be called.

The other unions were: the boilermakers, blacksmiths, sheet metal workers, electrical workers, railway carmen, and the firemen and oilers.

The chief dissenter, however, Roy Siemiller, President of the machinists, had his way. After the meeting he sent telegrams to 200 of his lodge Presidents stating that the machinists' no-strike pledge expired at midnight July 15. This indirect notice to strike was enough.

Meeting No. 2 -- also held Friday afternoon, as in the office of speaker John McCormack in the house of representatives to consider the repercussions of a strike. Present were: secretary of defense Robert McNamara; secretary of labor Willard Wirtz; under secretary of labor James Reynolds; Democratic house leader Carl Albert of Oklahoma; Democratic whip Hale Boggs of Louisiana; Rep. Harley Staggers of West Virginia, chairman of the house commerce committee who has been opposed to antistrike legislation; and Rep. William Springer of Illinois, the No. 1 Republican on the house commerce committee who favors strike control in wartime.

VIETNAM AND RAILROAD STRIKE

While this meeting was in session word came from the other meeting that the machinsts were striking four western railroads. This, secretary McNamara pointed out, would affect shipments to Vietnam, since these roads served Pacific rebarkation ports.

Chairman Staggers of the house commerce committee had complete confidence in the machinists and went off to West Virginia for the weekend convinced there would be no strike. He indicated, however, that if there was a strike he would have to reconsider his no-strike bill position. Part of the trouble in the long drawn-out congressional hassle over a railroad mediation-arbitration bill has been the sweet old gentleman from West Virginia, who is torn between the coal-carrying railroads and railroad labor, both of which support him. He has worried himself sick between the two, but finally threw his weight to labor.

Three weeks earlier, June 26, there was another singificant meeting, this one a breakfast at the White House, which the President called for the purpose of convincing Staggers that he was wrong. Members of Staggers' house commerce committee were present, plus Staggers himself.

ONE MAN IS OBSTACLE

"We can get along with everyone except one man," the President told them. "I have it on the word of George Meany, twice, that this dispute could be settled if it were not for one man -- Roy Siemiller."

It was Siemiller who precipitated the airline strike last year that broke the administration's wage guidelines and resulted in a general upward wage spiral. He now wants the same thing in the railway dispute.

The government panel recommended a six per cent wage increase for the shop craft unions. The railways had already reached a five per cent increase with most of their unions; so anything above six per cent for the machinists would cause the entire wage pattern to be reopened.

Meanwhile the dispute has dragged on. First it was postponed 60 days under the railway labor act, then 20 days by act of congress, then 47 days. To prevent further postponements, Sen. Wayne Morse, D-Ore., introduced a "mediation with finality" bill providing for 90 days of mediation after which the recommendations of a government panel would have to be accepted, period. There would be no further delays, no further mediation.

Rep. Staggers and the house of representatives objected. They wanted no mandatory wage agreement after the 90 days of mediation.

The senate accepted the Morse bill 70 to 15. But when the bill went to conference to straighten out differences between the house and senate, five Democratic senators refused to abide by the 70-to 15 senate vote. They stuck by Roy Siemiller. The five Democrats are: Ralph Yarborough, Texas; Harrison Williams, N.J., Claiborne Pell, R. I., Gaylord Nelson, Wis.; and Bobby Kennedy, N.Y.

Labor pressure on them has been terrific. Labor lobbyists bore down with their full artillery.

Their ultimatum was: Either go along or we'll defeat you.

On the other side, supporting Morse for "mediation with finality" was only one Democrat, Jennings Randolph of West Virginia, plus four Republicans -- Jacob Javits, N.Y., Winston Prouty, Vt., Paul Fannin, Arizona, and Robert Griffin, Michigan. In the end, Javits went over to the pro-labor side on a compromise proposal.

On the house side, the following lined up with Staggers for the machinists: John Dingell, Mich., Dan Ronan, Ill., Brock Adams, Wash., all Democrats, with Glenn Cunningham, Nebr., Republican.

Chief support for the administration came from a Republican, Bill Springer, who is not against labor but urged that there must be a limitation on the right to strike in wartime. With him voted Sam Devine, Ohio, Dan Kuykendall, Tenn., Republicans; and Jake Pickle of Texas, a Democrat.

For three weeks the closed-door debate had dragged on with neither side willing to give, until finally Roy Siemiller and the machinists precipitated a showdown strike.

Symington Sponsors Rural Bill

WASHINGTON - Sen. Stuart Symington (D-Mo) announced today that he is joining as a co-sponsor of a bill to provide assistance for development of rural areas and communities. Hearings on the bill are being held by the senate subcommittee on agricultural credit and rural electrification.

The bill would amend the consolidated Farmers Home Administration act. Lans and grants would be authorized for immunity centers in rural areas. Authority would be granted to provide loans to farers to establish non-farm enterprises on their farms where needed to supplement income.

The authorization for water and sewer grants would be increased from $50 million to $150 million and water and sewer planning funds would rise from $5 million to $25 million.

The authorization for water and sewer grants would be increased from $50 million to $150 million and water and sewer planning funds would rise from $5 million to $25 million.

Earlier this year the President recommended the elimination of the $450 million ceiling on the annual insured loans authorizations for loans to individual farmers and rural groups. The bill incorporates this recommendation.

Some are family portraits and if there is a resemblance between the Ozark family and the West Virginia family. The expression doesn't change with the years either, in comparing historical photographs with the others.

Some moments are so intimate that you feel you are intruding. But so do the subjects of one of these photos, as the faces of the young children, who watched their 15-year-old unwed sister give birth to a child born out of wedlock, clearly show.

You'd like to ask somebody who was there questions about many of the photographs. Why is that mother carrying the child with its eyes closed? Is it asleep, ill or dead? What happened to the young migrant worker picking beans? She doesn't look more than seven.

What about that cute little girl in the upstairs bedroom with the wooden plank foor, walls and ceiling. She has a new book in one picture, and in another she is looking out the window with what must be hope for the future. What is her life like? Where will she go?

Some of the pictures are happy and you can laugh with the children jumping on the old sofa or playing in the water.

The end is happy too. The last group of pictures were especially made for the exhibit. They show Head Start, the Job Corps, Volunteers in Service to America and other areas of the poverty program at work.

What can one expression do? It can answer questions about the poverty program.

POVERTY PICTURES attract attention of viewers at the junior high school auditorium.

Drew Pearson Special

DREW PEARSON SAYS:

Meany blames one man for railroad strike; LBJ pins blame on machinists head Roy Siemiller; five Democratic senators vote solidly for labor against the President.

WASHINGTON -- Two off-the-record meetings were held Friday just before the railroad strike which throw significant insight on why the strike happened.

Meeting No. 1 -- was between representatives of the six shop craft unions at which the majority voted not to strike. One union, however, the international union of association of machinists, voted to strike and sent out carefully worded telegrams hinting that a strike could be called.

The other unions were: the boilermakers, blacksmiths, sheet metal workers, electrical workers, railway carmen, and the firemen and oilers.

The chief dissenter, however, Roy Siemiller, President of the machinists, had his way. After the meeting he sent telegrams to 200 of his lodge Presidents stating that the machinists' no-strike pledge expired at midnight July 15. This indirect notice to strike was enough.

Meeting No. 2 -- also held Friday afternoon, as in the office of speaker John McCormack in the house of representatives to consider the repercussions of a strike. Present were: secretary of defense Robert McNamara; secretary of labor Willard Wirtz; under secretary of labor James Reynolds; Democratic house leader Carl Albert of Oklahoma; Democratic whip Hale Boggs of Louisiana; Rep. Harley Staggers of West Virginia, chairman of the house commerce committee who has been opposed to antistrike legislation; and Rep. William Springer of Illinois, the No. 1 Republican on the house commerce committee who favors strike control in wartime.

VIETNAM AND RAILROAD STRIKE

While this meeting was in session word came from the other meeting that the machinsts were striking four western railroads. This, secretary McNamara pointed out, would affect shipments to Vietnam, since these roads served Pacific rebarkation ports.

Chairman Staggers of the house commerce committee had complete confidence in the machinists and went off to West Virginia for the weekend convinced there would be no strike. He indicated, however, that if there was a strike he would have to reconsider his no-strike bill position. Part of the trouble in the long drawn-out congressional hassle over a railroad mediation-arbitration bill has been the sweet old gentleman from West Virginia, who is torn between the coal-carrying railroads and railroad labor, both of which support him. He has worried himself sick between the two, but finally threw his weight to labor.

Three weeks earlier, June 26, there was another singificant meeting, this one a breakfast at the White House, which the President called for the purpose of convincing Staggers that he was wrong. Members of Staggers' house commerce committee were present, plus Staggers himself.

ONE MAN IS OBSTACLE

"We can get along with everyone except one man," the President told them. "I have it on the word of George Meany, twice, that this dispute could be settled if it were not for one man -- Roy Siemiller."

It was Siemiller who precipitated the airline strike last year that broke the administration's wage guidelines and resulted in a general upward wage spiral. He now wants the same thing in the railway dispute.

The government panel recommended a six per cent wage increase for the shop craft unions. The railways had already reached a five per cent increase with most of their unions; so anything above six per cent for the machinists would cause the entire wage pattern to be reopened.

Meanwhile the dispute has dragged on. First it was postponed 60 days under the railway labor act, then 20 days by act of congress, then 47 days. To prevent further postponements, Sen. Wayne Morse, D-Ore., introduced a "mediation with finality" bill providing for 90 days of mediation after which the recommendations of a government panel would have to be accepted, period. There would be no further delays, no further mediation.

Rep. Staggers and the house of representatives objected. They wanted no mandatory wage agreement after the 90 days of mediation.

The senate accepted the Morse bill 70 to 15. But when the bill went to conference to straighten out differences between the house and senate, five Democratic senators refused to abide by the 70-to 15 senate vote. They stuck by Roy Siemiller. The five Democrats are: Ralph Yarborough, Texas; Harrison Williams, N.J., Claiborne Pell, R. I., Gaylord Nelson, Wis.; and Bobby Kennedy, N.Y.

Labor pressure on them has been terrific. Labor lobbyists bore down with their full artillery.

Their ultimatum was: Either go along or we'll defeat you.

On the other side, supporting Morse for "mediation with finality" was only one Democrat, Jennings Randolph of West Virginia, plus four Republicans -- Jacob Javits, N.Y., Winston Prouty, Vt., Paul Fannin, Arizona, and Robert Griffin, Michigan. In the end, Javits went over to the pro-labor side on a compromise proposal.

On the house side, the following lined up with Staggers for the machinists: John Dingell, Mich., Dan Ronan, Ill., Brock Adams, Wash., all Democrats, with Glenn Cunningham, Nebr., Republican.

Chief support for the administration came from a Republican, Bill Springer, who is not against labor but urged that there must be a limitation on the right to strike in wartime. With him voted Sam Devine, Ohio, Dan Kuykendall, Tenn., Republicans; and Jake Pickle of Texas, a Democrat.

For three weeks the closed-door debate had dragged on with neither side willing to give, until finally Roy Siemiller and the machinists precipitated a showdown strike.

Symington Sponsors Rural Bill

WASHINGTON - Sen. Stuart Symington (D-Mo) announced today that he is joining as a co-sponsor of a bill to provide assistance for development of rural areas and communities. Hearings on the bill are being held by the senate subcommittee on agricultural credit and rural electrification.

The bill would amend the consolidated Farmers Home Administration act. Lans and grants would be authorized for immunity centers in rural areas. Authority would be granted to provide loans to farers to establish non-farm enterprises on their farms where needed to supplement income.

The authorization for water and sewer grants would be increased from $50 million to $150 million and water and sewer planning funds would rise from $5 million to $25 million.

The authorization for water and sewer grants would be increased from $50 million to $150 million and water and sewer planning funds would rise from $5 million to $25 million.

Earlier this year the President recommended the elimination of the $450 million ceiling on the annual insured loans authorizations for loans to individual farmers and rural groups. The bill incorporates this recommendation.

Proposed Postal Hike Advances

WASHINGTON (AP) - It would cost you six cents to mail a letter - or a dime if you send it air mail - under a postal rate increase approved by a House subcommittee.

That's a penny more than the present first class letter rate and two cents more than the air mail levy.

Post cards would be hit even harder, jumping from their present four cent and six cent rates for surface and air mail respectively to the same six cents and ten cents approved for sealed letters.

The proposal still has a long way to go through congressional channels before becoming law, however.

There is much concern these days about bad spelling by the younger generation. For instance, a certain college senior may well be a most bewildered young man. Finding that he had left his dungarees at home, he wrote: "Dear Mother, Please send me my genes."

She replied: "Dear Son, If you don't have them by now, there is nothing I can do about it."

ARMY RESERVE
FACTS

- The Army Reserve consists of more than one million officers and enlisted men and women, all dedicated to the highest principles of military service.
- Army reservists, in their dual role as civilian-soldiers, demonstrate a keen sense of duty in their efforts to maintain military proficiency while carrying on their civilian pursuits.
- The average age of Army Reservists is 35 for officers and 25 for enlisted men.
- In the 1966 National Rifle and Pistol Matches at Camp Perry, Ohio, Army Reserve marksmen set two new pistol team records, won nine major trophies in the rifle matches and set a new national Reserve record in the Infantry Team Match.
- More than 60 per cent of the doctors and 70 per cent of the dentists on active military duty are members of the Army Reserve.

TWO BOOSTERS FOR National Rabbit Week, are Sharon, four, (left), and her identical twin, Karen, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Dyer, 654 Park. They are making friends with Siamese rabbits, owned by Shirrel Kenser, route four, grandfather of the girls.

National Rabbit Week Observed

The 25 members of the Southeast Missouri Rabbit Breeders Association are joining in with more than 200,000 members over the nation, in observance of National Rabbit Week, July 16-22.

The association is headed by David C. Hughes, route two, president.

Rabbits were domesticated in Africa and Asia more than 3,000 years ago. Three million pounds of rabbit meat was produced in San Diego alone.

Besides being used as food the fur is used in the manufacturer of millions of men's hats and women's fur pieces.

The district association last year won national honors for promotion.

After working his way through college and graduate school a young scholar obtained a teaching position in a small New England college. To help him repay government educational loans, his wife, an accomplished cook, worked in a bakery as a pastry chief from 4 a.m. until noon each day.

At the midyear faculty party, some of the professors' wives were discussing their extracurricular activities. One confessed that she wrote poetry, another was active in community organizations, still another was taking a Red Cross first-aid course. "And what do you do, my dear?" the wife of the college president asked the young professor's wife.

Hesitating for only a moment, she replied, "I spend a great deal of time making flour arrangements."

MOST TAX FROM SALES

CHICAGO (AP) – Sales taxes proved the best revenue raiser for 31 states, says Commerce Clearing House.

They accounted for 26.8 per cent of the total fiscal 1966 50-state tax take of $29.4 billion.

Of seven states producing $13.8 billion of the total collected, five – California, Pennsylvania, Michigan, Illinois and Ohio – drew the most income from their sales taxes. New York found income taxes a better producer. Texas received most of its revenue from motor fuel taxes.

Only one state – Colorado – showed a switch in its best revenue source from 1965, moving from the income tax to the sales tax.

Pvt. Anthony Howard

(PK0886) CAMP PENDLETON, Calif. (FHTNC) -- Marine Pvt. Anthony R. Howard, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wallace R. Howard of Route 1, Sikeston, Mo., has completed four weeks of individual combat training at this Marine Corps Base.

During his more than 200 hours of training, he learned about weapons and combat techniques, from combat veteran instructors. They taught him how to conduct combat patrols, detect and remove mines and booby traps and use the standard Marine Corps infantry weapons.

He will now receive at least four weeks of specialist training before being assigned to his first permanent unit. Marines going to combat units will get detailed training in the particular combat skill they are designated for. Those who are going into technical fields will receive their advanced training at one of a variety of technical schools throughout the country.

PRESERVED PRESERVES

LOUISVILLE (AP) – More than 20 years ago a jar of jam, made by the Goodwin Preserving Co., was sent to Europe as part of a food package to help the civilian population after World War II.

Goodwin Preserving later was absorbed in a merger but Norbert Miller, who had worked for the company, recently received this note from a resident of Hrdcany, Czechoslovakia.

"Dear Sirs:

"After the second great war there was a help of aid for Czechoslovakia, too. It was in the year 1946-47. You are sure not to believe it but really I have the pleasure to let you know some news about the quality of your products.

"After 20 years I opened one forgotten tin of jam and tasted it. As far as the quality was concerned, all was all right and even the specially galvanized inner sheet showed any defect."

DIEHLSTADT NEWS

Health is very good.

Death has once more visited our town and taken away one of our best women, the wife of C.C. Poe. Mrs. Poe was a good, kind and affectionate wife, mother and neighbor. She was loved by all who knew her, never having anything to say about anyone only in the highest terms and that in a christian-like manner. She leaves a husband and three children and a host of friends to mourn her death. Her remains were taken to the Benyard cemetry to await the final resurrection at God's call. The husband and family has the sympathy of the community.

Mrs. Loudermilk is in very critical condition and her recovery is said to be doubtful, but it is to be hoped that she may soon be up again.

D. L. Hindman and Mrs. Emma Smiley, both of this place, were united in marriage last Tuesday at Charleston, by Esq. Stratton.

Weather Reports Aid Traveler

by Leonard F. Hand
Meteorologist
Delta Center

PORTAGEVILLE -- Once the forecast has been read, the next question is "Where is it raining now, and when will wet weather reach our location?" Radar reports give good coverage of rain or shower patterns, but many people find it easier to orient themselves by cities rather than by the area described in the radar summary.

Reports from a number of cities in Missouri and surrounding states are transmitted frequently during the day over the ESSA weather wire. Present weather and temperature, given with each report, pinpoint spots where fair or foul weather exists at that time. By listening attentively, you can follow the progress of showers or even cold fronts by the shift from city to city of rain or temperature drops.

Travelers, particularly during the winter, find these reports an excellent means for anticipating snow or icy conditions as they proceed on their route. Motorists alerted to rainy conditions ahead are ready to reduce speed to avoid hazards of slippery, rain - slicked road surfaces.

Winter travellers can use these reports to plan an alternate route or to decide to turn back when snow, sleet or freezing rain are in progress across their intended path or at their destination. If turning back is not practical, preparations such as installing tire chains can be made before the hazard is encountered.

Service stations could greatly increase their aid to motorists by maintaining a route weather check for transient customers stopping for fuel. The reports are there for your use.

Proposed Postal Hike Advances

WASHINGTON (AP) - It would cost you six cents to mail a letter - or a dime if you send it air mail - under a postal rate increase approved by a House subcommittee.

That's a penny more than the present first class letter rate and two cents more than the air mail levy.

Post cards would be hit even harder, jumping from their present four cent and six cent rates for surface and air mail respectively to the same six cents and ten cents approved for sealed letters.

The proposal still has a long way to go through congressional channels before becoming law, however.

There is much concern these days about bad spelling by the younger generation. For instance, a certain college senior may well be a most bewildered young man. Finding that he had left his dungarees at home, he wrote: "Dear Mother, Please send me my genes."

She replied: "Dear Son, If you don't have them by now, there is nothing I can do about it."

ARMY RESERVE
FACTS

- The Army Reserve consists of more than one million officers and enlisted men and women, all dedicated to the highest principles of military service.
- Army reservists, in their dual role as civilian-soldiers, demonstrate a keen sense of duty in their efforts to maintain military proficiency while carrying on their civilian pursuits.
- The average age of Army Reservists is 35 for officers and 25 for enlisted men.
- In the 1966 National Rifle and Pistol Matches at Camp Perry, Ohio, Army Reserve marksmen set two new pistol team records, won nine major trophies in the rifle matches and set a new national Reserve record in the Infantry Team Match.
- More than 60 per cent of the doctors and 70 per cent of the dentists on active military duty are members of the Army Reserve.

National Rabbit Week Observed

The 25 members of the Southeast Missouri Rabbit Breeders Association are joining in with more than 200,000 members over the nation, in observance of National Rabbit Week, July 16-22.

The association is headed by David C. Hughes, route two, president.

Rabbits were domesticated in Africa and Asia more than 3,000 years ago. Three million pounds of rabbit meat was produced in San Diego alone.

Besides being used as food the fur is used in the manufacturer of millions of men's hats and women's fur pieces.

The district association last year won national honors for promotion.

After working his way through college and graduate school a young scholar obtained a teaching position in a small New England college. To help him repay government educational loans, his wife, an accomplished cook, worked in a bakery as a pastry chief from 4 a.m. until noon each day.

At the midyear faculty party, some of the professors' wives were discussing their extracurricular activities. One confessed that she wrote poetry, another was active in community organizations, still another was taking a Red Cross first-aid course. "And what do you do, my dear?" the wife of the college president asked the young professor's wife.

Hesitating for only a moment, she replied, "I spend a great deal of time making flour arrangements."

MOST TAX FROM SALES

CHICAGO (AP) – Sales taxes proved the best revenue raiser for 31 states, says Commerce Clearing House.

They accounted for 26.8 per cent of the total fiscal 1966 50-state tax take of $29.4 billion.

Of seven states producing $13.8 billion of the total collected, five – California, Pennsylvania, Michigan, Illinois and Ohio – drew the most income from their sales taxes. New York found income taxes a better producer. Texas received most of its revenue from motor fuel taxes.

Only one state – Colorado – showed a switch in its best revenue source from 1965, moving from the income tax to the sales tax.

Pvt. Anthony Howard

(PK0886) CAMP PENDLETON, Calif. (FHTNC) -- Marine Pvt. Anthony R. Howard, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wallace R. Howard of Route 1, Sikeston, Mo., has completed four weeks of individual combat training at this Marine Corps Base.

During his more than 200 hours of training, he learned about weapons and combat techniques, from combat veteran instructors. They taught him how to conduct combat patrols, detect and remove mines and booby traps and use the standard Marine Corps infantry weapons.

He will now receive at least four weeks of specialist training before being assigned to his first permanent unit. Marines going to combat units will get detailed training in the particular combat skill they are designated for. Those who are going into technical fields will receive their advanced training at one of a variety of technical schools throughout the country.

PRESERVED PRESERVES

LOUISVILLE (AP) – More than 20 years ago a jar of jam, made by the Goodwin Preserving Co., was sent to Europe as part of a food package to help the civilian population after World War II.

Goodwin Preserving later was absorbed in a merger but Norbert Miller, who had worked for the company, recently received this note from a resident of Hrdcany, Czechoslovakia.

"Dear Sirs:

"After the second great war there was a help of aid for Czechoslovakia, too. It was in the year 1946-47. You are sure not to believe it but really I have the pleasure to let you know some news about the quality of your products.

"After 20 years I opened one forgotten tin of jam and tasted it. As far as the quality was concerned, all was all right and even the specially galvanized inner sheet showed any defect."

The letter was signed by Ota Cermak.

DIEHLSTADT NEWS

Health is very good.

Death has once more visited our town and taken away one of our best women, the wife of C.C. Poe. Mrs. Poe was a good, kind and affectionate wife, mother and neighbor. She was loved by all who knew her, never having anything to say about anyone only in the highest terms and that in a christian-like manner. She leaves a husband and three children and a host of friends to mourn her death. Her remains were taken to the Benyard cemetry to await the final resurrection at God's call. The husband and family has the sympathy of the community.

Mrs. Loudermilk is in very critical condition and her recovery is said to be doubtful, but it is to be hoped that she may soon be up again.

D. L. Hindman and Mrs. Emma Smiley, both of this place, were united in marriage last Tuesday at Charleston, by Esq. Stratton.

Uncle Ike Akers is still very puny.

Weather Reports Aid Traveler

by Leonard F. Hand
Meteorologist
Delta Center

PORTAGEVILLE -- Once the forecast has been read, the next question is "Where is it raining now, and when will wet weather reach our location?" Radar reports give good coverage of rain or shower patterns, but many people find it easier to orient themselves by cities rather than by the area described in the radar summary.

Reports from a number of cities in Missouri and surrounding states are transmitted frequently during the day over the ESSA weather wire. Present weather and temperature, given with each report, pinpoint spots where fair or foul weather exists at that time. By listening attentively, you can follow the progress of showers or even cold fronts by the shift from city to city of rain or temperature drops.

Travelers, particularly during the winter, find these reports an excellent means for anticipating snow or icy conditions as they proceed on their route. Motorists alerted to rainy conditions ahead are ready to reduce speed to avoid hazards of slippery, rain - slicked road surfaces.

Winter travellers can use these reports to plan an alternate route or to decide to turn back when snow, sleet or freezing rain are in progress across their intended path or at their destination. If turning back is not practical, preparations such as installing tire chains can be made before the hazard is encountered.

Service stations could greatly increase their aid to motorists by maintaining a route weather check for transient customers stopping for fuel. The reports are there for your use.

Bridge Dispute Not Settled By Hearing

CHAFFEE - A hearing on the slowpace of the highway 77 bridge construction Saturday afternoon apparently settled nothing.

Jack Stapleton of Stanberry, chairman of the state highway commission, and Albert C. Riley of New Madrid, commission member, conducted the hearing at the request of Gov. Warren E. Hearnes.

Mayor Robert H. Capshaw said Stapleton told him after the hearing that he believed the work would be completed this fall.

Traffic on highway 77 has been halted by construction of a bridge over Cotton Belt railroad tracks north of Chaffee for more than a year.

Traffic has been detourned over route M by way of Scott City.

Mayor Capshaw charged that Chaffee merchants had been damaged by the shutdown of the highway. He also charged that the delay in construction "has inconvenienced thousands of people. It has caused numerous wrecks between here and Scott City. In one afternoon three cars overturned in single car accidents.

He said Chaffee residents believe the highway department failed badly and the city had been done an injustice and was hurt without cause.

Citing the use of gumbo soil to build the approaches, the mayor said it is Chaffee's contention that another type of soil was readily available, and if it had been used the highway would have been opened this summer.

W. D. Carney of Sikeston, district 10 highway engineer, defended the work of the R. P. Stephens Construction Co. of Jefferson City, contractor for the project.

A bypass around the construction would cost between $75,000 and $80,000 under highway department estimates and subsequent indications based on the Stephens contract indicate it would have risen to about $100,000, Carney said.

He noted that the contractor had been charged by the highway department's resident engineer with eight working days this summer and with 44 last year until construction halted in November, a total of 52 working days in the past year. The contract calls for completion in 130 working days.

Weather and drying time for the fill have been the principal causes for the delay, it was pointed out.

UNANIMOUS VERDICT: "Great Experience for any boy!"

President Eisenhower, Henry Ford, Thomas Edison, Herbert Hoover, Ford Frick, Benjamin Fairless, Walt Disney, George C. Marshall, Bob Hope and Joe DiMaggio are among the many successful men who were at one time newspaperboys.

The boy who delivers your newspaper — just like these world-famous men — is getting an early business training.

He buys at wholesale, sells at retail and operates his own business. He increases his profits as he builds his route through good service and salesmanship. He even carries his own Accident Insurance.

A newspaper route is a great experience for any boy! No other part-time job will do more to teach him promptness and develop poise and self-confidence.

Your newspaperboy will be ready for the big job opportunities of tomorrow. He is learning the essentials of business success today.

SURE-FIRE LIGHTER, reliable as a kitchen match, was modeled by this pretty mam'selle at a recent gadgets show in Paris. And well it should be, since the invention incorporates the style and mechanical ease of a cigarette lighter with the reliability of ordinary matches, which pop up one at a time for quick use.

Colleges Expand Cooperative Ties

FULTON -- After six years of a successful experiment in sharing faculty, facilities and cultural programs, William Woods College for women and Westminster College for men, two private colleges announced the employment of a full - time administrator and continued expansion of their mutual cooperative program aided by a $97,000 grant from the U.S. department of education.

The new administrator, with the rank of vice - president in both institutions, will be Dr. John V. Bosch, professor of business administration at Westminster, and former executive director of the Mid-Missouri Association of Colleges.

Stoddard NSC's To Have Meetings

BELL CITY - The University of Missouri Extension Service will sponsor a series of meetings to be conducted at the Stoddard County Neighborhood Service Center. The first of these meetings was held Tuesday at the Bell City center.

Fredericka Plummer, area home economist, spoke on money management in the home. Aides and co-ordinators who attended will use the information in their work with families in the community.

The next meeting in the series will be Aug. 16.

Bridge Dispute Not Settled By Hearing

CHAFFEE - A hearing on the slowpace of the highway 77 bridge construction Saturday afternoon apparently settled nothing.

Jack Stapleton of Stanberry, chairman of the state highway commission, and Albert C. Riley of New Madrid, commission member, conducted the hearing at the request of Gov. Warren E. Hearnes.

Mayor Robert H. Capshaw said Stapleton told him after the hearing that he believed the work would be completed this fall.

Traffic on highway 77 has been halted by construction of a bridge over Cotton Belt railroad tracks north of Chaffee for more than a year.

Traffic has been detourned over route M by way of Scott City.

Mayor Capshaw charged that Chaffee merchants had been damaged by the shutdown of the highway. He also charged that the delay in construction "has inconvenienced thousands of people. It has caused numerous wrecks between here and Scott City. In one afternoon three cars overturned in single car accidents.

He said Chaffee residents believe the highway department failed badly and the city had been done an injustice and was hurt without cause.

Citing the use of gumbo soil to build the approaches, the mayor said it is Chaffee's contention that another type of soil was readily available, and if it had been used the highway would have been opened this summer.

W. D. Carney of Sikeston, district 10 highway engineer, defended the work of the R. P. Stephens Construction Co. of Jefferson City, contractor for the project.

A bypass around the construction would cost between $75,000 and $80,000 under highway department estimates and subsequent indications based on the Stephens contract indicate it would have risen to about $100,000, Carney said.

He noted that the contractor had been charged by the highway department's resident engineer with eight working days this summer and with 44 last year until construction halted in November, a total of 52 working days in the past year. The contract calls for completion in 130 working days.

Weather and drying time for the fill have been the principal causes for the delay, it was pointed out.

School Children

A larger proportion of children go to school in Utah than in most U.S. states. Recent figures show that at least 58 per cent of the population over age 25 has completed high school. The national average for the same age is 20 per cent.

Jones Opposes House Passage Of Three Bills

WASHINGTON (AP) — How Missouri members of Congress were recorded as voting on recent roll calls:

Senate

On rejection, 17 to 74, of amendment to Agriculture Department money bill that would cut $1.5 billion from the spending authority of the Commodity Credit Corp. Against — Symington, Democrat; Not voting— Long, Democrat.

On rejection, 14 to 76, of amendment to limit farm benefit payments and subsidies to a maximum of $10,000 per year to any one producer. Against the amendment — Symington. Not voting — Long.

On passage, 46 to 35, of a bill creating a Great Salt Lake National Monument on Antelope Island. For — Long and Symington.

On rejection, 38 to 45, of amendment to require approval of the Utah legislature for acquisition of state property for the national monument. Against the amendment — Long and Symington.

House

On passage, 283 to 89, of bill extending the life of the Civil Rights Commission. Against; Kennett Democrat.

On passage, 369 to 18, of a bill to create a national water study commission. Against; Jones.

On passage, 271 to 111, of a bill to bar federally chartered or insured banks from selling lottery tickets. Against; Jones.

Whenever the Master could, he stole away
From the great throngs, to seek some quiet place
Where God could come to meet him face to face.
Strange strength is ever born of solitude;
The heart today grows weary of its care,
And overburdened . . ."God, it would be good
To seek a mountainside and find Thee there!"

J. W. Branhall

Continuing a tradition that began with Benjamin Franklin and Thomas Jefferson, thousands of volunteer weathermen daily report temperature and precipitation readings to the U.S. Weather Bureau, says The World Almanac. The volunteers, mostly amateur meteorologists throughout the country, help the bureau maintain accurate information on the climate of the nation.

UNANIMOUS VERDICT: "Great Experience for any boy!"

President Eisenhower, Henry Ford, Thomas Edison, Herbert Hoover, Ford Frick, Benjamin Fairless, Walt Disney, George C. Marshall, Bob Hope and Joe DiMaggio are among the many successful men who were at one time newspaperboys.

The boy who delivers your newspaper — just like these world-famous men — is getting an early business training.

He buys at wholesale, sells at retail and operates his own business. He increases his profits as he builds his route through good service and salesmanship. He even carries his own Accident Insurance.

A newspaper route is a great experience for any boy! No other part-time job will do more to teach him promptness and develop poise and self-confidence.

Your newspaperboy will be ready for the big job opportunities of tomorrow. He is learning the essentials of business success today.

Busy Boys Are Better Boys

If you think your son or some other youngster might profit by similar Newspaperboy experience, why not suggest that he come in and talk to us.

THE DAILY STANDARD

Note to Subscribers: Please have your money ready when your Newspaperboy makes his collections. It will save him time and will also help him maintain his profits.

Letters to the Editor

Mr. C. L. Blanton Jr.
Daily Sikeston Standard
Sikeston, Missouri

Dear Mr. Charlie:

One of the high points of every day for me is reading the Daily Sikeston Standard from the front page through the comics. Since I have a son who is fairly active in sports, I eagerly scan the sport page like any other proud father to see his name in the paper after he has participated in a ball game.

Lately there has been an absence of most of the Babe Ruth League games and I am probably more responsible than any one else, since as the scorekeeper, I have not been taking the score books to the police station after each night for the Standard to pick up. For our Babe Ruth Baseball team to compete in any district or State tournaments, many records have to be kept, including official scorebooks of every game. One week before the district tournament was to be held here, one scorebook, which covered about one half of all league games played, was misplaced. All possible places were searched and people were asked but to no avail. Finally it was found in a drawer at the police station. If this book had not been found, our team would have been unable to meet the State Babe Ruth League requirements and would have had to forfit the chance to play for the district championship.

I do not know or care who is to blame, but since that time I have not been leaving the scorebooks for Mr. Jaynes to copy the box scores and insert in the paper.

Mr. Jaynes wrote in his column on Saturday - "We can't spend all morning hunting down scorebooks" - and that brings me to my gripe. If the activities of approximately 90 young men who make up the six Babe Ruth teams is news, why does it have to be delivered to be reported. Other local news media usually have a representative come to part of the games and either get their own information or use the official scorebook at the ballpark. At the District tournament on July 12 and July 13, a Cape Girardeau paper had their sports editor here to cover the game but Mr. Jaynes didn't even have time to hunt for the scorebook.

Mr. Charlie, you and the Standard have always fought for, and supported all of the youth activities, and donated both money and newspaper space to help promote anything for the young people in the community. It will be long-remembered by all persons connected with these activities, and by the youth themselves when they are old enough to comprehend all of the advantages they have been given.

As a father, I want to thank you again for your interest and support in helping our children, and I personally want to thank you for favors done me in the past.

Sincerely yours,
Joe W. Dye
Sikeston, Mo.

Charles Blanton III
Daily Sikeston Standard
Sikeston, Mo.

Dear Charles:

I'd like to pass a word for those persons that may be coming to the Expo.

The Expo Lodge upon request had local guest house to contact us for lodging. Upon arrival here, and a deposit before hand, we were disappointed to no ends. Luckey we had a accomodating cab driver that knew of this place list in the above Heading. (Air-View Apartments - 1705 Comartin Street, Saint-Hubert, Montreal - Quebec, Canada.

The apartments are new and the manager is most accomodating. I recommend it with a thought of others that may attend the Expo. I was "con" on the first deal.

P.S. They have so many empty rooms. We are the first tourist.

Reserve Official Seminar Speaker

Joseph C. Wotawa, vice president of the Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis, will speak at a check clearing seminar in the Community meeting room of Security National Bank, Thursday, at 6:30 p.m.

The seminar is being sponsored by the bank in order to acquaint retailers with the change in check clearing procedures to be initiated by Federal Reserve Banks Sept. 1.

On this date, the Federal Reserve Banks will cease the clearing of checks as cash items which do not bear magnetic ink encoding of bank routing symbol.

Wotawa has been associated with the Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis 29 years and heads the Bank's automation department. He is a lecturer at the University of Wisconsin, central states banking school, in Madison.

Immunization Shots Free at Bell City

BELL CITY -- Immunization shots will be given free as a service of the Community Action Agency Thursday at 9 a.m. at the service center located in the Truman School building. Paul H. Barks, co-ordinator, said shots will be given to pre-school children -- ages six weeks to five years - of low - income families. Dr. James W. Campbell, M. D., advance, will give the shots.

Parents must accompany their children or send written permission. Transportation will be arranged if needed. Children registered in the summer Head Start program will not be included at this time.

Ann Landers

No Ceiling on Her Curiosity

Dear Ann Landers: Am I a dummy or what? A very close friend of mine joined the WACs last year, and she seemed to love it. When she returned for Christmas leave she gave us all a snow job about what a great life she was leading.

Well, last week she came home five months pregnant with no wedding ring. She told everyone that she had become involved with an officer and didn't realize until it was too late that he was married and could not get his freedom. She insists she received an honorable discharge from the WACs.

I say her statement is an insult to the intelligence of a thinking person. That girl must have been discharged dishonorably under the circumstances. Wasn't she? Please answer in print. I want others to see this, too. --- DUMMY?

Dear Dummy: What difference does it make to you if the girl was discharged honorably or not? It so happens that your friend didn't receive a dishonorable discharge from the Army. It was simply an official document separating her from the service.

Dear Ann Landers: I plan to be married in the Fall. The problem is my parents. They want to remodel the back of our home and make an apartment for us.

They have hinted about this for several months and my fiance and I have talked it over and neither of us wants it. We had never said no, straight out -- until last night. It caused a lot of hard feelings and I am sick about it.

My mother called me a selfish brat. She wants to know why we would rather pay out rent money to a stranger than give it to Dad who could use it.

I love my parents very much and have always gotten along weel with them. They have made many sacrifices for me and now I feel like an ungrateful wretch. But, Ann, I really think we would be better off completely on our own. Please tell me if I am right or wrong. I need your thinking. --- NEWSDAY READER

Dear Reader: I believe you and your fiance are entitled to make this decision without being pressured and, in my opinion, you made the right one. The fact that your mother tried to make you feel that you are a selfish brat is pretty good evidence. I hope you will stick to your position and not collapse under the burden of unearned guilt.

Dear Ann Landers: A friend of mine told me about a vinegar diet which sounds wonderful. She lost 10 pounds in two weeks and all she did was drink vinegar in warm water. I think it was equal parts of each. I want to try it but I am a little leery. I know you check with doctors, and I would appreciate your advice in this matter. I like the sound of this diet because vinegar is harmless. Thank you. --- CHUBBY

Dear Chub: Vinegar can kill you if you drink enough of it. Forget about that kooky diet. Excessive acidity can wreck your intestinal system and given you stomach trouble for the rest of your life. If you want to lose weight eat food that has a low calorie count.

What awaits you on the other side of the marriage veil? How can you be sure your marriage will work? Read Ann Landers' booklet "Marriage -- What To Expect." Send your request to Ann Landers in care of this newspaper enclosing 50¢ in coin and a long, stamped, self - addressed envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

If You Were the Judge

Dentist Can't Be Sued for Trying to Save Tooth

By Jack Strauss, LL.B.

Holding both cheeks in his hands, Pincus arrived at the office of dentist Jones and insisted that he pull out two teeth that were "murdering" him. Instead, the dentist yanked only one tooth and began drilling in the other in an effort to rescue it.

As it developed, Pincus could stand anything but pain. Consequently, when he thought smoke was beginning to come out of his mouth from all the drilling, he went to see another dentist, was told that the maverick tooth could be saved only in a cigar box and had it pulled.

Immediately thereafter, Pincus sued dentist Jones for malpractice.

"He was careless in making me suffer unnecessarily when he should have known that second tooth was a goner," he complained to the judge. "He had me in that chair session after session and while it didn't hurt him, it hurt me plenty."

"I was only trying to do a job," was Jones' answer. "If its remotely possible, I believe in trying to save the tooth, the whole tooth and nothing but the tooth. Surely, I can't be sued for trying."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you permit Pincus to collect for his unfulfilled sessions in the dental chair?

This is how the judge ruled: He sided with the dentist. In doing so, he held that a dentist, exercising care, is not negligent for trying to save a tooth which, in his sound discretion, he feels might be saved.

(Based upon a 1958 California District Court of Appeals Decision)

The Prayer
From The Upper Room

Fight the good fight of faith, lay hold on eternal life. (I Timothy 6;12)

PRAYER: God of grace and God of glory, we read in Thy Word, "The wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." Grant us faith, wisdom, and courage to accept Thy marvelous gift, for the sake of our Savior, Jesus Christ, in whose name we pray. Amen.

CITIZEN'S REQUEST

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) — Gov. Edward T. Breathitt recently inaugurated a Citizen Day during which Kentuckians are invited to drop by his office and talk on any topic.

Among the crowd that showed up was his 8-year-old son, Ned.

"And what can I do for you?" the governor asked.

"Well," his son replied, "you could give me two dimes to use in the candy and soft-drink machines downstairs."

Training for 36 Will Be Provided

KANSAS CITY -- Training as clerk - stenographers will be provided 36 unemployed and under - employment Southeast Missourians in projects under the Manpower Development and Training Act.

Approval of the training was announced today by Secretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz and Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare John W. Gardner.

The 26 weeks of training will be offered in education facilities in the counties of Butler, Carter, Ripley, Dunklin and Pemiscot. The department of labor will allocate $54,856 to the projects, including a sum for allowances for the trainees, to enable them to complete the course.

Referrals to the training will be made by the Missouri division of employment security.

Views Conflict At Newspaper Merger Hearing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jack R. Howard, president of Scripps-Howard Newspapers, said today an antitrust exemption for merger or joint operation of financially failing papers "is vital to the health of the newspaper business."

A publisher from Chattanooga, Tenn., and a professor from Southern Illinois University challenged that view.

They spoke in testimony prepared for the Senate antitrust and monopoly subcommittee.

It is considering legislation to permit the merger or joint commercial operation of newspapers when one of the publications is classified as failing.

Roy McDonald, president and publisher of the Chattanooga News-Free Press, said no matter what name is applied to a joint newspaper operating arrangement, "it is still a monopoly and at this time, no competing media can replace it."

Bryce W. Rucker, a professor of journalism, said, "I fervently hope you will not arm powerful, wealthy men with this weapon with which they may drive the remaining independent publishers to the wall and take over their newspapers. Those giant publishers do not need your help. The small ones do."

Graduate Follow-up Survey Planned

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — Missouri's public high schools graduated 52,298 seniors in 1965 and the State Department of Education will launch a study to find out where they are now, what they are doing and other information.

Commissioner Hubert Wheeler explained last week that the Missouri department of education statewide follow-up study is the first statewide to be conducted in Missouri's public schools.

The work is expected to take about six months.

JULY 4 RUNAWAYS

LOUISVILLE (AP) — Charles and Fred Bauer Jr., who work for the same company, are beginning to feel their homes have a magnetic attraction for runaway cars.

Once, a car came rolling down the street and crashed into Charles' porch.

It happened twice to Fred. Both cars were stolen and both incidents occurred on a July 4.

Letters to the Editor

Mr. C. L. Blanton Jr.
Daily Sikeston Standard
Sikeston, Missouri

Dear Mr. Charlie:

One of the high points of every day for me is reading the Daily Sikeston Standard from the front page through the comics. Since I have a son who is fairly active in sports, I eagerly scan the sport page like any other proud father to see his name in the paper after he has participated in a ball game.

Lately there has been an absence of most of the Babe Ruth League games and I am probably more responsible than any one else, since as the scorekeeper, I have not been taking the score books to the police station after each night for the Standard to pick up. For our Babe Ruth Baseball team to compete in any district or State tournaments, many records have to be kept, including official scorebooks of every game. One week before the district tournament was to be held here, one scorebook, which covered about one half of all league games played, was misplaced. All possible places were searched and people were asked but to no avail. Finally it was found in a drawer at the police station. If this book had not been found, our team would have been unable to meet the State Babe Ruth League requirements and would have had to forfit the chance to play for the district championship.

I do not know or care who is to blame, but since that time I have not been leaving the scorebooks for Mr. Jaynes to copy the box scores and insert in the paper.

Mr. Jaynes wrote in his column on Saturday - "We can't spend all morning hunting down scorebooks" - and that brings me to my gripe. If the activities of approximately 90 young men who make up the six Babe Ruth teams is news, why does it have to be delivered to be reported. Other local news media usually have a representative come to part of the games and either get their own information or use the official scorebook at the ballpark. At the District tournament on July 12 and July 13, a Cape Girardeau paper had their sports editor here to cover the game but Mr. Jaynes didn't even have time to hunt for the scorebook.

Mr. Charlie, you and the Standard have always fought for, and supported all of the youth activities, and donated both money and newspaper space to help promote anything for the young people in the community. It will be long-remembered by all persons connected with these activities, and by the youth themselves when they are old enough to comprehend all of the advantages they have been given.

As a father, I want to thank you again for your interest and support in helping our children, and I personally want to thank you for favors done me in the past.

Sincerely yours,
Joe W. Dye

Dear Charles:

I'd like to pass a word for those persons that may be coming to the Expo.

The Expo Lodge upon request had local guest house to contact us for lodging. Upon arrival here, and a deposit before hand, we were disappointed to no ends. Luckey we had a accomodating cab driver that knew of this place list in the above Heading. (Air-View Apartments - 1705 Comartin Street, Saint-Hubert, Montreal - Quebec, Canada.

The apartments are new and the manager is most accomodating. I recommend it with a thought of others that may attend the Expo. I was "con" on the first deal.

Ann Landers

No Ceiling on Her Curiosity

Dear Ann Landers: Am I a dummy or what? A very close friend of mine joined the WACs last year, and she seemed to love it. When she returned for Christmas leave she gave us all a snow job about what a great life she was leading.

Well, last week she came home five months pregnant with no wedding ring. She told everyone that she had become involved with an officer and didn't realize until it was too late that he was married and could not get his freedom. She insists she received an honorable discharge from the WACs.

I say her statement is an insult to the intelligence of a thinking person. That girl must have been discharged dishonorably under the circumstances. Wasn't she? Please answer in print. I want others to see this, too. --- DUMMY?

Dear Dummy: What difference does it make to you if the girl was discharged honorably or not? It so happens that your friend didn't receive a dishonorable discharge from the Army. It was simply an official document separating her from the service.

Dear Ann Landers: I plan to be married in the Fall. The problem is my parents. They want to remodel the back of our home and make an apartment for us.

They have hinted about this for several months and my fiance and I have talked it over and neither of us wants it. We had never said no, straight out -- until last night. It caused a lot of hard feelings and I am sick about it.

My mother called me a selfish brat. She wants to know why we would rather pay out rent money to a stranger than give it to Dad who could use it. I love my parents very much and have always gotten along weel with them. They have made many sacrifices for me and now I feel like an ungrateful wretch. But, Ann, I really think we would be better off completely on our own. Please tell me if I am right or wrong. I need your thinking. --- NEWSDAY READER

Dear Reader: I believe you and your fiance are entitled to make this decision without being pressured and, in my opinion, you made the right one. The fact that your mother tried to make you feel that you are a selfish brat is pretty good evidence. I hope you will stick to your position and not collapse under the burden of unearned guilt.

Dear Ann Landers: A friend of mine told me about a vinegar diet which sounds wonderful. She lost 10 pounds in two weeks and all she did was drink vinegar in warm water. I think it was equal parts of each. I want to try it but I am a little leery. I know you check with doctors, and I would appreciate your advice in this matter. I like the sound of this diet because vinegar is harmless. Thank you. --- CHUBBY

Dear Chub: Vinegar can kill you if you drink enough of it. Forget about that kooky diet. Excessive acidity can wreck your intestinal system and given you stomach trouble for the rest of your life. If you want to lose weight eat food that has a low calorie count.

What awaits you on the other side of the marriage veil? How can you be sure your marriage will work? Read Ann Landers' booklet "Marriage -- What To Expect." Send your request to Ann Landers in care of this newspaper enclosing 50¢ in coin and a long, stamped, self - addressed envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Views Conflict At Newspaper Merger Hearing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jack R. Howard, president of Scripps-Howard Newspapers, said today an antitrust exemption for merger or joint operation of financially failing papers "is vital to the health of the newspaper business."

A publisher from Chattanooga, Tenn., and a professor from Southern Illinois University challenged that view.

They spoke in testimony prepared for the Senate antitrust and monopoly subcommittee.

It is considering legislation to permit the merger or joint commercial operation of newspapers when one of the publications is classified as failing.

Roy McDonald, president and publisher of the Chattanooga News-Free Press, said no matter what name is applied to a joint newspaper operating arrangement, "it is still a monopoly and at this time, no competing media can replace it."

Bryce W. Rucker, a professor of journalism, said, "I fervently hope you will not arm powerful, wealthy men with this weapon with which they may drive the remaining independent publishers to the wall and take over their newspapers. Those giant publishers do not need your help. The small ones do."

Graduate Follow-up Survey Planned

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — Missouri's public high schools graduated 52,298 seniors in 1965 and the State Department of Education will launch a study to find out where they are now, what they are doing and other information.

Commissioner Hubert Wheeler explained last week that the Missouri department of education statewide follow-up study is the first statewide to be conducted in Missouri's public schools.

The work is expected to take about six months.

JULY 4 RUNAWAYS

LOUISVILLE (AP) — Charles and Fred Bauer Jr., who work for the same company, are beginning to feel their homes have a magnetic attraction for runaway cars.

Once, a car came rolling down the street and crashed into Charles' porch.

It happened twice to Fred. Both cars were stolen and both incidents occurred on a July 4.

If You Were the Judge

Dentist Can't Be Sued for Trying to Save Tooth

By Jack Strauss, LL.B.

Holding both cheeks in his hands, Pincus arrived at the office of dentist Jones and insisted that he pull out two teeth that were "murdering" him. Instead, the dentist yanked only one tooth and began drilling in the other in an effort to rescue it.

As it developed, Pincus could stand anything but pain. Consequently, when he thought smoke was beginning to come out of his mouth from all the drilling, he went to see another dentist, was told that the maverick tooth could be saved only in a cigar box and had it pulled.

Immediately thereafter, Pincus sued dentist Jones for malpractice.

"He was careless in making me suffer unnecessarily when he should have known that second tooth was a goner," he complained to the judge. "He had me in that chair session after session and while it didn't hurt him, it hurt me plenty."

"I was only trying to do a job," was Jones' answer. "If its remotely possible, I believe in trying to save the tooth, the whole tooth and nothing but the tooth. Surely, I can't be sued for trying."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you permit Pincus to collect for his unfulfilled sessions in the dental chair?

This is how the judge ruled: He sided with the dentist. In doing so, he held that a dentist, exercising care, is not negligent for trying to save a tooth which, in his sound discretion, he feels might be saved.

The Prayer
From The Upper Room

Fight the good fight of faith, lay hold on eternal life. (I Timothy 6:12)

PRAYER: God of grace and God of glory, we read in Thy Word, "The wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." Grant us faith, wisdom, and courage to accept Thy marvelous gift, for the sake of our Savior, Jesus Christ, in whose name we pray. Amen.

CITIZEN'S REQUEST

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) — Gov. Edward T. Breathitt recently inaugurated a Citizen Day during which Kentuckians are invited to drop by his office and talk on any topic.

Among the crowd that showed up was his 8-year-old son, Ned.

"And what can I do for you?" the governor asked.

"Well," his son replied, "you could give me two dimes to use in the candy and soft-drink machines downstairs."

Training for 36 Will Be Provided

Giving to the U.S.O. is not an act of absolution.
It will not even up your debt to the young Americans around the world who serve us in the cause of freedom. Give not because of what your gift will do for you, but what it will mean to them.
Give because every U.S.O. club is a friendly arm around a lonely shoulder, far from home.
Give because every visit of a traveling U.S.O. show is a word from home that says "We care!"
Give because 3½ million Americans need the friendship and services that only U.S.O. provides.
Give to U.S.O. through your United Fund or Community Chest. U.S.O. gets no government funds, depends entirely on private contributions.

Today is Tuesday, July 18, the 199th day of 1967. There are 166 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1940, President Franklin D. Roosevelt was nominated unanimously for a third term by delegates to the Democratic Convention in Chicago.

On this date:

In 1914, the U.S. Army created an aviation section within the Signal Corps.

In 1932, the United States and Canada signed a treaty for the development of the St. Lawrence River into an ocean lane and power project. Opposition delayed actual construction until 1954.

In 1947, President Harry S. Truman signed the Presidential Succession Act.

In 1951, Jersey Joe Walcott knocked out Ezzard Charles in Pittsburgh to win the world heavyweight boxing championship.

In 1963, President John F. Kennedy asked Congress to impose a tax on investments abroad to ease dollar drain.

In 1964, thousands of Negroes rioted in Harlem following the shooting of a Negro youth by a white policeman.

Ten years ago — French Premier Maurice Bourgess-Maunoury received a 280-138 vote of confidence from the French National Assembly on his call for special police powers to combat Algerian rebel terrorism in France.

Five years ago — Military leaders overthrew the government of Peru.

One year ago — Renewed violence wracked the Negro area of Hough on Cleveland's East Side.

Long May Face Another Ethics Panel Session

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Edward V. Long faced the Senate ethics committee on charges he misused a wiretapping probe in a bid to help Teamsters Union President James R. Hoffa.

After a three-hour closed session Monday, Chairman John Stennis, D-Miss., said the ethics panel hasn't formed any conclusions. He indicated another interview was in the offing, but mentioned no date.

Long, a Missouri Democrat, said he volunteered to appear before the bipartisan committee and planned to answer the charges against him— leveled by Life magazine in its May 26 issue— "at the first opportunity."

Life said Long used his subcommittee's investigation in an attempt to keep Hoffa out of jail and later to try to reverse the union leader's conviction. Hoffa, convicted of jury tampering, based his appeal on grounds that evidence against him was obtained through illegal wiretapping.

The magazine said Long received $48,000 from St. Louis lawyer Morris A. Shenker, who represented Hoffa.

Long has acknoweledge receiving the money, but said it resulted from his referral to Shenker of law cases on which the senator— also a lawyer— had worked. He said the cases had nothing to do with Hoffa.

Ferd Stoll. Dexter. Dies

DEXTER -- Services were held Monday at the Dexter Methodist Church for Ferd J. Stoll, owner and operator of the Stoll Hardware and Lumber Co. in Bloomfield.

Conducting the services were the pastor, the Rev. Robert McCoy, and the Rev. Marshall Dark.

Burial was in Dexter cemetery with Rainey Funeral Home in charge.

Stoll, 63, died from a hear attack at 9:15 a.m. Friday in a St. Louis hospital.

He and a group of friends from Bloomfield had gone to St. Louis Thursday to attend a ball game. As he was crossing the street to Busch Stadium, Stoll was stricken. He was rushed to the hospital where he died the following morning.

He was a member of the Dexter Methodist church and of the Bloomfield Chamber of Commerce. He also held membership in the Masonic Lodge at Higginsville.

Stoll was born Feb. 4, 1904, at Lexington. Prior to opening the hardware and lumber company 10 years ago, he was a foreman for International Shoe Company.

Survivors are his wife, Mrs. Marion Peggy Stoll; a daughter, Miss Jane Lynn Stoll, at home, and two brothers, Henry Stoll, Higginsville, and Elmer Stoll, Corder.

League Calls for End to Tax on HouseholdGoods

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A resolution urging that the personal property tax on household goods be eliminated is to be presented at the annual meeting of the Missouri Municipal League in Kansas City on September 22.

The league is made up of municipal officials throughout the state.

The league's executive board adopted the resolution at a meeting in St. Louis Monday. The resolution pointed out that "the ease with which the tax is evaded has created a notorious disrespect for it."

The league called for state laws which would provide reasonable assessment procedures for real property. The resolution said there hadn't been a comprehensive reevaluation of real property in some counties for as long as 25 years.

There've been some changes made

There was a time when our telephone operators wore "floor duster" dresses and sat on high wooden stools. Not so today.

New equipment and new work techniques have revolutionized the familiar world of "Number, please." And the operating room of the future incorporates the most dramatic and far-reaching changes ever. In these new rooms, there are no plugs, cords or jacks. Instead of being lined up along a multi-position switchboard, operators sit at desk-like consoles widely spaced through the room. Everything is bright and modern.

Already operational in a few Southwestern Bell cities, these newest operating rooms represent more than a change in looks. The new consoles make many new services possible. Customers can dial person-to-person, credit card and collect Long Distance calls. Service is faster and more efficient.

More and more of these new consoles will be installed as time goes by. But despite the changes in equipment and techniques, one thing will remain the same. Our operators will still be dedicated to giving the best possible service to our customers. The "voice with a smile" is as important and meaningful as ever.

Some things just don't need changing.

There've been some changes made

There was a time when our telephone operators wore "floor duster" dresses and sat on high wooden stools. Not so today.

New equipment and new work techniques have revolutionized the familiar world of "Number, please." And the operating room of the future incorporates the most dramatic and far-reaching changes ever. In these new rooms, there are no plugs, cords or jacks. Instead of being lined up along a multi-position switchboard, operators sit at desk-like consoles widely spaced through the room. Everything is bright and modern.

Already operational in a few Southwestern Bell cities, these newest operating rooms represent more than a change in looks. The new consoles make many new services possible. Customers can dial person-to-person, credit card and collect Long Distance calls. Service is faster and more efficient.

More and more of these new consoles will be installed as time goes by. But despite the changes in equipment and techniques, one thing will remain the same. Our operators will still be dedicated to giving the best possible service to our customers. The "voice with a smile" is as important and meaningful as ever.

Some things just don't need changing.

MIDDLETOWN, Ohio (AP) — Floors of our future homes will have a tremendous — but healthy — appetite for dirt.

So say students of Philadelphia College of Art, participating in a study sponsored by Armco Steel Corporation.

Ingestive, self-cleaning floors will obsolete today's manual devices. Tiny cells activated by easy pressure, such as mere walking, will suck in the dirt and transfer it to ducts under the floor, where forced air will carry it off.

That's not all. Another idea has "nebulizers" fitted in the ceilings to control humidity by emitting vaporized water. The nebulizer will also put out fires, spray chemicals for cleaning and put medication into sickrooms.

Floor and ceiling, it will be a busy place, this house of tomorrow.

ARMED FORCES

PANAMA CITY, Fla. -- Second Lieutenant Norman E. Shepard, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Shepard of R.R. 3, Sikeston, Mo., has been graduated at Tyndall AFB, Fla., from the training course for U.S. Air Force weapons controllers.

Lieutenant Shepard, trained to direct operation and maintenance of ground search and height finding radars, is being assigned to Tyndall. He is a member of the Air Defense Command which protects the U.S. against enemy air attack.

He was commissioned upon completion of Officer Training School at Lackland AFB, Tex., in 1967.

A 1961 graduate of Sikeston Senior High School, he attended the University of Missouri at Rolla. He received his B. A. degree in 1965 from Union University, Jackson, Tenn. He also studied at Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, Louisville, Ky. He is a member of Alpha Tau Omega.

His wife, Johnnie, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Tribble of 1771 Alta Vista, Memphis.

USS BRAINE (FHTNC) -- Midshipman Third Class Dan M. Nichols, son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Nichols of 320 Rinnells St., Dexter, Mo., is participating in a six - week Summer Training Cruise as a crewmember aboard the destroyer USS Braine operating in the Pacific Ocean.

During the cruise he will gain first - hand experience in navigation, gunnery, operations, seamanship and other facets of shipboard life essential to a naval officer.

Eighteen ships of the U.S. Pacific Fleet's Cruiser - Destroyer Force are participating in the midshipman training and are scheduled to visit west coast cities of both the U.S. and Canada.

Midshipman Nichols entered the University of Missouri in Columbia in 1966 and will be commissioned an ensign in the Navy upon graduate in 1971.

BLYTHEVILLE AIR FORCE BASE, ARK. -- A record crowd of 20,000 people from Blytheville, the surrounding area, Missouri, and Tennessee, visited Blytheville Air Force Bases' 1967 Annual Open House yesterday evening to make what base officials say, "the biggest Air Force one-day public event ever held in Northeast Arkansas."

Before the base gates were officially opened at 3:30 p.m., hundreds of cars lined the access road waiting to get in.

"We sponsor this event annually especially in the interest of our civilian neighbors to give them an accurate report on Air Force aerospace progress," said Colonel Eugene D. Minietta, 97th Bomb Wing commander. "This year's open house was certainly one of the better ones, if not the best we ever sponsored. We were all very pleased with the civilian turnout."

Highlighted by the world famous Thunderbirds, the United States Air Force official aerospace demonstration team, the event also had several other special attractions including the Strategic Air Command Drill Team, the Screaming Eagles sky divers from Fort Campbell, Ky., a judo demonstration and a four - plane minimum interval takeoff.

Special static displays of several types of aircraft and equipment remained on display throughout the 3 1/2 hour event.

"Crowd reception of every event was excellent," said Colonel Minietta.

Blytheville Mayor Tom Little headed a civilian dignitary delegation that included County Judge A. A. (Shag) Banks, Dr. John W. Hard, president of Blytheville's Chamber of Commerce, and Mr. Robert Wade.

FT. MCCLELLAN, ALA. (AHTNC) -- Private Janet E. Freeland, whose parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jack O. Holt, live on Route 2, Charleston, Mo., completed eight weeks of basic training at the Women's Army Corps Center, Ft. McClellan, Ala., June 30.

She received instruction in Army history and traditions, administrative procedures, military justice, first aid and field training.

U.S. ARMY, VIETNAM (AHTNC) -- Army Specialist Four Calvin Walker, 20, son of Mrs. Florence L. Coleman, Route 1, Bell City, Mo., is participating in "Operation Pershing" in Vietnam.

He and other members of the 1st Air Cavalry Division have evacuated more than 19,000 refugees from coastal areas to numerous refugee centers in secured areas as well as inflicting heavy damage on the Viet Cong.

During the search and clear operation, he was engaged in dragging the VC from their vast network of tunnels and bunkers. They had been driven underground by constant U.S. artillery and air strikes.

Spec. Walker, a message center clerk, is assigned to Headquarters Company of the division's 2nd Brigade.

I get along with my wife. Every morning I say, "Honey, I'm sorry." I haven't done anything, but it clears me for the rest of the day. Henny Youngman

Miss Universe Hopes Friends Will Forget

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) -- Sylvia Hitchcock hopes that when her reign ends and she returns to school her classmates will forget she was Miss Universe.

"Pratfaller by Sylvia," said the stunning 21-year-old brunette whose admirers say her smile convinced the judges she was the loveliest of the 56 contestants.

She will be a senior when she returns to the University of Alabama after her reign.

Sylvia, whose 5-foot-7 1/2 inches are packed neatly into a 35 1/2 - 24 1/2 - 36 1/2 frame, started life as a loser in beauty contests. She was the runnerup in a "Miss Smile" contest, a finalist in a teen-age beauty contest and usually a member of the court in high school beauty contests.

Sylvia edged out Venezuela's Mariela Perez Brangee for the crown. Third was England's Jennifer Lewis, followed by Finland's Ritva Helena Lehto and Israel's Batya Kabiri.

I was extremely negligent about writing to my mother while I was stationed in the States. When I was sent to Korea, I reported my safe arrival and my good luck in finding a Korean houseboy to do my chores.

Mother's next letter bore this postscript: "Give your houseboy an extra 25 cents and have him write your mother once a week for you."

ARMED FORCES

PANAMA CITY, Fla. -- Second Lieutenant Norman E. Shepard, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Shepard of R.R. 3, Sikeston, Mo., has been graduated at Tyndall AFB, Fla., from the training course for U.S. Air Force weapons controllers.

Lieutenant Shepard, trained to direct operation and maintenance of ground search and height finding radars, is being assigned to Tyndall. He is a member of the Air Defense Command which protects the U.S. against enemy air attack.

He was commissioned upon completion of Officer Training School at Lackland AFB, Tex., in 1967.

A 1961 graduate of Sikeston Senior High School, he attended the University of Missouri at Rolla. He received his B. A. degree in 1965 from Union University, Jackson, Tenn. He also studied at Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, Louisville, Ky. He is a member of Alpha Tau Omega.

His wife, Johnnie, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Tribble of 1771 Alta Vista, Memphis.

USS BRAINE (DEFTNC) -- Midshipman Third Class Dan M. Nichols, son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Nichols of 320 Russella St., Dexter, Mo., is participating in a six - week Summer Training Cruise as a crewmember aboard the destroyer USS Braine operating in the Pacific Ocean.

During the cruise he will gain first - hand experience in navigation, gunnery, operations, seamanship and other facets of shipboard life essential to a naval officer.

Eighteen ships of the U.S. Pacific Fleet's Cruiser - Destroyer Force are participating in the midshipman training and are scheduled to visit west coast cities of both the U.S. and Canada.

Midshipman Nichols entered the University of Missouri in Columbia in 1966 and will be commissioned an ensign in the Navy upon graduate in 1971.

BLYTHEVILLE AIR FORCE BASE, ARK. -- A record crowd of 20,000 people from Blytheville, the surrounding area, Missouri, and Tennessee, visited Blytheville Air Force Bases' 1967 Annual Open House yesterday evening to make what base officials say, "the biggest Air Force one-day public event ever held in Northeast Arkansas."

Before the base gates were officially opened at 5:30 p.m., hundreds of cars lined the access road waiting to get in.

"We sponsor this event annually especially in the interest of our civilian neighbors to give them an accurate report on Air Force aerospace progress," said Colonel Eugene D. Minietta, 97th Bomb Wing commander. "This year's open house was certainly one of the better ones, if not the best we ever sponsored. We were all very pleased with the civilian turnout."

Highlighted by the world famous Thunderbirds, the United States Air Force official aerospace demonstration team, the event also had several other special attractions including the Strategic Air Command Drill Team, the Screaming Eagles sky divers from Fort Campbell, Ky., a jato demonstration and a four - plane minimum interval takeoff.

Special static displays of several types of aircraft and equipment remained on display throughout the 3 1/2 hour event. "Crowd reception of every event was excellent," said Colonel Minietta.

Blytheville Mayor Tom Little headed a civilian dignitary delegation that included County Judge A. A. (Shag) Banks, Dr. John W. Hart, president of Blytheville's Chamber of Commerce, and Mr. Robert Wade.

FT. MCCLELLAN, ALA. (AHTNC) -- Private Janet E. Freeland, whose parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jack O. Holt, live on Route 2, Charleston, Mo., completed eight weeks of basic training at the Women's Army Corps Center, Ft. McClellan, Ala., June 30.

She received instruction in Army history and traditions, administrative procedures, military justice, first aid and field training.

U.S. ARMY, VIETNAM (AHTNC) -- Army Specialist Four Calvin Walker, 20, son of Mrs. Florence L. Coleman, Route 1, Bell City, Mo., is participating in "Operation Pershing" in Vietnam.

He and other members of the 1st Air Cavalry Division have evacuated more than 10,000 refugees from coastal areas to numerous refugee centers in secured areas as well as inflicting heavy damage on the Viet Cong.

During the search and clear operation, he was engaged in dragging the VC from their vast network of tunnels and bunkers. They had been driven underground by constant U.S. artillery and air strikes.

Spec. Walker, a message center clerk, is assigned to Headquarters Company of the division's 2nd Brigade.

I get along with my wife. Every morning I say, "Honey, I'm sorry." I haven't done anything, but it clears me for the rest of the day. Henny Youngman

Follow-up Study Of Graduates

JEFFERSON CITY --- Missouri's public high schools graduated 72,290 seniors in 1965, a search is about to be launched to locate some 36,000 of them.

The State Department of Education wants to know what these students are doing; if they followed through with their plans for the future schools. These data, he said, should provide insight into the effectiveness of school.

Commissioner Hubert Wheeler explained this week that the Missouri Department of Education is cooperating with a newly - formed committee consisting of prominent educators to conduct a statewide follow-up study involving some of the state's public high school graduates of 1965.

Why bother with such a survey -- why the class of '65? Wheeler had these answers:

"The State Department of Education, educators in many of our public school districts, personnel at our institutions of higher learning, other state departments of education and the U. S. Office of Education have found it apparent that a lack of information -- considered with such facts as increased school population, a great expansion in the field of education and rapid changes in the business world today -- emphasizes the need for a follow-up of our high school graduates."

Wheeler said that, primarily, a questionnaire would be utilized to gather the former seniors' information.

"In the near future," he said, the districts over the years, but "we will mail questionnaires to these were not coordinated and all school districts representing about 36,000 young men and women." The Commissioner State," noted that the Class of 1965 was chosen -- as opposed to 1964 -- because it was felt that the number of months involved (1965 to time of survey) would allow more comparative data and the questionnaire."

"Certainly, we don't expect ents if not convenient for the all of the students to respond to graduate) the questionnaires the questionnaire," Wheeler added, "we couldn't be that few which would then forward them to us. But we do hope to hear from the majority of them."

It was also explained that Missouri, like other states, is required to submit an Annual State Plan to the Department of Education, Health, Education and Welfare, in October.

Washington, D.C, in order to be eligible for federal school-aid funds.

"It should also be noted," Wheeler emphasized, "that the Vocational Education Act of 1963 gives the States the incentive to carry out such a statewide study as the one we are about to begin."

The Act specifies that the studies should be conducted by guidance staff with the assistance of other vocational personnel.

The Guidance Section of the State Department of Education will initiate the study, with assistance coming from the participating schools.

According to Wheeler, there have been "a few in some of the districts over the years, but the findings were not shared with the other schools across the state."

The Department of Education chosen -- as opposed to 1964 -- expects to complete the study in about six months. Questionnaires will be mailed to participating school districts no later than November 1, 1967.

The information would be made available to Education officers appointed to serve on the statewide follow - up advisory committee here.

Harold Reed, U. S. Office of Education, Washington, D.C., also is a member of the committee.
